

THE CATHOLIC UNIVERSITY OF AMERICA
PATRISTIC STUDIES
VOL. XIX

S. AMBROSII
DE HELIA ET IEIUNIO

A Commentary, with an Introduction
and Translation

A Dissertation

SUBMITTED TO THE FACULTY OF LETTERS OF THE CATHOLIC UNIVERSITY OF AMERICA IN PARTIAL FULFILLMENT OF THE REQUIREMENTS FOR THE DEGREE OF DOCTOR OF PHILOSOPHY

BY SISTER MARY JOSEPH ALOYSIUS BUCK
of
The Sisters of Charity of the Blessed Virgin Mary
Dubuque, Iowa

THE CATHOLIC UNIVERSITY OF AMERICA
WASHINGTON, D. C.

1929

Class

281.4

Book

Am 184.6

General Theological Seminary Library

CHELSEA SQUARE, NEW YORK

Purchased from the fund bequeathed to the Seminary by

EUGENE AUGUSTUS HOFFMAN, D. D.

DEAN 1879-1902

THE CATHOLIC UNIVERSITY OF AMERICA
PATRISTIC STUDIES
VOL. XIX

S. AMBROSII
DE HELIA ET IEIUNIO

A Commentary, with an Introduction
and Translation

A Dissertation

SUBMITTED TO THE FACULTY OF LETTERS OF THE CATHOLIC UNIVERSITY OF AMERICA IN PARTIAL FULFILLMENT OF THE REQUIREMENTS FOR THE DEGREE OF DOCTOR OF PHILOSOPHY

BY SISTER MARY JOSEPH ALOYSIUS BUCK
of
The Sisters of Charity of the Blessed Virgin Mary
Dubuque, Iowa

THE CATHOLIC UNIVERSITY OF AMERICA
WASHINGTON, D. C.

1929

THE CATHOLIC UNIVERSITY OF AMERICA
WASHINGTON, D. C.
1929

~~281.4~~

~~Am 18 h. h~~

87740

BR

65

,A313

H413

1929

YRABREZ GBT JEO

YRABREZ

YRABREZ

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

	PAGE
TABLE OF CONTENTS.....	iii
BIBLIOGRAPHY	vii
PREFACE	xiii
INTRODUCTION	1-43
I. TEXT	1
II. THE OCCASION AND DATE OF THE De Heliá	3
III. THE ARRANGEMENT AND SOURCES OF THE De Heliá	5
IV. SUMMARY ON THE VOCABULARY.....	12
V. SYNTAX	13
A. The Substantive	13
1. Concretes	13
2. Abstracts	14
3. Adjectives and participles used substantively.....	15
B. The pronoun	19
1. Demonstratives	19
2. Indefinite pronouns.....	20
3. Pronominal adjectives.....	20
C. Adjectives	21
1. Adjectives and participles used as substantives.....	21
2. Participles used as adjectives.....	21
3. The adjective for the genitive of the noun.....	21
D. Adverbs	22
1. Adverbs of interrogation.....	22
2. Adverbs of negation.....	22
3. Other adverbs.....	22

	PAGE
E. The Verb	23
1. Voice	23
2. Absolute use of the verb.....	24
3. Transitive verbs used intransitively.....	25
4. Intransitive verbs used transitively.....	25
5. Tenses	25
F. The Employment of cases without prepositions	26
1. The Accusative.....	26
2. The Dative.....	27
3. The Genitive.....	29
4. The Ablative.....	31
G. The prepositions	32
1. Prepositions governing the accusative.....	32
2. Prepositions governing the ablative.....	34
H. Nominal Forms of the Verb (Infinitive, Gerund and Gerundive, Participle and Supine).....	36
1. The Infinitive.....	36
2. Gerund and Gerundive.....	37
3. The Participle.....	37
4. The Supine.....	38
I. Particles	38
1. Copulative particles.....	38
2. Disjunctive particles.....	39
3. Adversative particles.....	39
4. Explicative or causal particles.....	40
5. Conclusive particles.....	40
J. The Syntax of Subordination	41
1. The indirect question.....	41
2. The use of quod to introduce clauses after verba declarandi et sentiendi	41
3. The final use of quo without a comparative.....	41
4. The use of ut	42
(a) Equivalent to explicative quod	42
(b) With indignum est	42

TABLE OF CONTENTS

v

	PAGE
5. The temporal use of quando	42
6. Conditional sentences.....	42
TEXT AND TRANSLATION.....	44
COMMENTARY	110
INDICES:
I. INDEX NOMINUM ET RERUM.....	221
II. INDEX VERBORUM ET LOCUTIONUM.....	223
III. INDEX LOCORUM.....	231

Digitized by the Internet Archive
in 2025

SELECT BIBLIOGRAPHY.

A. EDITIONS OF AMBROSE AND BASIL EMPLOYED.

- J. du Frische and N. le Nourry, Sancti Ambrosii Opera Omnia, 2 Vols. fol. Paris, 1686-1690 (The Benedictine Edition).
- Migne PP. L. XIV-XVII, Sancti Ambrosii Opera Omnia. Paris, 1845.
This Migne of 1845 was reprinted in 1866 and 1880-1882, but unfortunately these reprints do not correspond in their pagination to the edition of 1845, and they contain numerous typographical errors.
- The Vienna Corpus Edition of Ambrose, which is in course of publication.
So far the following works have appeared:
- Vol. 32, pars. I, fasc. 1: Exameron, de Paradiso, de Cain et Abel, de Noe. Ed. C. Schenkl, 1896.
- Vol. 32, pars I, fasc. 2: de Abraham, de Isaac, de Bono Mortis. Ed. C. Schenkl, 1896.
- Vol. 32, pars II: de Iacob, de Ioseph, de Patriarchis, de Fuga Saeculi, de Interpellatione Iob et David, de Apologia David, Apologia David Altera, de Helia et Ieiunio, de Nabuthae, de Tobia. Ed. C. Schenkl, 1897.
- Vol. 32, pars IV: Expositio Evangelii Secundum Lucam. Ed. C. Schenkl, 1902.
- Vol. 62, pars V: Expositio Psalmi CXVIII. Ed. M. Petschenig, 1913.
- Vol. 62, pars VI: Explanatio Psalmorum XII. Ed. M. Petschenig, 1919.
- J. Garnier and Pr. Maran, Sancti Basilii Opera Omnia. Paris, 1839. (The Second Benedictine Edition).
- Migne PP. G. XXIX-XXXII, Sancta Basilii Opera Omnia. Paris, 1885.

B. SPECIAL WORKS ON AMBROSE.

- Bartholomaeus, Frater, Divi Ambrosii Milleloquium Summam Totius Doctrinae Illius Ambrosii Sub Mille Titulis, Seu Generalibus Capitibus Ordine Alphabetico Digestis. Lugduni, 1556.
- Baunard, A., Histoire de St. Ambroise, Paris, 1871.
- Förster, T., Ambrosius Bischof von Mailand, Eine Darstellung seines Lebens und Wirkens. Halle, 1884.
- Huhn, J., Die Bedeutung des Wortes Sacramentum bei dem Kirchenvater Ambrosius. Münster, 1928. (This monograph was not accessible to me).
- Ihm, M., Studia Ambrosiana in: Jahrbücher für klassische Philologie, Supplementband 17, 1-124. Leipzig, 1890.
- Kellner, J. B., Der hl. Ambrosius, Bishop von Mailand, als Erklärer des Alten Testaments. Ein Beitrag zur Geschichte der biblischen Exegese. Regensburg, 1893.

- de Labriolle, P., St. Ambroise et l'exégèse allegorique, Annales de philos. chrét. 155 (1907) (1908), 591-603.
- , St. Ambroise. Paris, 1908.
- Malden, R. H., St. Ambrose as an Interpreter of Holy Scripture, in: Journal of Theological Studies, XVI (1915), 509-522.
- Niederhuber, J., Des heiligen Kirchenlehrers Ambrosius von Mailand Exameron, erstmals übersetzt von Dr. Joh. Ev. Niederhuber, nebst einer allgemeinen Einleitung über des hl. Ambrosius Leben, Schriften, u. Theologie, Vol. 17 in: Bibliothek der Kirchenväter. Kempten and Munich, 1914.
- Thamin, R., Saint Ambroise et la morale chrétienne au IV^e siècle. Paris, 1895.
- Wilbrand, W., Zur Chronologie einiger Schriften des hl. Ambrosius. Hist. Jhb. 41 (1921), 1-19.
- , S. Ambrosius quos auctores quaeque exemplaria in epistulis componendis secutus sit. Münster, 1909.

C. WORKS ON LANGUAGE AND STYLE.

- Adams, Sr. Miriam Annunciata, The Latinity of the Letters of Saint Ambrose. Washington, 1927.
- Archiv für lateinische Lexicographie und Grammatik; 15 vols. Leipzig, 1884-1908.
- Barry, Sr. Mary Finbarr, The Vocabulary of the Moral-Ascetical Works of Saint Ambrose. A Study in Latin Lexicography. Washington, 1926.
- Baxter, J. H., Notes on the Latin of St. Ambrose, in: Le Musée Belge. Vol. XXXII (1928), 97-107.
- Bayard, L., Le Latin de Saint Cyprian. Paris, 1902.
- Bernhard, M., Der Stil des Apuleius von Madaura. Ein Beitrag zur Stilistik des Spätlateins. Stuttgart, 1927.
- Bonnet, M., Le Latin de Grégoire de Tours. Paris, 1890.
- Christopher, J. P., S. Aurelii Augustini Liber de Cathéchizandis Rudibus. Translated with an Introduction and Commentary. Washington, 1926.
- Dräger, A., Historische Syntax der Lateinischen Sprache. 2nd ed. Leipzig, 1878-1881.
- Gabarrou, F., Le Latin d'Arnobé. Paris, 1921.
- Goelzer, H., Étude lexicographique et grammaticale de la latinité de St. Jérôme. Paris, 1884.
- , Le Latin de St. Avit. Paris, 1909.
- Guillemin, A., La Preposition "de." Dijon, 1920.
- Hagendahl, H., Studia Ammianea. Uppsala, 1921.
- Juret, A. C., Étude grammaticale sur le latin de S. Filastrius. Erlangen, 1904.

- Kaniecka, Sr. Mary Simplicia, Vita Sancti Ambrosii Mediolanensis Episcopi a Paulino eius notario ad Beatum Augustinum Conscripta. A Revised Text and Commentary, with an Introduction and Translation. Washington, 1928.
- Kaulen, Fr., Sprachliches Handbuch zur biblischen Vulgata, 2nd ed. Freiburg, i. B., 1904.
- Krebs-Schmalz, Antibarbarus der lateinschen Sprache, 7th ed. Basel, 1905-1907. (K.-Schm.).
- Kühner-Stegmann, Ausführliche Grammatik der lateinschen Sprache. 2nd ed. Hannover, 1912-1914. (K.-Steg.).
- Linderbauer, Benno, S. Benedicti Regula Monachorum, herausgegeben und philologisch erklärt. Verlag des Benediktinerstiftes. Mettin, 1922.
- Löfstedt, E., Beiträge zur Kenntnis der späteren Latinität. Uppsala Diss. Stockholm, 1907.
- , Philologischer Kommentar zur Peregrinatio Aetheriae, Untersuchungen zur Geschichte der lateinischen Sprache. Uppsala, 1911.
- , Spätlateinische Studien. Uppsala, 1908.
- Mannix, Sr. Dolorosa, Sancti Ambrosii Oratio de Obitu Theodosii: Text, Translation, Introduction and Commentary. Washington, 1925.
- Martin, J., Volkslatein, Schriftslatein, Kirchenlatein, Hist. Jhb. 41 (1921), 201-214.
- McGuire, M. R. P., S. Ambrosii de Nabuthae: A Commentary, with an Introduction and Translation. Washington, 1927.
- Meador, C. L., The Latin Pronouns, Is, Hic, Iste, Ipse. New York, 1901.
- Polheim, C., Die lateinische Reimprosa. Berlin, 1925.
- Riemann-Ernout, Syntaxe Latine, 7th ed., Paris, 1927.
- Rönsch, H., Itala und Vulgata. Marburg, 1875.
- Salonius, A. H., Vitae Patrum. Kritische Untersuchungen über Text, Syntax und Wortschatz der spätlateinischen Vitae Patrum. Lund, 1920.
- Souter, A., A Study of Ambrosiaster, in: Texts and Studies VII, 4. Cambridge, 1905.
- , Pelagius's Expositions of Thirteen Epistles of St. Paul: Introduction, in: Texts and Studies IX, 1. Cambridge, 1922.
- Stolz-Schmalz, Lateinische Grammatik, 5th ed., Munich, 1928. (St.-Schm.).
- Svennung, J., Orosiana: Syntaktische Semasiologische und Kritische Studien zu Orosius. Uppsala, 1922.
- Teeuwen, St. W. J., Sprachlicher Bedeutungswandel bei Tertullian. Ein Beitrag zum Studium der christlichen Sondersprache. Paderborn, 1926.
- Volkman, R., Die Rhetorik der Griechen und Römer. Leipzig, 1885.
- Weyman, C., Zu Ambrosius, in: Rheinisches Museum für Philologie, Vol. 64, 1909, pp. 328-329. (On De Helia, 6, 18 ineptis silvestribus).

D. LEXICA, CONCORDANCES, INDICES, AND WORKS ON SCRIPTURE.

- Bechis, M., Totius Sacrae Scripturae Concordantiae iuxta Vulgatae Editionis Exemplar. Turin, 1887.
- Benoist-Goelzer, Nouveau Dictionnaire Latin-Français, 9th ed., Paris, 1922. (B.-G.).
- Burkitt, F. C., The Old Latin and the Itala. Cambridge, 1896.
- Cooper, L. A., A Concordance to the Works of Horace. Washington, 1916.
- Cornely-Knabenbauer-De Hummelauer, Cursus Scripturae Sacrae.
- Forcellini-Corradini-Perin, Lexicon Totius Latinitatis. Padua, 1864-1887. (For.).
- Fügener, F., Lexicon Livianum, Vol. I (a-bustum). Leipzig, 1897.
- Georges, Ausführliches Handwörterbuch, 2 vols., Vol. I, 1913; Vol. II, 1918. Hanover and Leipzig.
- , Lexicon der lateinischen Wortformen. Leipzig, 1890.
- Harper's Latin Dictionary (Lewis and Short). New York, 1879.
- Howard, O. A. and Jackson, C. N., Index Verborum C. Suetoni Tranquilli Stilique Eius Proprietatum Nonnullarum. Cambridge (Mass.), 1922.
- Lagarde, Paulus de, Onomastica Sacra. Part 2. Hieronymi interpretationis hebraicorum nominum. Gottingae, 1870.
- Merguet, H., Lexikon zu Vergilius. Leipzig, 1912.
- , Handlexikon zu Cicero. Leipzig, 1905.
- , Lexikon zu den Reden des Cicero, 4 vols. Jena, 1877-1884.
- Mooney, G. W., Index to the Pharsalia of Lucan, in: Hermathena, Vol. XLIV, Dublin-London, 1927.
- Neue-Wagener, Formenlehre der lateinischen Sprache, 3rd ed., Leipzig, 1892-1905.
- Quicherat, L., Thesaurus Poeticus Linguae Latinae, 32nd ed., Paris, (without date).
- Sabatier, P., Bibliorum sacrorum Latinae versiones antiquae seu vetus Italica, 3 vols. (bound in six). Paris, 1751.
- Smith, W. and Cheetham, S., A Dictionary of Christian Antiquities, Vol. I, 1876; Vol. II, 1880. Hartford, Conn.
- The International Critical Commentary on the Holy Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments*.
- Thesaurus Linguae Latinae*, Vols. I-IV, V (to dolor), VI (to gemo). Leipzig, 1900 ff. (T. L. L.).
- Thielmann, Ph., Die lateinische Übersetzung des Buches Sirach, Archiv VIII, 501-561.
- Vigouroux, F., Dictionnaire de la Bible, 5 vols. Paris, 1903-1912.
- Walde, A., Lateinisches Etymologisches Wörterbuch, 2nd ed., Heidelberg, 1910.
- Wetmore, M. N., Index Verborum Vergilianus. New Haven, 1911.
- Wilbrand, W., Die Deutungen der bibl. Eigennamen beim h. Ambrosius, in: Biblische Zeitschrift, Vol. 10 (1912), 337 ff.

E. OTHER WORKS.

- Bardenhewer, O., Geschichte der Alt-kirchlichen Litteratur, Vol. II, 2nd ed., Freiburg-i-B., 1914. Vol. III, ibid., 1912.
- Blümner, H., Römische Privat-Altertümer (Mueller Handbuch IV, 2, II). Munich, 1911.
- Cabrol-Leclercq, Dictionnaire d'archéologie chrétienne et de liturgie. Paris, 1907 ff.
- Christ-Schmid-Stählin, Griechische Literaturgeschichte, Zweiter Teil, Zweite Hälfte (von 100 bis 530 nach Christus), 6th ed., Munich, 1924.
- Daremberg-Saglio, Dictionnaire des antiquités grecques et romaines. Paris, 1873-1919.
- Dill, S., Roman Society in the Last Century of the Western Empire, 2nd ed., London, 1899.
- Dirking, A., S. Basilii Magni de divitiis et paupertate sententiae quam habeant rationem cum veterum Philosophorum doctrina. Münster, 1911.
- Friedländer, L., Darstellungen aus der Sittengeschichte Roms in der Zeit von August bis zum Ausgang der Antonine, 7te Aufl., Leipzig, 1901. This work is translated into English under the title: Roman Life and Manners under the Early Empire. 4 vols. London and New York, 1908-1913.
- Jordan, H., Geschichte der althristlichen Literatur. Leipzig, 1911.
- Lot, F., La Fin du Monde Antique et le Debut du Moyen Âge. Paris, 1927.
- Mayor, J. E. B., Thirteen Satires of Juvenal, Vol. I, 2nd ed., 1872 (last reprint 1901), Vol. II, 2nd ed., 1878 (last reprint 1900). London, 1900-1901.
- Pauly-Wissowa, Realencyclopädie der klassischen Altertumswissenschaft. Stuttgart, 1894 ff.
- Rauschen, G., Jahrbücher der Christlichen Kirche unter dem Kaiser Theodosius Dem Grossen. Freiburg-i-B., 1897.
- Schanz, M., Römische Litteraturgeschichte, Vol. IV, I, 2nd ed., Munich, 1914.
- Seeck, O., Geschichte des Untergangs der antiken Welt, 5 vols. (Vol. I, 3rd ed. 1910; Vols. II-V, 1901-1913). Berlin, 1901-1913.
- Seipel, I., Die wirtschaftsethischen Lehren der Kirchenväter (Vol. 18, in: Theologische Studien der Leo-Gesellschaft). Vienna, 1907.
- Tillemont, Mémoires pour servir à l'Histoire Ecclésiastique, Vol. X. Paris, 1705.
- Walpole, A. S., Early Latin Hymns with Introduction and Notes. Cambridge, 1922.
- Wissowa, G., Religion und Kultus der Römer (Müller Handbuch V, 4). Munich, 1902.

PREFACE

Among the shorter works of St. Ambrose there are three, namely, the De Helia et Ieiunio, the De Nabuthae, and the De Tobia which are so similar in construction, subject matter, and style that they may be said to form a trilogy. These three works are directed in common against flagrant social evils and vices in the last half of the fourth century. Thus, the De Helia attacks chiefly the evil of intemperance, the De Nabuthae, avarice and luxury, the De Tobia, usury. Hence they have a peculiar historical interest, because of the light which they throw on the society of the period. Furthermore, since their subject matter is presented in a highly imaginative and vivid manner, they may lay claim to some literary significance. On the whole one may truthfully say that these three works belong to the relatively small number in the Ambrosian Corpus that still offer strong appeal to modern readers.

Now despite the fact that the literary and historical interest of these treatises have long been recognized by scholars, strangely enough, only one so far has received adequate attention, namely the De Nabuthae edited with a translation and commentary by McGuire as Vol. XV in the Patristic Studies of this University. The De Helia and *De Tobia*¹ have never been studied systematically up to the present, and have never been translated, so far as I can discover, into any modern language. It is the purpose of my dissertation, then, to meet in part at least the need felt here by editing the De Helia with an introduction, translation and commentary. As regards the general arrangement of my dissertation I have on the whole followed the edition of the De Nabuthae of McGuire as my model. This similarity in the presentation of my material, it is hoped, will be of special advantage to those who may wish to make a parallel study of the De Helia and De Nabuthae from any point of view.

My text is that of Schenkl in the Vienna Corpus with such changes as are noted in the Introduction. In my translation I have attempted above all to render the thought of Ambrose as accurately as possible. All Scriptural quotations agreeing with the Vulgate are rendered according to the Douai Version. Wherever Ambrose translates the Greek or employs the Old Version, I have rendered such quotations so far as possible in the Douai phraseology.

¹ An edition of the De Tobia is being prepared for the Catholic University Patristic Series.

While the study of language has been especially stressed, other aspects have not been neglected. All Biblical quotations have been compared with the Greek, the Old Version, and the Vulgate, and all differences and similarities pointed out. I have verified all references given by Schenkl to parallels in St. Basil and other writers, and I have noted a considerable number of further parallels myself. All references to the political, social and religious life of the age are treated with more or less detail.

In my study of the vocabulary of the De Helia I have noted all words that do not occur, or occur only rarely or with changed meaning in Classical Latin. In my treatment of syntax I have discussed all usages not occurring or occurring rarely in Classical Prose. My study of vocabulary is based so far as possible on the Thesaurus Linguae Latinae, and then chiefly on Georges and Benoist-Goelzer. My study of syntax is based essentially on the recently revised edition of Stolz-Schmalz, and then on Kühner-Stegmann, Riemann-Ernout, and the various monographs on Late Latin. As the material on the syntax in the Commentary is more or less isolated I have presented this material in a systematic manner in the Introduction. In order to avoid a great deal of repetition I have merely given in the Introduction a brief summary of the character of the vocabulary employed in the De Helia. Detailed treatments in the Commentary of individual words can easily be found through the Index Verborum. I have not judged it necessary to treat the figures in the De Helia in any formal or detailed manner. The influence of the rhetoric of his age upon Ambrose, and his own peculiarities in the employment of the chief rhetorical devices, have already been quite systematically treated by Adams in her study of the Latinity of Ambrose's Letters, pp. 115-126. Furthermore I have not attempted to treat the clausulae, although their presence is obvious in the De Helia. As little has been done on the Ambrosian clausulae, they are really a subject for a detailed and systematic investigation in themselves.

The following terms have been used to designate the various periods of Latin: Early = all Latin before Cicero; Classical = the prose of the golden age; Silver = the Latin from the death of Augustus to the death of Suetonius; Late = all Latin from Apuleius on. In citing Latin authors in the commentary, I have followed the system employed in the Index Librorum Scriptorum Inscriptionum to the Thesaurus Linguae Latinae. All the references in the Introduction to the Commentary are made to section and note; all references in the Commentary to the Introduction are made to pages. In referring to Basil a double system is used: the first number refers to the pages in Migne P. G. vol. 31 (1885); the second to the columns in vol. II of the second Benedictine edition.

I wish to take this opportunity of expressing my best thanks to Professor Roy J. Deferrari, Ph. D., Head of the Department of Greek and Latin, who suggested the study and guided its development, and to Dr. Martin R. P. McGuire, Instructor in Latin and Greek, who gave me valuable and generous assistance at all times in its preparation. I wish also to thank the Reverend Romanus Butin, Ph. D., Professor of Semitic Languages, for his careful reading and criticism of my manuscript. Lastly, I desire to express my deep gratitude to the Superiors and members of my Community who have made the present investigation possible.

SISTER MARY JOSEPH ALOYSIUS.

March 19, 1929.

DE HELIA ET IEIUNIO.

I. THE TEXT.

For my text I have adopted that of Schenkl in the Vienna Corpus (Vol. 32, 2, pp. 411-465), with only such changes as I have found necessary through the identification of a number of Scriptural quotations hitherto not noted, and through the correction of typographical errors. Furthermore, I have made a few changes in punctuation. In enumerating the changes which I have made I shall refer to Schenkl's pages. In enumerating the Scriptural passages not noted by Schenkl, I shall present first the direct quotations which he failed to note; and then a list of obvious allusions which should have been noted by him in accordance with his practice in this regard. P. 413, l. 4: the words non defecit hydria polenta should be italicised as they are quoted directly from 3 Kings, 17, 16 (Old Version reading; cf. Sect. 2, n. 20, of the Commentary). P. 414, l. 4: esca autem eius erat locustae et mel silvestre should be italicised as a direct quotation from Matth. 3, 4. P. 416, ll. 3-4: the words plantavit . . . paradisum should be italicised as they are quoted directly from Gen. 2, 8 (Old Version); ll. 4-5: the passage posuit ibi hominem operari et custodire eum, an exact rendering of the Greek, Gen. 2, 15, should be italicised. P. 418, l. 17: as the words vineam and plantavit are taken directly from Gen. 9, 20 they should be italicised. P. 423, l. 1: the words Daniel, vir desideriorum, should be italicised as they are quoted directly from Dan. 10, 3 and 11. P. 427, ll. 4-5: the words induebatur purpura et bysso et epulabatur cottidie splendide quoted directly from Luc. 16, 19 should be italicised; ll. 5-6: the words cuius ad ianuam Lazarus ille mendicus iacebat plenus ulceribus should be italicised as a direct quotation from Luc. 16, 20; ll. 6-7: as the words cupiens saturari ex his quae de mensa cadebant divitis correspond to Luc. 16, 21 (Old Version) they should be italicised (cf. Sect. 27, n. 3 of the Commentary). P. 428, l. 4: the words omnibus diebus viduitatis suae should be italicised as they are quoted directly from Judith 8, 6. P. 434, l. 6: the passage lava faciem tuam taken directly from Matth. 6, 17 should be italicised. P. 446, ll. 5-6: the passage habitavit in terra Naid should be italicised as a direct quotation from Gen. 4, 16 (Old Version). P. 448, l. 2: the words quia deserta est civitas Iazer should be included in the Scriptural quotation. P. 457, l. 4: for the quotation cantate domino . . . omnis terra, the reference should be made to Psalm 95, 1 and not to Psalm 95, 2 as given. P. 461, ll. 17-18: for the quotation veniat regnum tuum . . . et in terra, the reference should be made to Matth. 6, 10 and not Matth. 6, 19 as given.

Allusions not noted by Schenkl are: P. 414, l. 2: for the passage in hac virtute et spiritu Heliae reference should be made to Luc. 1, 17. P. 416, l. 17: for nudatos se esse cognoverunt, allusion should be made to Gen. 3, 11. P. 418, l. 4: for the words elimosyna a peccato liberant, the reference should be to Tob. 4, 11, and not to Tob. 4, 10 as given. P. 420, ll. 6-7: for the passage Iohannes neque manducans panem neque bibens vinum, reference should be made to Matth. 11, 18. P. 421, l. 12: for the words Annam non manducantem exaudivit dominus reference should be made also to 1 Kings 1, 13 (Old Version; cf. Sect. 17, n. 3, of the Commentary). P. 423, l. 2: for the expression missus in lacum . . ., reference should be made to Dan. 10, 2. P. 427, l. 8: for the words ut extremum digiti . . . incendio, reference should be made to Luc. 16, 24. P. 428, l. 2: for the passage Olopherni principi militiae regis Assyriorum, reference should be made to Iudith 5, 1; ibid. 13, 19. P. 433, ll. 6-7: for the passage oleum laetitiae . . . prae . . . consortibus, allusion should be made to Psalm 44, 8. P. 434, l. 10: for the words noli hanc exterminare faciem, allusion should be made to Matth. 6, 16. P. 435, l. 18: for the passage prandebat Daniel inter ieunantes leones the reference should be to Dan. 14, 32, and not to Dan. 6, 22 as given. P. 437, ll. 1-2: for the passage si quis eorum pugno fuerit percussus reference should be made to Exod. 21, 18. P. 443, l. 9: for the expression quid in libro sermonum Esaiæ scriptum est, reference should be made to Luc. 3, 4. P. 444, ll. 7-8: for the passage praeterieram . . . citharam . . . adhiberi, reference should be made to Is. 5, 12; l. 17: for the passage omnem potum qui inebriat siceræ nomine vocant, reference should be made to Lev. 10, 9. P. 445, ll. 20-21: for the expression vae siceram mane sectantes reference should be made to Is. 5, 11. P. 448, l. 10: for the words quia ad imaginem et similitudinem dei facti, reference should be made to Gen. 1, 26. P. 451, l. 22: for the expression per maris Rubri transibant semitam, allusion should be made to Num. 14, 25. P. 456, l. 1: for the words non introivit in negotiationem, reference should be made to Ezech. 28, 16 and 18. P. 460, l. 7: for the expression superiora obliviscens . . ., reference should be made to Phil. 3, 13. P. 461, ll. 12-13: for the passage etsi disperdis orbem terrarum, reference should be made to Is. 13, 5. P. 463, ll. 4-5: for the passage ubi Helias super altare ligna inposuit, reference should be made to 3 Kings 18, 22. P. 439, l. 6: in place of Schenkl's prolusoriis I have adopted the Benedictine reading praelusoriis. P. 424, l. 6: for iteneris, read itineris. P. 464, ll. 3-4: for convevitur, read convenitur.

II. THE OCCASION AND DATE.

The De Helia et Ieiunio is a treatise against the evil of drinking and eating to excess which, as we know from many sources, was very flagrant in the last half of the fourth century. The work thus forms a companion piece to the De Nabuthae and De Tobia, which are directed respectively, against the vices of avarice and usury, also rampant at this time. Like many of the works of Ambrose, the De Helia is made up of material originally presented in sermon form; the sermon origin in the present instance being clearly indicated in the treatise itself.¹ It seems reasonably certain that the sermons on "Elias and Fasting" were given their present treatise form shortly after they were delivered.

As regards the date of composition of the De Helia, we know from the work itself that it was presented in its sermon form at least at the beginning of Lent. This is indicated by the general content and specifically by a passage in the first chapter of the treatise.² The treatise contains no indication, however, of the year of its composition except that, in so far as an allusion is made to the custom of singing hymns in the Church of Milan³—a custom introduced around Easter, 386—, it is certain that the De Helia in its original sermon form must have been composed after the year mentioned. Tillemont⁴ and the Maurists⁵ on the basis of the passage in De Helia 17, 62: 'Bibamus' inquiunt. 'opto salutem imperatorum,' concluded there were several emperors in Italy at the time of composition of the work, and accordingly assigned the latter to the period after the death of Maximus in 389. Schenkl⁶ interpreted the plural imperatorum as referring to Theodosius and Valentinian and hence set the terminus ad quem before the death of Valentinian in 392. There is nothing, however, in the passage or its context to indicate that the author had in mind only emperors in Italy; on the contrary, the passage is obviously to be taken in a general sense. As Rauschen⁷ correctly points out, as long as there were several emperors in the Empire, men certainly both drank to and prayed for their general health; and they addressed their petitions to the emperors, and not to the individual emperors.

¹ Cf. De Helia, 15, 53; 19, 70; 21, 77.

² Cf. 1, 1: veniet igitur nobis dies sollemnitatis et iam adpropinquat . . . simul nobis et certamen imminet et victoria repromittitur. victoria nostra crux Christi est, tropaeum nostrum pascha est domini Iesu . . . certamen nostrum ieiunium est.

While, therefore, as regards the dating of the work, we can be certain only of our terminus a quo, i. e. after 386, there is one good reason for assigning it to the years 387-390. The De Helia like its companion pieces the De Tobia and De Nabuthae leans heavily on the homilies of St. Basil for its source material. Now as Wilbrand,⁸ after a careful examination of the works of Ambrose composed from sermon material which he had borrowed from the homilies of St. Basil, points out, the influence of the homilies of St. Basil upon St. Ambrose would seem to fall between the years 385-390. Hence the date of composition of the De Helia may be assigned with some probability at least to the period 387-390.

³ Cf. De Helia, 15, 55: piis hymni dicuntur, et tu citharam tenes? psalmi canuntur. et tu psalterium sumis aut tympanum?

⁴ Mémoires, X, 292.

⁵ Migne, 14 (1882), 730-731.

⁶ C. S. E. L. XXXII, II, p. xiii-xiv.

⁷ Jahrbücher der christlichen Kirche, pp. 273-274.

⁸ Wilbrand, W., Zur Chronologie einiger Schriften des hl. Ambrosius, Hist. Jahrbuch, 41 (1921), p. 19; cf. also Ihm, Studia Ambrosiana, p. 20; McGuire, pp. 4-6.

III. THE ARRANGEMENT AND SOURCES OF THE De Helia.

As already pointed out by the Benedictine editors in their Admonitio, the De Helia falls quite clearly into three divisions or parts. Whether these parts correspond to the original sermons of which the treatise is composed cannot of course be definitely determined. In general structure otherwise the treatise does not differ essentially from similar works in the religious literature of the age. A short tabular analysis of the work will help to bring out sharply the plan and general content.

PART I (Sections 1-40): On Fasting, particularly on the Lenten Fast.

1. Preparation for Easter by fasting: Victoria nostra crux Christi est; tropaeum nostrum pascha est Domini Iesu. certamen nostrum ieiunium est. (Ch. I.)

2. Magna virtus est ieiunii. Examples of Christ and Elias.—No need of treating of Elias in detail: *sed de Heliae gestis plurimam frequenti diversorum librorum sermone digessimus.*¹ (Ch. 2-3.)

3. Origin and antiquity of fasting: primus usus mundi a ieiunio coepit. Adam's violation of law of abstinence. Examples of fasting and abstinence on the part of Noe, Abraham, Moses, Eliseus, Daniel. (Ch. 4-7.)

4. Benefits of fasting. Contrasted with opposite vices. Example of Lazarus and Dives. Triumphs of Judith and Esther occasioned by fasting. Various benefits and praises of fasting. (Ch. 8-9.)

¹ St. Ambrose, as he states here, mentions Elias at some length in many of his works. Cf. e. g., the following instances in works written before 390: off. 2, 4, 14; epist. 38, 7; Nab. 12, 50; ibid. 15, 64; and especially in Luc. 1, 36; ibid. 8, 96; vid. 1, 3; ibid. 3, 14. Furthermore it should be noted that if Ambrose is the author of the so-called Hegesippus—written about 367-375—he undoubtedly wrote much on Elias in the lost work mentioned in the prologue of the Hegesippus: quattuor regnorum libros, quos scriptura complexa est sacra, etiam ipse stilo persequutus usque ad captivitatem Iudaeorum murique excidium et Babylonis triumphas historiae in morem composui.

5. Mystica mensa (i. e., the Holy Eucharist) ieiunio comparatur. The kind of fast acceptable to God. Hypocrisy strongly condemned; as also self-glorification: noli ergo te iactare cum ieiunas, noli gloriari, ne nihil tibi prosit ieiunium. Proper spirit exemplified by Elias, Eliseus, John, and Daniel. (Ch. 10-11.)

PART II (Sections 41-68): Invective against the Vice of Drunkenness. (From the literary point of view the most interesting and important part of the De Helia. St. Ambrose rivals Juvenal in the terrible vividness of his descriptions).

1. Drunkenness and its evil consequences among the lower classes. (Ch. 12.)

2. Drunkenness among the rich and powerful—example of Polemon cited. (Ch. 12.)

3. Flagrant drunkenness at banquets of the soldiers. The elaborate discipline and rules of drinking. (Ch. 13.)

4. Etiam maior vis vini, quam veneni est. The dangers of wine. Enumeration of evils attendant upon drunkenness. (Ch. 14-17.)

5. Drunkenness of women and attendant evils. Terrible punishment of Israelites for intemperance. (Ch. 18.)

PART III (Sections 69-85): Invective against Avarice and Luxury based chiefly upon Isaias XXIII.

1. Isaias' denunciation of luxury. The sinfulness and vanity of luxury and avarice. The example of Tyre. (Ch. 19-20.)

2. Avoid sin. Magnum medicum invenimus, magnam medicinam gratiae eius accepimus. Redeem yourself by good works.

3. The destruction of the world and its justification. (Ch. 21.)

4. Athletae sumus in quodam stadio decernimus spiritali. Like good athletes we should train for the contest and not fear the dust and heat. Our reward is Christ: Veni ergo, Domine Iesu, admitte victores in requiem. (Ch. 21.)

5. Final warning against drunkenness. (Ch. 22.)

6. Exhortation to catechumens against postponing Baptism. Omne tempus opportunum ad indulgentiam. dum differs gratiam, mors adpropinquat. The lesson of the sacrifice of Cain and Abel. (Ch. 22.)

The following sources employed by St. Ambrose in composing the De Helia deserve special mention: The Bible, St. Basil, Origen, Xenophon, Diogenes Laertius, and the Classical Latin authors. The Bible is the principal source. As is well known St. Ambrose quotes Scripture more copiously perhaps than any other of the great Christian writers, and the present work contains an extraordinarily large number of direct quotations from both Old and New Testament. Furthermore, a careful examination has revealed a great many paraphrases of Scriptural passages and Scriptural allusions. As all certain direct quotations and certain allusions are indicated clearly in my text of the De Helia, there is no need of discussing them here. In my chapter on the Text I have called attention to a number of direct quotations and allusions not noted by the earlier editors.

In the De Helia—as in the De Nabuthae, De Tobia, and many other works—St. Ambrose draws heavily on St. Basil for source material. This indebtedness to Basil, although already pointed out by the Benedictine editors,² received its first adequate treatment from Schenkl, who in his edition has carefully noted most of the borrowed passages. These together with a number of others which I have discovered myself I have incorporated into my Commentary. Three homilies of St. Basil furnish material for the De Helia. These are: the περὶ νηστείας (Homilia I, II, De Ieiunio); the κατὰ μεθύοντων (Homilia XIV, In Ebriosos); and the Προτρεπτικὴ εἰς τὸ ἅγιον βάπτισμα (Homilia XIII, In Sanctum Baptisma). As Schenkl notes in his preface,³ the De Ieiunio is utilized throughout Part I and once in Part II (Sections 1-40 and 68); the In Ebriosos, throughout Part II (Sections 41-68); and the In Sanc- tum Baptisma, occasionally in Part III (in Sections 79-84). It should be observed here that he is indebted to St. Basil for most of the striking descriptions which are contained in Part II of the De Helia. So far as I have been able to judge he follows no fixed method in his treatment of this source material. He now translates literally, now paraphrases, now combines elements of the original in a different order, now condenses, now amplifies. He simply adapts the borrowed material to suit his own immediate purposes.

² Cf. the Admonitio to their edition of the De Helia.

³ C. S. E. L., Vol. XXXII, Pars II, p. xviii.

From Origen come the ideas on calix aureus Babylon (Sect. 56 ff.) and the interpretation of Naid (Sect. 58). This has been well brought out by Klostermann⁴ in his study of Origen's Homilies on Jeremiah. Schenkl⁵ refers the interpretation of Naid to Philo, but in the light of the evidence presented by Klostermann, Origen would certainly seem to be the immediate source. A first hand acquaintance with Xenophon, it seems, furnished the thought on sexual indulgence mentioned in Sect. 59.⁶ Whether the story of Polemon related in Sect. 45 was taken directly from Diogenes Laert. IV, 3, 16, cannot be determined.

Lastly, the De Helia contains a number of echoes and imitations of the Classical Latin authors, chiefly, Cicero, Vergil, and Horace. I shall present the more important of these imitations here. Obviously some of the examples listed may be questioned, but as Ambrose was certainly familiar with the Latin Classics to an extraordinary degree, in many instances their influence is unmistakable.

⁴ Cf. E. Klostermann, Die Überlieferung der Jeremiahomilien des Origen, in: Texte und Untersuchungen zur Gesch. d. altchrist. Lit., N. F., Vol. I (1897), Heft 3, pp. 60-61. The pertinent passages from Origen's Hom. in Ier. 21, 7 ff. (Migne, P. L. XXV, 602 ff.), and from the De Helia, are presented in parallel columns.

⁵ C. S. E. L., Vol. XXXII, II, p. xviii.

⁶ Cf. Schenkl's discussion of this passage in C. S. E. L., Vol. XXXII, I, p. xv; ibid., XXXII, II, p. xviii.

Echoes from the Writers of Early, Classical, and Silver Latin Noted in the De Helia et Ieiunio.

De Helia et Ieiunio.

- | | |
|--|---|
| Plaut. Asin. 187: (piscis) nequam est, nisi recens. | 8, 24: ubi piscis recentior. |
| Plaut. Rud. 940: turbida tempestas heri fuit. | 8, 24: heri, inquit, tempestas, hodie procella. |
| Plaut. Capt. 848: vigilans somniat; id. Amph. 697: quaene vigilans somniat; id. Pseud. 386: non qui vigilans dormiat. | 16, 60: vigilantes somniant. |
| Ter. Phorm. prol. 32: quom per tumultum noster grex motus locost. | 17, 64: loco motus habetur. |
| Lucr. 6, 572: terra inclinatur retroque recellit. | 16, 60: nutat his terra, subito erigi et inclinari videtur. |
| Lucr. 6, 405: quid undas arguit et liquidam molem camposque natantis? | 19, 71: meos fluctus, negotiator, arguis. |
| Cic. Phil. 2, 105: natabant pavimenta vino. | 8, 25: mundant pavimenta vino madida. |
| Cic. frag. apud Quint. 8, 3, 66: humus lutulenta vino spinis cooperta piscium. | 8, 25: spinis cooperta piscium. |
| Cic. fin. 2, 90: idque Socratem, qui voluptatem nullo loco numerat, audio dicentem, cibi condimentum esse famem, potionis sitim. | 9, 32: condimentum cibi ieiunium est. |
| Cic. orat. 60: imago animi vultus, indices oculi. | 10, 37: index enim facies plerumque est conscientiae. |
| Cic. Pis. 1: qui sermo quidam tacitus mentis est. | 10, 37: tacitus sermo mentis. |

De Helia et Ieiunio.

- Cic. Verr. I 26, 66: poscunt maioribus poculis; cf. Hor. sat. 2, 8, 35; et calices poscit maiores. 13, 47: poscunt maioribus poculis.⁷
- Cic. Verr. 5, 28: alius inter manus e convivio tamquam e proelio auferretur, alius. 13, 49: ex ea (mensa) vulnerati omnes ac saucii tamquam de harena exeant.
- Cic. Mur. 36, 75: stravit pelli- 15, 55: accubitus festinant sternere, lagynas argenteas auro-culis haedinis lectulos et ex-posuit vasa Samia. tos calices exponunt.
- Cic. Cael. 29, 70: quae lex ad 17, 63: patriae statum, salutem imperium, ad maiestatem, ad statum patriae, ad salutem omnium.
- Cic. de orat 2, 171: avaritiam si 19, 69: luxuria ipsius est mater tollere vultis, mater eius est tollenda luxuries. avaritiae.
- Cic. Cluent. 62, 175: cum vagus 19, 70: longius tu vagus et exul et exul erraret atque undique exclusus. errares.
- Cic. rep. 1, 34, 51: sorte ductus. 19, 70: sorte ductus.
- Cic. epist. 3, 4, 2: voluntates 22, 83: mentem gratia copulat.
nostras copulandas.
- Verg. georg. 3, 527: non illis 3, 5: repositae epulae.
epulae nocuere repostae.
- Verg. Aen. 1, 706: qui dapibus 6, 18: mensas onerabat.
mensas onerent; georg. 4, 133: dapibus mensas onera-bat inemptis. Cf. Commentary.

⁷ Noted by Schenkl.

De Helia et Ieiunio.

- Verg. Aen. 3, 244: semesam 16, 59: semesas epulas.
praedam.
- Verg. Aen. 8, 692: montes con- 16, 60: concurrentibus monticurrere montibus altos. bus.
- Verg. Aen. 1, 154: fragor 16, 60: maris fluctuantis fragor pelagi; id. georg. 3, 338; et resonantia fluctu litora.
litoraue alcyonem resonant.
- Hor. sat. 2, 1, 86: solventur risu 10, 35: solvatur risu.
tabulae; cf. Val Max. 4, 3, 5:
multum risu solvit.
- Hor. carm. 1, 33, 3: miserabiles 12, 43: miserabiles epilogos dedecantes elegos. cantare.
- Hor. sat. 2, 6, 62: ducere sol- 19, 70: sollicita vita.
licitae iucunda oblivia vitae?
- Hor. carm. 1, 1, 5-6: palmaque 21, 78: evehit corona victorem.⁸
nobilis Terrarum dominos evehit ad deos.
- Hor. carm. 1, 1, 4: sunt quos 21, 79: ibi colligitur pulvis, ubi curriculo pulverem Olympi- palma proponitur.⁹ cum Collegisse iuvat.
- Hor. epist. 1, 1, 50-51: magna 21, 80: nemo iterum nitidus coronari contemnat Olympia, coronatur, pulverulentum decui spes, Cui sit condicio dul- cet victoria.
cis sine pulvere palmae?
- Ov. trist. 4, 1, 34: materiam 5, 13: materia peccati.
culpaе persequiturque suae.
- Liv. 1, 4, 2: quia deus auctor 4, 7: culpaе agnovit auctorem.
culpaе honestior erat; id. 21, 11, 6: auctorem culpaе et reum criminis.

⁸ Noted by Schenkl.⁹ Noted by Schenkl.

De Helia et Ieiunio.

- | | |
|--|---|
| Liv. 9, 5, 10: sine vulnere, sine ferro, sine acie victos. | 13, 50: sine pugna interfectos, sine hoste turbatos, sine senectute tremulos. |
| Lucan 9, 770: membra natant sanie; id. 7, 728: vidit satis arva natare sanguine. | 8, 25: ita sanguine omnia natant. |
| Lucan 5, 556: instabili gressu. | 16, 60: instabilis gressus. |
| Quint. decl. 305, p. 198, 22: constituit ante oculos spec-taculum. | 15, 57: constitue ante oculos. |

IV. VOCABULARY.

In the Commentary I have treated all words that do not occur or occur only rarely in Classical Latin. Furthermore, all changes in meaning deviating from the Classical usage have been carefully noted. From a study of the vocabulary of such a relatively short work as the De Helia no conclusions can be drawn in regard to the vocabulary of St. Ambrose in general. However, it may be stated that the results of my study of the vocabulary in the present work agree very closely with the results obtained by other workers in the language of St. Ambrose. In the De Helia et Ieiunio St. Ambrose reveals himself a purist, showing a thorough knowledge of and a predilection for the language of the Classical and Silver authors. The other investigators have pointed out that St. Ambrose is no innovator in language, a fact corroborated further by my investigation of the present treatise which does not contain any words at all of Ambrosian coinage.¹ Ambrose is also conservative in his use of diminutives—as the other investigators in his works have noted. In the De Helia, only puerulus and servulus appear—both Classical.

Partly through the influence of his reading in the Classical and

¹ For the De Nabuthae, McGuire (17) notes only two new words; Barry (270-274) lists very few for the Moral Ascetical Works; Adams (129) in her study of the Letters agrees with the conclusions of Barry; Mannix (21) notes that no new words were coined by Ambrose in the De Obitu Theodosii.

Silver poets and partly through the influence of his own imaginative nature, St. Ambrose's vocabulary in the present work, as in many of his other works, has that peculiar poetical coloring which has been discerningly pointed out by Baxter.²

Lastly, the vocabulary here and there shows unmistakably also the influence of St. Ambrose's early training and experience in the public administration; he seems perfectly familiar with the technical language of Roman Law. While the legal aspects of his language are beyond the scope of my present work, I might note here that this phase of his vocabulary in general would be well worth a thorough investigation, in spite of the difficulties which such an investigation would entail.

V. SYNTAX.

In the Commentary I have discussed a number of syntactical deviations from the Classical norm in the order of their occurrence in the text. As they are thus more or less isolated, it is my purpose to present them here in a systematic manner, and, furthermore, to take up a number of points in syntax which best admit of treatment here because of their application to the De Helia as a whole rather than to any part of it. To avoid repetition, wherever I have discussed a construction in the Commentary I shall refer the reader to the latter for details.

A. The Substantive.

1. Concretes.

(a) Singular for Plural.

altare, Sect. 2, n. 7; Sect. 34; Sect. 83. Cited first in Petronius.

² "Perhaps the most striking characteristic of the style of Ambrose is its color poeticus. Augustine is on the whole very prosaic and pedestrian, Jerome is lively and forceful, but Ambrose is full of color and movement, poetical reminiscence and rich imaginativeness. Yet he is one of the easiest authors to comment upon: he repeats the same idea, occasionally in the same words, and when he does find a picturesque term, he is apt to overwork it." Cf. J. H. Baxter, Notes on the Latin of St. Ambrose, in: Le Musée Belge XXXII (1928), p. 98.

cervicem, Sect. 83, n. 18. Largely Poetic, Silver and Late.
latebra, Sect. 7, n. 12. Usually in the Plural in Classical Latin.

2. Abstracts.

Though Ambrose coins no new abstracts in the present work, the following list shows that, like his literary contemporaries, he employs abstracts copiously. I shall note here only such abstracts in the De Helia as are not found or found rarely in Classical Latin.

(a) Substantives in—tas.

ariditas, Sect. 2, n. 18. Varro, Pliny, and Late.
diversitas, Sect. 32, n. 14. The Plural cited first for Florus and Apuleius. ebrietas, Sect. 10, n. 4, passim. Cicero (once), otherwise Poetic, Silver, and Late. infecunditas, Sect. 17, n. 4. Sallust, Columella, Pliny, Tacitus and Ambrose. impuritas, Sect. 75, n. 4. The Plural cited for Cicero, Ambrose, and Salv. gub. iuventas, Sect. 22, n. 15; Sect. 50. Poetic in Class. Latin. possibilitas, Sect. 4, n. 14. Late Latin. sinceritas, Sect. 76, n. 12. Silver and Late. sobrietas, Sect. 4, n. 8. Used by Sen. and Val. Maximus, then by Late writers.
soliditas, Sect. 20, n. 3. First in Vitruvius. sollemnitas, Sect. 1, n. 10; Sect. 29; Sect. 78. Late Latin. sterilitas, Sect. 17, n. 1. Cicero, Silver, and Late.
venustas, Sect. 32, n. 5. The Plural cited for Plautus and Gellius. vilitas, Sect. 73, n. 3. Silver and Late.

(b) Substantives in—tio (-sio).

absolutio, Sect. 1, n. 23. Late Latin.
adeptio, Sect. 68, n. 11. Cicero, Quintilian, and Late. aspersio, Sect. 18, n. 5. Cicero (once) and Late Latin. commonitio, Sect. 35, n. 14. Quintilian before Late Latin. condemnatio, Sect. 2, n. 15. Cicero, Jurists, and Late.
conpunctio, Sect. 80, n. 2. Late and mostly Eccl.

corruptio, Sect. 76, n. 13. Cicero, Tacitus, and Late.
distentio, Sect. 5, n. 14. Late and rare. indevotio, Sect. 62, n. 2. Late Latin. licitatio, Sect. 24, n. 17. Cicero, Suetonius, and the Jurists. moderatio, Sect. 61, n. 7. Ciceronian. perfunctio, Sect. 32, n. 9. Cicero and Ambrose. persecutio, Sect. 30, n. 3. Eccl. Latin.
potatio, Sect. 45, n. 1. The Plural cited only for Plautus, Apuleius, and later writers.
praelatio, Sect. 11, n. 4. Val. Maximus (once), then Late writers. praevaricatio, Sect. 7, n. 6; Sect. 40; Sect. 67. Eccl. Latin. purificatio, Sect. 22, n. 11. Silver and Late. refectio, Sect. 4, n. 2. Silver and Late.
transfretatio, Sect. 70, n. 4. Gellius, Vegetius, Augustine, and Ambrose (the present instance).

(c) Substantives in—tia.

flagrantia, Sect. 79, n. 26. Cicero and Late.
ignorantia, Sect. 10, n. 2. Cicero (twice), Caesar (once), then Silver and Late. impatientia, Sect. 41, n. 1. Silver and Late. impudicitia, Sect. 75, n. 5. Early, Silver, and Late.
insipientia, Sect. 28, n. 5; Sect. 59. Plautus, Cicero, and Eccl. substantia, Sect. 4, n. 1. First in Quintilian. temulentia, Sect. 11, n. 10; Sect. 43. Silver and Late. tolerantia, Sect. 79, n. 28. Only for Cicero (once) before Silver and Late Latin.

(d) Substantives in—tudo.

amaritudo, Sect. 15, n. 2; Sect. 18; Sect. 39. Varro, Silver, and Late writers. inquietudo, Sect. 23, n. 11; Sect. 71. Late Latin.

3. Adjectives and participles used substantively.

The substantival use of the adjective and participle is rather limited in Early Latin and Classical Prose. The Classical usage may be summarized as follows:¹

(a) Persons. The singular, confined practically to the Gen. and Acc. cases, is rare. The plural, particularly in the Nom. and Acc., is more frequent.

(b) Things. For the expression of an abstract idea, the neuter singular of the second declension may be employed in the Nom. or Acc. The plural, which is used more frequently, is confined for the most part to the Nom. and Acc.

As early as Sallust we find a decided trend toward this substantial use of the adjective and participle, which increases in frequency from Livy on and becomes extended to all genders, numbers, and cases. Ambrose, like all later writers, shows a marked fondness for this usage as can readily be discerned from the list of the examples following. Wherever instances have been treated in the Commentary, reference is made to section and note.

Adjectives and participles used substantively:

(1) Masculine Singular.

In the Nom.:

- ebriosus*, Sect. 28.
- ignobilis*, Sect. 44.
- infirmus*, Sect. 44; Sect. 68.
- iustus*, Sect. 10, n. 17.
- mendicus*, Sect. 44.
- natalis*, Sect. 24, n. 15.
- pauper*, Sect. 44, n. 1.
- sapiens*, Sect. 67.
- temulentus*, Sect. 45.

In the Gen.:

- ebriosi*, Sect. 53.
- propinqui*, Sect. 82.
- sapientis*, Sect. 36.

¹ I am indebted to McGuire for this summary of the Classical usage. For a full discussion of the various factors entering into the development and extension of this usage in the Silver and Classical Latinity, cf. St.-Schm., pp. 455-458.

In the Dat.:

diviti, Sect. 44.honorato, Sect. 44.locupleti, Sect. 44.

In the Acc.:

alienum, Sect. 14.divitem, Sect. 27, n. 1.immundum, Sect. 82.inpium, Sect. 30.

(2) Masculine Plural.

In the Nom.:

barbari, Sect. 43 ; Sect. 54.bibentes, Sect. 44 ; Sect. 48.dormientes, Sect. 60.electi, Sect. 34, n. 7.luxuriosi, Sect. 36 ; Sect. 69.pasti, Sect. 69.potentes, Sect. 28, n. 6 ; Sect. 29.victi, Sect. 49.vigilantes, Sect. 60.

In the Gen.:

temulentorum, Sect. 43, n. 12 ; Sect. 58 (and numerous other adjectives and participles).

In the Dat.:

fatigatis, Sect. 78.ieiunantibus, Sect. 40.inpiis, Sect. 2.piis, Sect. 55.prudentibus, Sect. 40.quaerentibus, Sect. 55.temulentis, Sect. 53.

In the Acc.:

dormientes, Sect. 24.luxuriosos, Sect. 72.mendicos, Sect. 42.

plurimos, Sect. 19; Sect. 70.

victos, Sect. 80.

volantes, Sect. 23.

In the Abl.:

ab alienis, Sect. 66.

(3) Feminine Singular.

In the Abl.:

calida, Sect. 48, n. 10.

frigida, Sect. 25, n. 5.

(4) Neuter Singular.

In the Nom.:

dulce, Sect. 38, n. 3; Sect. 39.

forte, Sect. 39, n. 5.

interfectorium, Sect. 37, n. 17.

In the Acc.:

concavum, Sect. 65, n. 4.

indictum, Sect. 7, n. 10.

in futurum, Sect. 40.

in publicum, Sect. 66.

inventum, Sect. 10, n. 17.

mirum, Sect. 10, n. 9; Sect. 65; Sect. 68.

superfluum, Sect. 35, n. 13; Sect. 61.

In the Abl.:

amaro, Sect. 38, n. 2.

deserto, Sect. 40, n. 3.

medio, Sect. 16; Sect. 19.

(5) Neuter Plural.

In the Gen.:

praesentium, Sect. 22; Sect. 40.

supernorum, Sect. 5, n. 5.

In the Acc.:

diversa, Sect. 24; Sect. 53.

divina, Sect. 8, n. 5.

primitiva, Sect. 85, n. 16.

secreta, Sect. 66, n. 3.

terrena, Sect. 2, n. 14.

reliqua, Sect. 3.

minora, Sect. 53.

In the Abl.:

de sequentibus, Sect. 85, n. 19.

gestis, Sect. 5, n. 1.

ineptis, Sect. 18.

in inferioribus, Sect. 16.

in superioribus, Sect. 16.

B. The Pronoun.

Though most of the deviations from the Classical use of the pronoun in the present work have been referred to in the Commentary, it seems best to summarize all such divergences here. On the whole, in the De Helia, Ambrose seems to be rather careful in his use of the pronouns. I have noted only the following divergences from the Classical norm:

1. Demonstratives.

ipso = eodem, Sect. 4, n. 16.

iste = is or ille, Sect. 10.

istius = huius, Sect. 24; Sect. 73; Sect. 80, n. 9.

isti = illi, Sect. 35; Sect. 47.

ista = illa, Sect. 71.

These peculiarities—the extension in meaning of ipse, the replacing of hic by iste and ille, the decline in the use of idem—are all common to the Latin of the fourth century and are striking in the De Helia only in so far as they occur with relative infrequency. For an adequate treatment of these pronouns in Late Latin in general, the reader is referred to Stolz-Schmalz (473-481), where the results of all the important investigations to 1927 are now incorporated. The table below, illustrating the occurrence of the demonstratives in the De Helia, and the accompanying notes, will prove useful for a comparison with the data furnished by McGuire (21-22) and Adams (51-57) on the pronominal usage in Ambrose.

THE DEMONSTRATIVES IN THE DE HELIA ET IEIUNIO.

	IS			HIC			ISTE			IPSE			ILLE			IDEM
	Masc.	Fem.	Neut.	Masc.	Fem.	Neut.	Masc.	Fem.	Neut.	Masc.	Fem.	Neut.	Masc.	Fem.	Neut.	Masc.	Fem.	Neut.
Singular
Nom.	1	1	1	2	6	7	1	2	.	14	4	.	12	3	1	2	.	1
Gen.	11	1	1	3	1	1	3	.	.	.	.	.	2	1	.	.	.	.
Dat.	3	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	2	.	.	.	.	.
Acc.	9	2	.	3	5	9	.	.	1	2	.	.	5	4	2	.	.	.
Abl.	2	1	4	3	3	2	.	.	.	3	1	3	2	.	.	.	.	.
Plural
Nom.	.	.	.	1	.	.	2	1	.	5	.	.	2	5	3	.	.	.
Gen.	3	.	1	2	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.
Dat.	.	.	.	6	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	2	10	.	.	.	.	.
Acc.	5	.	2	3	1	3	.	.	1	.	2	1	.	.	4	1	.	2
Abl.	1	.	1	3	1	1	.	.	.	1	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.

NOTES. The Nom. sg. neut. of is appears only in the expression id est, which occurs but once in the De Helia. The Nom. sg. neut. of hic appears seven times, five of which are in the expression hoc est.¹ The form huius occurs only in the following stereotyped phrases: huiusmodi (twice); huiuscemodi (once); huius saeculi (once); vitae huius (once). The form istius appears twice in the stereotyped phrases istius modi and mundi istius (cf. Sect. 80, n. 9).

2. Indefinite pronouns.

nullus = nemo, Sect. 22; Sect. 44; Sect. 84. This use of nullus appears in Early, Silver, and Late Latin.²

3. Pronominal adjectives.

alius = alter, Sect. 17. This use of alius for alter occurs already in Plautus, but becomes frequent only in Late Latin.³

¹ It is interesting to note that Ambrose—contrary to other Late writers—seems to employ hoc est far more frequently than id est. Cf. the figures given by McGuire (22) for the De Nabuthae and several other works of Ambrose.

² Cf. St.-Schm. 489.

³ Cf. St.-Schm. 491.

C. Adjectives.

1. Adjectives and participles used as substantives. Cf. Syntax A. 3.

2. Participles used as adjectives. The following non-Classical examples have been noted:

(a) Perfect Passive.

defuncti, Sect. 31, n. 7. Silver and Late.

ordinatam, Sect. 46, n. 10. Cicero, Nepos, Seneca, and Late.

repositae, Sect. 5. Poetic and Late.

sacratae, Sect. 54. Poetic, Silver, and Late.

subdita, Sect. 76. Late.

(b) Present.

fumigans, Sect. 16, n. 4. Gellius and later writers.

nitentes, Sect. 46.

redundantis, Sect. 3, n. 7. Eccl. Latin.

refrigerantis, Sect. 19. Late.

supereffluentes, Sect. 48, n. 11. Late.

3. The adjective for the Gen. of the noun.

The use of an adjective to denote origin and family relations in place of a possessive genitive already appeared in Early Latin, and the usage was certainly extended and became widespread in the colloquial language. Hence it is not surprising to find the adjective used very frequently in Late Latin in place of the possessive genitive.⁴

A number of instances of this use of the adjective have been noted in the De Helia, and Adams in her study of Ambrose's Letters points out that he reveals a marked fondness for the usage. However, it should be observed that in many instances (e. g. in the use of diabolicus, dominicus, propheticus, apostolicus) the usage had already become stereotyped in Eccl. Latin before his time.

Adjectives for the Gen. of the noun noted in the De Helia.

vas apostolicum, Sect. 57, n. 4.

quaestionis diabolicae, Sect. 1, n. 23.

⁴ Cf. St.-Schm. 393; Salonius 179 ff.

dominica dies, Sect. 69.

dominica(m) (diem), Sect. 34, n. 4.

sabbato legitimo (= Legis), Sect. 69, n. 6.

abstinentiae propheticae, Sect. 18, n. 7; Sect. 20.

propheticae adnuntiationis, Sect. 73.

fletu prophetico, Sect. 61.

propheticum dictum, Sect. 23.

senilis (= senis), Sect. 22, n. 14.

incendia Sodomitana, Sect. 12.

D. Adverbs.

1. Adverbs of interrogation.

numquid = num, Sect. 79, n. 8.

2. Adverbs of negation.

(a) nec = ne . . . quidem. This usage, which occurs, however, but once (Sect. 10) in the present work, is characteristic of the Silver and Late Latinity.⁵

(b) non = ne. In the present work there are only four instances (Sect. 57; Sect. 75; Sect. 82; Sect. 85). This use of non for ne in a prohibition appears probably for the first time in Ter. Andr. 787; then in Scipio frg. Gell. 418, 3. The first certain example in Classical Prose appears in Cic. Cluent. 115, and then from Livy on. The usage, however, only becomes frequent in Late Latin.⁶

3. Other adverbs.

(a) magis = potius. Though this usage is common in Ambrose, I have noted only two instances in the present work; Sect. 2, n. 3, and Sect. 12, n. 3.

(b) The use of saepe and frequenter. As all Late writers, Ambrose employs frequenter as a synonym of saepe, showing a slight preference for its use in the present work. On the gradual extension in the use of frequenter at the expense of saepe, cf. the valuable table in the T. L. L. (VI 1302, 29-49) illustrating the parallel usage of the two words in representative writers from Cato to the Vulgate.

⁵ Cf. St.-Schm. 641.

⁶ Cf. St.-Schm. 573-574.

(c) In his employment of quasi, sicut, velut, ut, and tamquam, Ambrose shows a preference for quasi and especially tamquam.

(1) quasi occurs 9 times:

- a. Introducing a clause with the subjunctive. (twice). Cf. Sect. 8, and Sect. 60.
- b. With a noun. (5 times). Cf. Sect. 48; Sect. 75, etc.
- c. With an adjective. (twice). Cf. Sect. 27; and Sect. 76, n. 9.

(2) tamquam occurs 16 times:

- a. Introducing a clause with the subjunctive. (twice). Cf. Sect. 24; and Sect. 49.
- b. With a p. p. p. (twice). Cf. Sect. 9; and Sect. 50.
- c. With a present participle (once). Cf. Sect. 1, n. 11.
- d. With a noun. (5 times). Cf. Sect. 19; Sect. 50, etc.
- e. With an adjective, or with an adjective used substantively (4 times). Cf. Sect. 8; Sect. 77, etc.
- f. With phrases (twice). Cf. Sect. 23, and Sect. 64.

(3) sicut occurs 6 times.

- a. With a clause (three times). Cf. Sect. 43, Sect. 38, Sect. 72.
- b. With ellipsis of the verb. Sect. 41.
- c. With a noun. Sect. 60.
- d. With a pronoun. Sect. 60.

(4) velut occurs 4 times, and is used only with nouns. Cf. Sect. 1, Sect. 37, etc.

(5) ut occurs three times, all with nouns. Cf. Sect. 51 and Sect. 63.

E. The Verb.

1. Voice. Ambrose, like other Late writers, employs the passive much more frequently than writers of the Classical period. Attention should be called particularly to his fondness for the use of the impersonal passive. The following instances occur in the De Helia:

certandum est, Sect. 79; certatur . . . decernitur, Sect. 48; consurgitur, Sect. 43; contenditur, Sect. 79; convenitur, Sect. 84; cursatur, Sect. 55; declaratum est, Sect. 6; disputatur, Sect. 26; pervenitur, Sect. 4; praeluditur, Sect. 47; prandendum est, Sect. 46; esse surgendum, Sect. 48; consurrectum fuerit, Sect. 50.

2. Absolute use of the verb. The absolute use of the verb in Classical Latin is restricted chiefly to special usages in the language of public business, war, and religion.⁷ In the Silver and Late Latin the absolute use of verbs became much extended. Hence it is not surprising to find the phenomenon common in Ambrose. In tabulating the absolute use of verbs in the De Helia, I shall follow the system of classification employed by McGuire (24-25) in his edition of the De Nabuthae.

(a) Transitive verbs used absolutely, i. e., without their direct complement in the Acc.

abscondere. Sect. 9: maesto abscondit affectu.

cogere. Sect. 51, n. 8: cogis ad mortem.

differre. Sect. 84: nemo differt.

donare. Sect. 75, n. 16: qui semel donavit.

ebibere. Sect. 65: non ut ebibant.

ecferre. Sect. 51, n. 8: ecferre vis ad sepulchrum.

effundere. Sect. 65: sed effundant.

excusare. Sect. 84: nullus excusat;

“ “ Sect. 85: nonne hoc dicit qui excusat a baptisate?

exhaurire. Sect. 50: exhauriant et exhauriri ut bibant.

exigere. Sect. 84: sed iam exigit.

extenuare. Sect. 9: extenuat paenitendo.

invitare. Sect. 51, n. 8: invitas ad prandium.

liberare. Sect. 9: ieiunium et elemosyna a peccato liberant.

pascere. Sect. 24: pascit inquit, dominus meus.

rogare. Sect. 51, n. 8: rogas ad iocunditatem.

subscribere. Sect. 79: subscripsisti ad competitionem coronae.

tegere. Sect. 9: tegit abstinencia, tegit gratia.

terrere. Sect. 41: impatientiae exempla non terrent.

⁷ Cf. St.-Schm. 378; cf. also 546.

(b) Intransitive verbs used absolutely, i. e., without the usual complements employed to complete their meanings.

abundare. Sect. 27: abundat.

3. Transitive verbs used intransitively.

mendicare. Sect. 27, n. 8: qui mendicabat.

4. Intransitive verbs used transitively, i. e., with a direct complement in the Acc. These will be treated under the discussion of the Acc. case.

5. Tenses.

(a) The indicative. In the De Helia there are no exceptional divergences from the Classical usage in the employment of the simple tenses.

(b) The subjunctive. I have noted no special peculiarities in the employment of the tenses of the subjunctive.

(c) The imperative. There is one instance of the second form of the imperative employed quite synonymously with several of the first form. Cf. Sect. 79, n. 15.

(d) The infinitive. Ambrose shows no divergences from the Classical norm in his use of the tenses of the Inf. In his use of the P. P. P. the following peculiarities should be noted:

positus = ŏv, Sect. 27, n. 4.

constituti = ŏvres, Sect. 81.

(e) Compound tenses. In keeping with the general usage of Late Latin, Ambrose frequently employs *fuera*m, fuero, etc., to form the compound tenses, in place of the more usual Classical eram, ero. On the development of this usage of *fuera*m and fuero in forming the compound tenses in Latin, cf. St.-Schm. 561-562 and 564. I have noted the following instances in the De Helia:

*consummata*e fuerint, Sect. 48.

consurrectum fuerit, Sect. 50.

fuerint fraudati, Sect. 65.

impletus fuerit, Sect. 26.

inebriati fuerint, Sect. 27.

mersi fuerint, Sect. 53.

fuerit percussus, Sect. 43.

supergressus fuerat, Sect. 4.

fuerat strangulatus, Sect. 1.

F. The Employment of the Cases (without Prepositions).

1. The Accusative.

- (a) As the direct complement of verbs. On the great extension in the transitive use of verbs, a phenomenon peculiarly characteristic of the later Latinity, cf. the convenient summary of the development of this usage given by McGuire (27), and especially St-Schm. 376-378. The following verbs are used transitively in the De Helia, but are not so used, or are so used rarely, in Classical Prose.

adnuntiare, Sect. 1, n. 12; and Sect. 14, n. 1. Silver and Late.

ascendere, Sect. 4, n. 19; Sect. 10, n. 14. Poetic, Silver, and Late.

auctionari, Sect. 24, n. 12. Quint. and Late.

erubescere, Sect. 73, n. 7. Ps. Cic. in Sall., Verg., and Prop., before Silver and Late Latin.

incidere, Sect. 22, n. 18. Plin., Apul., and later writers.

ingredi, Sect. 78, n. 11; Sect. 79. This use of ingredi is much restricted in Classical Latin.

nescire, Sect. 6. Poetic, Silver, and Late.

praeoptare, Sect. 38, n. 1. First in Livy.

praevenire, Sect. 55, n. 3. Sall., Liv., and later writers.

- (b) The use of two Accusatives. Only one instance of this usage need be noted. Cf. Sect. 28: induct se scissa vestimenta insipientiae. se induere with Acc. of the thing is Late Latin. Cf. Sect. 28, n. 5, for details.

- (c) The Accusative of Specification. (Greek Acc.).

The employment of the Accusative of Specification is found in Latin poetry as early as Ennius and for the most part seems to have developed in Latin under Greek influence. While the construction is avoided in Classical Prose except in Sallust and Bellum Africanum—Cicero, Caesar, and Nepos avoid it entirely and it is extremely rare in Livy—it is very common in the Augustan Poets. This poetical influence makes itself felt in the Silver and Late Prose, although it is interesting to note that Pliny the Younger and Quintilian do not employ the Accusative in this manner. It is a favorite construction with Ambrose.⁸ It should be observed, however, that most of the instances occurring in his works have their prototypes in the Classical and Silver Poetry.⁹ The following examples occur in the De Helia:

(1) With participles.

Sect. 20: membra duratus.

Sect. 35, n. 2: circumfusus genas. (Noted also by Baxter.)

Sect. 46, n. 5: lumbos suffulti. (Noted also by Baxter).

Sect. 66, n. 9: scissae amictus (Vergil).

(2) With adjectives.

Sect. 43: ora saucium.

Sect. 66, n. 9: nudae lacertos (Vergil).

2. The Dative.

- (a) The use of the Dat. with transitive compounds where in Classical Prose a preposition with its proper case is employed. The spread of this use of the Dat. is a phenomenon of Poetry and Silver and Late Latin. For a complete development of this use of the Dat., cf. St.-Schm. 411-412. I have noted only three examples in the De Helia of the usage, all with transitive compounds.

⁸ Cf. J. H. Baxter, Notes on the Latin of St. Ambrose, in: Le Musée Belge, Vol. XXXII (1928), p. 105, for numerous examples from the works of Ambrose.

⁹ Cf. St.-Schm. 379.

dirigere, Sect. 1, n. 17. Cited for Vergil (twice), Sen., Bell., Drac., Baudon., Apon.

infundere, Sect. 49, n. 6; Sect. 51. Cited first for Sen.

- (b) Final Dative. The final Dat. begins with Plautus and is found throughout the whole period of Latinity. While on the whole its use in the Classical Language is restricted to a relatively small number of words and phrases, in the Silver and especially the Late Latinity, its usage becomes steadily extended. Cf. St.-Schm. 418-419. As Baxter¹⁰ has noted, it is a favorite construction in Ambrose. The following examples occur in the De Helia.

Sect. 20: in adamantis rigorem abstinentiae soliditate membra duratus non patuit vulneri. patere with the Dat. cited only for, Livy, Pliny, and Celsus. Cf. Sect. 20, n. 4.

Sect. 32: quae adsiduitate fastidio sunt. (Noted also by Baxter.)

Sect. 43: ut factor ebrietatis horrori sit. (Noted also by Baxter.)

Sect. 81: advertimus igitur in stadio constituti quantis aut delectationi aut dolori erimus. (Noted also by Baxter.)

Sect. 70: temeritas humana a sibi est ipsa discrimini. (Noted also by Baxter.)

Sect. 55: vino et sicerae surgamus.

Sect. 85: expectas ut vivas saeculo postea te reservas deo. The Dat. with reservare is Ciceronian. Cf. Georges, s. v. From another point of view the last two examples might be taken under the Dative of interest proper.

- (c) Dative of Interest. While the Dat. of interest with its various shadings, is found throughout the whole period of ¹⁰ For valuable lists of examples of the final Dat. in Late Latin, particularly in Ambrose, cf. J. H. Baxter, Some Predicate Datives in Latin, in: Bulletin du Cange, Vol. II (1925), pp. 85-88; id., Notes on the Latin of St. Ambrose, in: Le Musée Belge, Vol. XXXII (1928), pp. 106-107.

Latinity and hence is a common syntactical phenomenon, it should be observed that it undergoes a considerable extension in use in Late writers.¹¹ As Ambrose, e. g., shows a special fondness for this construction it will be useful to present here the instances I have noted in the De Helia. The reader will thus be able to get a definite idea of the freedom and peculiar stamp of Ambrose's employment of this Dative.

Sect. 11: manebat antequam vinum inveniretur omnibus inconcussa libertas.

Sect. 16: populo manducanti praevaricatio sacrilega luxu accendebatur epulantium.

Sect. 40: ieiunantibus epulae volant, prandentibus pedes vacillant: ieiunantibus . . . manna descendit, epulantibus culpa praevaricationis ascendit.

Sect. 50: cernas iuvenes terribilis visu hostibus.

Sect. 72: in aqua illis seges pullulat.

Sect. 72: in qua quicumque seminaverit fructus ei caelestes orientur.

- (d) Dative of Agent. While the use of the Dat. of agent is restricted in Classical Latin, it becomes greatly extended in the Silver and later Latinity. Ambrose uses the construction frequently, even with the simple tenses of the verb.¹² I have noted the following instances of the dative of agent in the De Helia:

Sect. 35: hominibus magis quam deo cupientes probari.

Sect. 45: subnixus meretricibus.

Sect. 55: piis hymni dicuntur.

3. The Genitive.

- (a) With adjectives. In the present work the adjectives governing the Gen. involve the idea of separation. Though this usage appears already in Early Latin, its development

¹¹ Cf. St.-Schm. 414 ff.

¹² Cf. St.-Schm. 417; and for Ambrosian usage, Adams p. 27; McGuire pp. 29 and 152.

is prominent only in the Augustan Poets and Late Prose writers.¹³ It should be noted, however, that Ambrose¹⁴ is conservative in his employment of this Gen. construction, as the examples listed all occur in the Classical Prose or Poetry.

exors, Sect. 49, n. 4. Cited first for Vergil.

immunis, Sect. 49, n. 5. Cicero and Vergil before Late writers.

vacuum, Sect. 78, n. 12. Cited for: Plaut., Ter., Sall., Verg., Hor., Ov., Tac., Apul., and Late writers. (Baxter notes vacuus with the Gen. for Ambr. hex. 5, 17, 57; Iac. 2, 5, 23; Abr. 2, 11, 81; epist. 19, 21.)

- (b) With substantives. Throughout the Silver and Late Latinity we note a steadily increasing frequency and extension in the employment of the Gen. with substantives. This growth and development was inevitable because of the constantly increasing tendency to employ abstract nouns and expressions. While it is no longer necessary to seek for the explanation of many Late Gen. constructions in the dominating influence of Greek, and particularly of the Hebrew through the Greek and Ecclesiastical writers, since it is now clear that almost all of these so-called Graecisms and Hebraisms have their prototypes either in the Classical or Silver Latinity, it should be noted, however, that the influence of similar Gen. constructions in the Greek and Hebrew undoubtedly contributed to their relatively greater frequency in the Eccl. writers in general.¹⁵

As compared with other Late writers, Ambrose would seem to be remarkably conservative in his use of the Gen. in the De Helia. I shall list here the only divergences from the Classical norm which I have noted.

¹³ Cf. St.-Schm. 403-406.

¹⁴ For further examples of the Gen. with adjectives in Ambrose, cf. Baxter, Notes on the Latin of St. Ambrose in: Le Musée Belge, Vol. XXXII (1928), pp. 103-104; Adams, The Latinity of the Letters of St. Ambrose, pp. 22-23; McGuire, St. Ambrosii De Nabuthae, p. 30.

¹⁵ Cf. St.-Schm. pp. 387-409; particularly pp. 390-400.

- (1) The use of the Gen. of an abstract noun in place of the corresponding adjective. This usage which is common in Late Latin occurs already in Silver writers.¹⁶ I have noted only one instance of this type of Gen. in the De Helia:

Sect. 62: pompa ludibri.

We should perhaps list here also the type ¹⁷ poculo mortis, already occurring in Cicero Cluent. 31.

Sect. 51: poculum furoris.

Sect. 55: ebrietatis potum.

- (2) Genitive of identity (Genitivus inhaerentiae). This Gen. of the type ira furoris, crudelitas saevitiae, occurring already in Catullus, Lucretius and Propertius, only becomes common in Vitruvius, and especially in Apuleius and later writers. I have noted only two instances of this type of the Gen. in the De Helia.

Sect. 2: ros pluviae.

Sect. 62: piae devotionis obsequium.

- (3) Genitive of quality without an attributive adjective.¹⁸ All instances noted are Scriptural, cf. e. g.:
Sect. 1: dies sollemnitatis.

- (4) Partitive Genitive. Only one instance requires noting:
Sect. 84: adhuc esse temporis.

This use of the partitive Gen. with ubi, adhuc, etc., is colloquial. Although citing the close parallel adhuc locorum for Plautus, the grammars and lexica do not seem to cite the present phrase. For the history of this use of the partitive Gen., cf. St.-Schm. pp. 388-390.

4. The Ablative.

In the use of the Abl. in the De Helia, Ambrose confines himself for the most part to Classical usage. Only the following instances deviate from the Classical norm. For discussion and bibliographical references, cf. notes in Commentary.

¹⁶ Cf. St.-Schm. p. 395 b

¹⁷ Cf. St.-Schm. 395 b.

¹⁸ For discussion and bibliographical details, cf. Sect. 1, n. 10.

(a) Abl. of time with preposition in.

Sect. 1: in diebus laetitiae suae. Cf. Sect. 1, n. 6.

Sect. 1: in numeniis suis.

Sect. 9: in diebus ieiuniorum vestrorum.

Sect. 10: in principio generis humani.

(b) Abl. to express duration of time.

Sect. 2: tribus annis et sex mensibus. Cf. Sect. 2, n. 10.

Sect. 30: quae triduo ieiunavit.

Sect. 34: quadragesima totis . . . diebus.

Sect. 34: die et nocte meditare.

Sect. 84: tribus annis et sex mensibus.

(c) Simple Ablative with:

abstinere. Cf. Sect. 7, n. 14.

degenerare. Cf. Sect. 32, n. 8.

G. The Prepositions.

The gradual development in the use and extension in the meaning of the prepositions is a common characteristic of the Silver and Later Latinity.¹⁹ The divergences from the Classical norm which I have noted in the De Helia are listed below. Wherever I have treated of a usage in detail in the Commentary, I shall refer merely to Sect. and note.

1. Prepositions governing the accusative.

ad.

(a) Local use.

(1) With verbs of motion.

Sect. 23: deponit ad mortem, Varro, Silver, and Late.

Cf. Sect. 23, n. 7.

¹⁹ Cf. K.-Steg. II 1, 488 ff.; and especially St.-Schm. p. 494 ff.

Sect. 10: effudit ad vitium. effundere ad for in is cited only for Liv. 44, 31; 34, 6. Cf. K.-Schm. s. v. and the lexica.

The use of ad with dicere may best be treated here.

Sect. 74: dictum est . . . ad illum . . . populum.

This usage is chiefly Eccl., under the influence of analogous Greek constructions. Cf. K.-Schm. s. v. dicere; Goelzer (Jérôme), 329; and especially T. L. L. V 988, 51-56.

(b) Temporal use.

Sect. 39: ad horam. The phrase is Late Latin. Cf. Sect. 39, n. 2.

(c) Transferred use to express other relations. This usage is common in Ambrose²⁰ as in other Late writers. The following instances are typical. (I have omitted common Classical examples).

Sect. 10: ad remedium temperavit.

Sect. 19: ad dispendium sui, sed ad gratiam mutuabantur.

Sect. 40: quae enim ad ostentationem funt.

Sect. 79: subscripsisti ad competitionem.

(d) Final use with substantives. This usage in itself is Classical but becomes extended in the Later writers. Cf. K.-Steg. II 1, 522; and especially T. L. L. 539-541. The one example in the De Helia is worth noting: Sect. 65: siccantur ad potum subito lacus.

(e) Final use with adjectives.

Sect. 79: habilis ad coronam. habilis ad is cited for Varro and Cicero (once) in Classical Latin. Cf. Sect. 79, n. 17.

in.

Sect. 20: in adamantis rigorem . . . duratus. durare in with the Acc., is Poetic, Silver, and Late. Cf. Sect. 20, n. 3.

Sect. 62: atque illic in vesperam bibunt. The use of in for ad in this expression is cited first for Curtius. Cf. Georges s. v. vespera.

²⁰ Cf. McGuire, pp. 34-35; Adams, pp. 33-35.

per.

- (a) With the Acc. for the Abl. of means. On this usage, cf. Sect. 6, n. 14. As examples, cf.:

per cibos, Sect. 6;

per cibum, Sect. 7;

per ignorantiam, (on this phrase, cf. Sect. 10, n. 2).

per intemperantiam, Sect. 10.

per ebrietatem, Sect. 63.

ignem per quem, Sect. 83.

per aquam, Sect. 84.

- (b) per = propter. Sect. 23: per escam. This use of per with a substantive does not seem to be cited before Frontinus. Cf. St.-Schm. 521.

iuxta = secundum. Sect. 17: iuxta praeceptum domini. Livy, Vitruvius, and then chiefly Late Latin. Cf. Sect. 17, n. 2.

circa = "in respect to." Sect. 6: coeperunt divina circa eum opera feriari. Late Latin. Cf. Sect. 6, n. 12.

circa = erga. Sect. 71: cum dei circa hominem commemoraret gratiam. Pliny, Celsus, Fronto, and later writers. Cf. Sect. 71, n. 1.

2. Prepositions governing the Ablative.

There are only a few deviations from the Classical norm in the use of the Abl. in the De Helia, the main divergences occurring through the extension of the use of de.

de.

- (a) The use of de to express source or separation after verbs which in Classical Latin are almost invariably followed by ab or ex.

expellere, cf. Sect. 7, n. 19.

generare, cf. Sect. 71, n. 4.

- (b) Other uses of de.

Sect. 49: de omnibus se vindicatum viderit. de with se vindicare is Silver and Late. Cf. Sect. 49, n. 8.

Sect. 7: manducaverint de interdicta arbore.

The use of de with manducare is Eccl. Latin where it is used undoubtedly under the influence of literal translations of the Greek. Cf. Vulg. Apoc. 2, 20: manducare de idolothytis; also Vulg. Deut. 20, 19: arbores de quibus vesci potest. Cf. T. L. L. V 51, 3-4; ibid. 48-49: cf. also St.-Schm. p. 527.

ab.

Sect. 52: a reliquo serpentium veneno curantur, nemo ab ebrietate. curari a = "be cured of" is Eccl. Cf. T. L. L. IV 1504, 31-37.

ex.

Sect. 17: ex quibus generati sunt. Classical usage, a, ab.

Sect. 23: quis e ieiunio defecerit. e with deficere is cited only for Cicero (twice) and Late Latin. Cf. Sect. 23, n. 1.

in.

Sect. 36: ne videaris contristari in animae salute. in with contristari is Eccl. Cf. Sect. 36, n. 9.

sub.

Sect. 48: certatur sub iudice, sub lege decernitur. The use of sub in these phrases does not seem to occur in Prose before Silver Latin. Cf. Forcellini-Perin IV, 523, s. v. sub. C, II.

Sect. 58: quid te sub maledicto constituís Cain . . . The use of sub with constituere, as here, does not seem to occur before Apuleius. Cf. T. L. L. IV 510, 79-80. It is very probable that Ambrose uses the phrase under Scriptural influence. Cf. Gal. 3, 10: quicumque enim ex operibus legis sunt, sub maledicto sunt.

super = de.

Sect. 81: ita erit maestitia super eo qui . . . The usage is chiefly Late, especially Eccl. In the present case Ambrose certainly uses super thus under Scriptural influence. Cf. Sect. 81, n. 5.

H. Nominal Forms of the Verb (Infinitive, Gerund and Gerundive, Participle and Supine).

1. The Infinitive.

The extension in the use of the infinitive is a common phenomenon of the Silver and Later Latinity. The divergences from the Classical norm noted in the De Helia are listed below.

- (a) Historical infinitive. As the historical infinitive is relatively rare in Late writers of prose especially,²¹ the following occurrence of the construction in the De Helia is worth noting: Sect. 50: anhelare vehementius, gemere, sudare, . . . prodere.

- (b) The infinitive employed as a complement of verbs and phrases. Where instances are treated in the Commentary, reference is made to Section and note.

- (1) With verbs signifying "to be able," etc.

novisse = "know how," Sect. 7; Sect. 80. Cited for Rhet. Her. 4, 65 and the poets. Cf. K.-Steg. II, 1, 690.

- (2) With other verbs and expressions.

colligere datur. With the passive of dare, first in Vergil; then in Silver and Late writers. Cf. Sect. 68, n. 6.

dedit . . . perambulare. With the active of dare, first in Vergil. Cf. Sect. 71, n. 3.

ut erubescat surgere. With erubescere, first in Vergil; and then from Livy on. Cf. Sect. 50, n. 4.

haberet imminui. Habere with the infin. pass. is Eccl. Latin. Cf. Sect. 6, n. 14.

haberet intrare. Habere with the infin. act. appears in Cicero, but becomes common only in Eccl. Latin. Cf. Sect. 7, n. 5.

merere with infin.: Sect. 68; Sect. 82. This usage is Poetic, Silver, and Late. Cf. K.-Schm. s. v.; also McGuire, p. 238.

²¹ Cf. St.-Schm. p. 591.

periclitatur esse. With the infinitive, periclitari is Silver Latin. Cf. Sect. 51, n. 3.

temptavit offerre: Sect. 85. With the infinitive, temptare occurs in prose only in Hirtius (once), and Nepos before Livy and later writers. Cf. St.-Schm. p. 587.

(c) The accusative and infinitive.

(1) With causative verbs.

conteri fecit ebrietas: Sect. 16.

faceret esse subiectum: Sect. 30.

vinum et mulieres discedere a deo faciunt: Sect. 67.

The use of the Acc. and Inf. with facere in the sense of "cause to," "make to," occurs in Early, Classical and Silver Latin, but becomes frequent only in Late Latin through the influence of the Vulgar speech. This use of facere is especially frequent in Eccl. writers, furthermore, under the influence of literal translation from the Greek and Hebrew. Cf. St.-Schm. p. 594; T. L. L. VI, 115-116; cf. also McGuire, p. 192.

(2) With the verba declarandi et sentiendi.

advertere, Livy, Pliny, and Late. Cf. Sect. 52, n. 5.

(3) With adjectives.

periculosum (est): Sect. 15. The infinitive with this phrase is cited first for Livy and Curtius. Cf. Georges s. v.

facilis . . . consumi. facilis with the pass. infin. is cited first in poetry for Propertius, and in prose for Seneca. Cf. Sect. 19, n. 2.

2. Gerund and Gerundive.

I have noted no deviations from the Classical norm.

3. The participle.

(a) For the use of the participle as an adjective and subst., cf. Syntax 3.

(b) For the use of dicens introducing Scriptural quotations, cf. Sect. 1, n. 17.

4. The supine.

One instance occurs: terribilis visu—taken from Vergil. Cf. Sect. 50, n. 2.

I. Particles.

My purpose here is to point out the more striking divergences from the Classical norm in the use of the particles in the De Helia. My summary will supplement and add to that furnished by McGuire in his edition of the De Nabuthae, pp. 40-43.

1. Copulative particles.

(a) et.

- (1) et = etiam. The use of et = "also" occurs in Classical Latin, but is restricted to a relatively small number of cases. The use of et = etiam, strictly begins only with Livy.²² Ambrose employs et in these two senses with great frequency.

et = "also" or etiam after a subordinate conjunction: Sect. 1: unde et . . . ait; Sect. 36: unde et . . . ait; Sect. 44: sed utinam et . . . audires; Sect. 54: ut et . . . solvantur; Sect. 69: cum et . . . sit vetitum. N.B. It should be noted that unde in the examples cited is used as a conclusive particle. Cf. below.

et = "also" or etiam after a coordinating conjunction: Sect. 43: ita et . . . liquescit; Sect. 53: habent ergo et iudicia; Sect. 70: ut locis ita et vitiis; Sect. 70: denique et propheta Iona; Sect. 74: nam et . . . ait (nam et is Classical); Sect. 78: similiter et orbis terrarum . . . solvendus est.

et = "also" or etiam preceded by a relative. Sect. 9: operimentum quod et animam tegit.

et = "also" or etiam in the interior of a proposition.

This is a favorite usage in Ambrose; Sect. 2: de-

²² For a detailed treatment of the development in this use of et, cf. St.-Schm. pp. 661-662.

lectaret et Christum; Sect. 15: aquam vomuit potuit et vini abundantia non deesse; Sect. 37: est et aliud caput; Sect. 52: advertit autem et perfidiae venenum; Sect. 54: habent ergo vinum et barbari; Sect. 61: est ergo . . . culpae, est et gratiae; Sect. 71: cedit tibi et mare; Sect. 72: sed est et bona terra; Sect. 74: unde possumus et in bono; Sect. 85: patebat et ante hoc.

(b) etiam.

This particle seems to keep its full Classical force in the De Helia and, in spite of the great extension in the use of et, it is relatively frequent. Thus I have noted 23 instances, only two of which are in the stereotyped combination non solum sed etiam.

2. Disjunctive particles.

(a) vel = et. Sect. 14: vicit . . . Noe vel etiam Loth . . . ebrietas.

(b) vel . . . vel = et . . . et. Sect. 67: quod vel ebrietas vel libido praevaricationis inlecebrae sunt. This employment of vel = et and vel . . . vel = et . . . et appears first in Late Latin where it becomes frequent particularly in the Vulgar writers. Cf. St.-Schm. p. 676 and the literature there cited.

3. Adversative particles.

(a) Sect. 54: nec solum sed et: the use of et for etiam in this combination is cited only for Silver and Late writers. Cf. Sect. 54, n. 7.

The following example of sed et for sed etiam after a preceding negative combination should also be noted here. Sect. 11: non illis itaque solis nocent vina . . . sed et illis amplius quorum oculis . . . membra nudantur.

(b) sed et with no preceding negative in the sense of sed etiam or merely sed. This usage does not appear, it seems, before Suetonius and Tacitus, and becomes common only in Late Latin. Cf. St.-Schm. p. 661; and Georges s. v. Ambrose seems fond of the combination. I have noted the following instances in the De Helia. Sect. 36: sed et luxuriosi dicunt; Sect. 39: sed et forte laboriosum est; Sect. 51: sed et terra inebriat; Sect. 58: sed et persecutores . . . movebant.

4. Explicative or causal particles.

etenim. Ambrose shows a marked fondness for this particle, employing it, e. g., 9 times in the present work. He deviates from Classical usage only in three instances where he uses the particle post-positively. Sect. 37: ieiunium etenim; Sect. 72: Cartaginem etenim; Sect. 80: erit etenim. This postpositive use of etenim occurs in Lucretius and Horace but not in prose before Pliny the Elder. Cf. K.-Schm. s. v. vol. 1, p. 524; on etenim in general, St.-Schm. p. 681.

5. Conclusive particles.

- (a) denique = igitur. The use of denique as a conclusive particle is almost entirely Late Latin. Cf. St.-Schm. p. 684, and especially T. L. L. V 533. Ambrose employs denique very frequently in this sense. I have noted 22 reasonably clear instances in the De Helia. Cf. e. g. Sect. 1: certamen nostrum ieiunium est. denique ieiunavit salvator; Sect. 7: dominus ieiunare decernit. denique ipse ait; Sect. 34: non sola autem fames quaeritur, sed plena disciplina ieiunii. denique aliis dicitur, etc.
- (b) unde = igitur. This usage is Late Latin. Cf. Sect. 1, n. 8. I have noted 9 examples in the De Helia.
- (c) et ideo. Ambrose employs et ideo as a conclusive particle connecting coordinate sentences. This usage is confined to Varro, Celsus, and Late Latin. Cf. Sect. 4, n. 13. I have noted four examples in the De Helia: Sect. 4; Sect. 28; Sect. 36; Sect. 72.
- (d) ideoque: cited for Lucretius, Varro (once), Nepos (once), before Silver and Late Latin. Cf. Sect. 69, n. 4. This is the only instance in the De Helia.

J. The Syntax of Subordination.

1. The indirect question.

I have noted one instance with the indicative: advertimus . . . quantis . . . erimus. Sect. 81. This usage is very rare in Classical Latin and does not become common before Late writers. However, even the future indicative, as here, already occurs in Pliny the Elder. Cf. St.-Schm. p. 694.

2. The use of quod to introduce clauses after verba declarandi et sentiendi. This usage which appears in isolated instances in Early, Classical, and Silver Prose and Poetry, becomes common in later writers, especially the ecclesiastical.²³ Ambrose is quite conservative in the employment of this usage in the De Helia.²⁴ I have noted only four examples:

Sect. 6: declaratum est quod per cibos mundus haberet imminui.

Sect. 7: sciebat enim quod per escam culpa haberet intrare.

Sect. 12: legimus etiam quod patrem Loth inebriaverint filiae.

Sect. 85: ignoras quod Cain propterea displicuerit sacrificium.

3. The final use of quo without a comparative. There is only one instance in the present work: ut emundet et corrigat lapsus suos, quo ad sacramenta Christi redire mereatur, Sect. 82. This use of quo occurs in Plautus, in Sallust (as an archaism), occasionally in Cicero, in Horace and Ovid, and in Silver Latin, especially in Tacitus. It subsequently becomes very common in the Late Latin Poetry and Prose.²⁵

²³ Cf. St.-Schm. pp. 720-721 and the literature there cited.

²⁴ As McGuire has noted (pp. 43 and 109-110) he shows a marked preference for the subjunctive after quod in this construction. Cf. also Adams (pp. 83-88) who furnishes statistics for the employment of quod, quia, etc., and the Acc. and Inf., in this construction for the Letters of Ambrose.

²⁵ Cf. St.-Schm. p. 787.

4. ut.

- (a) Use of ut = explicative quod. I have noted only two instances:

Sect. 80: dolet quod disperdas orbem terrarum . . . sed . . . gaudet ut venias et omnes liberes.

Sect. 80: gaudebit creatura mundi, ut . . . liberetur.

For a full discussion of this usage, cf. Sect. 80, n. 6.

- (b) indignum est . . . ut: Sect. 16: indignum (esse) iudicans ut . . . lex daretur. The use of a substantive clause introduced by ut with indignum est seems to be noted only for Augustine. Cf. Sect. 16, n. 13.

5. quando.

Temporal use. Sect. 68: quando immurmurabant . . . a serpentibus moriebantur, quando . . . transibant semitam. The use of quando as a strict temporal particle, as here, though occurring in Classical Latin, is confined chiefly to the later writers. Cf. Sect. 68, n. 7.

6. Conditional sentences.

We need discuss here only the si fuerit-est type which Ambrose employs regularly in present general conditions, whether introduced by si, cum, a relative pronoun, or adverb. In Late Latin in subordinate clauses after si, ubi, etc., the future perfect lost its original force almost completely and came to be used merely as a simple future or even a simple present. As has been observed by other investigators,²⁶ the future perfect in the si clause is regularly employed to render the Greek aorist subjunctive. I have noted instances of this same usage in several passages taken over into Latin from Basil in the present work. As representative examples of this type of condition in the De Helia, cf. the following:

si.

Sect. 49: si quis . . . viderit, convertit et meretur.

Sect. 50: si quando consurrectum fuerit, viri . . . stare non possunt.

²⁶ For further details and bibliography on this si fuerit-est type of condition, cf. St.-Schm. p. 564.

cum.

Sect. 27: cum inebriati fuerint, amplius bibunt.

ubi.

Sect. 47: ubi res calere coeperit, poscunt maioribus poculis.

Sect. 48: ubi consummatae fuerint epulae, putes iam esse surgendum. (Cf. Bas. 460 A, 128 C: ὅταν δὲ νομισθῶσι . . . τότε τοῦ πίνειν ἄρχονται).

qui.

Sect. 57: qui biberit commovetur et cadit.

DE HELIA¹ ET IEIVNIO.

- 1, 1. Diuinum² ad patres resultauit oraculum, ut, cum egredierentur ad bellum, tuba³ canerent, cuius sonitu dominus reminisceretur populi⁴ sui, quo petitum conferret auxilium plus quae misericordiae⁵ suae incentiua cognoscens, et in⁶ diebus laetitiae suae, in⁷ numeniis suis concinerent tubarum sono. unde⁸ et Daudid ait: canite⁹ in initio mensis tuba, in die frequenti sollemnitatis uestrae. ueniet igitur nobis dies¹⁰ sollemnitatis et iam adpropinquat. canamus tuba tamquam¹¹ in proelium progredientes, canamus tuba, ut adnuntiemus¹² sollemnitatis diem. simul¹³ nobis et certamen imminet et uictoria repromittitur. uictoria nostra crux Christi est, tropaeum nostrum pascha est domini Iesu. sed ille ante est proeliatu, ut uinceret, non¹⁴ quo ipse egeret certamine, sed ut¹⁵ nobis formam bellandi ante praescriberet et postea daret gratiam triumphandi, certamen nostrum ieiunium est. denique¹⁶ ieiunauit saluator, et sic ad eum temptator accessit. et primum gulae¹⁷ direxit spiculum dicens: si¹⁸ filius dei es, dic lapidi huic, ut panis fiat. ille cibum uelut escam laquei¹⁹ praetendit,²⁰ ut sic inlaquearet²¹ adpetentiam corporalem, dominus ieiunium praetulit, ut laqueos temptatoris, ut uincula dissolueret. denique sic habes scriptum: non²² in solo pane uiuit homo, sed in omni uerbo dei. illo laqueo Adam fuerat strangulatus, hac absolutione²³ diabolicae quaestionis omnis homo est liberatus.
- 2, 2. Magna uirtus ieiunii, denique tam speciosa¹ militia est, ut² ieiunare delectaret et Christum, tam ualida, ut ad caelum homines eleuaret. et ut humanis magis³ quam diuinis utamur exemplis, de⁴ Heliae ieiuno ore uox missa caelum clausit sacrilego populo⁵ Iudaeorum. etenim⁶ cum a rege Achab altare⁷ esset idolo⁸ constitutum, ad⁹ uerbum prophetae tribus¹⁰ annis et sex mensibus ros¹¹ pluuiiae non cecidit¹²

Num. 10,
9 et 10.

Psalm.
80, 4.

Num.
10, 9.

Luc.
4, 2.

Luc.
4, 3.

Luc.
4, 4.

3 Reg.
17, 1.

3 Reg.
17, 1;
18, 1.

ON ELIAS AND FASTING.

1, 1. A divine ordinance was delivered to the patriarchs that whenever they set out to war they should sound their trumpets, at the sound of which the Lord would remember His people, and the more would bring the aid which was sought, recognizing these incentives to His mercy; and that on the days of their joy, on the days of the new moon, they should send forth in concert the sound of their trumpets. Wherefore David also says: Sound forth the trumpet in the first of the month on the crowded day of your solemnity. Therefore the day of solemnity will come to us and is already approaching. Let us sound the trumpet as if going forth to battle, let us sound the trumpet that we may proclaim the day of solemnity. Likewise a struggle also hangs over us and victory is promised anew. Our victory is the Cross of Christ, our trophy the Paschal Lamb of the Lord Jesus. But He fought first that He might conquer, not because He Himself needed a struggle, but that He might first prescribe the manner of warring and afterwards grant the grace of triumphing. Our struggle is fasting. Therefore the Savior fasted, and thus the tempter approached Him. And first he aimed a dart at the throat saying: If thou be the Son of God, say to this stone that it be made bread. He held out food as the bait of his snare, as it were, that he might thus ensnare the bodily appetite; the Lord preferred fasting that He might loose the snares of the tempter, that He might loosen his bonds. Accordingly you thus have written: Man liveth not by bread alone, but by every word of God. By that snare had Adam been tormented; by this solution of the devil's question every man has been made free.

2, 2. Great is the virtue of fasting; in short so splendid is the warfare that it delighted even Christ to fast; and so mighty that it raised men to heaven. And, that we may use human rather than divine examples, a word sent from the fasting mouth of Elias closed heaven to the sacrilegious people of the Jews. For when an altar had been set up to an idol by king Achab, at the word of the prophet for three years and six months dewy rain did not fall upon the earth. A worthy punishment fittingly to

- super terram. digna poena, quae intemperantiam congrue¹³ coherceret, ut caelum iniis clauderetur, qui terrena¹⁴ polluerant. dignum etiam, ut ad condemnationem¹⁵ regis sacrilegi propheta ad¹⁶ uiduam in Sarepta Sidoniae mitteretur, quae quoniam deuotionem¹⁷ cibo praetulit, meruit ut aridi-tatis¹⁸ publicae sola non sentiret aerumnam¹⁹ itaque *non*²⁰ defecit hydria polenta, cum torrentis²¹ fluenta²² deficerent.
- 3 quid eius reliqua contexam? ieiunus¹ filium uiduae ab inferis resuscitauit, ieiunus² pluuias ore deposuit, ieiunus ignis deduxit e caelo, ieiunus³ curru raptus ad caelum et quadra-ginta⁴ dierum ieiunio diuinam⁵ adquisiuit praesentiam. tunc denique plus meruit, quando amplius ieiunauit. ieiuno⁶ ore statuit fluenta Iordanis et redundantis⁷ fluminis alueum⁸ re-pente siccatum puluerulento⁹ transmisit uestigio. merito illum dignum caelo diuina¹⁰ iudicauit sententia, ut cum¹¹ ipso raperetur corpore, quoniam caelestem¹² uitam uiuebat in corpore et supernae¹³ usum conuersationis exhibebat in terris.
- 3, 4. Quid est enim ieiunium nisi substantia¹ et imago caelestis?
ieiunium refectio² animae, cibus³ mentis est, ieiunium uita est angelorum, ieiunium culpa mors, excidium⁴ delictorum, remedium⁵ salutis, radix⁶ gratiae, fundamentum⁷ est castitatis. hoc ad deum gradu citius peruenitur, hoc gradu Helias ascendit ante quam curru, hanc⁸ hereditatem sobrietatis abstemiae⁹ ad caelum abiens discipulo dereliquit,¹⁰ in¹¹ hac virtute et spiritu Heliae uenit Iohannes. denique¹² in deserto et ille uacabat ieiuniis; esca autem eius erat locustae et mel siluestre. et¹³ ideo qui uitae humanae possibilitatem¹⁴ continentia supergressus¹⁵ fuerat, non homo, sed angelus aestimatus est. de¹⁶ ipso legimus: *etiam*¹⁷ plus quam propheta.
*hic est, de quo scriptum*¹⁸ est: ecce mitto angelum meum ante faciem tuam, qui praeparabit uiam tuam ante te. quis humana uirtute equos igneos, currus igneos potuisset ascen-dere,¹⁹ regere aerios currus nisi qui naturam humani corporis 5 incorruptibilis²⁰ ieiunii uirtute mutasset? sed de Heliae gestis¹ plurima iam frequenti² diuersorum librorum sermone digessimus³ et cauendum arbitror, ne in eadem recurramus,⁴

3 Reg.
17, 9 sq.3 Reg.
17, 163 Reg.
17, 22.
3 Reg. 18,
38, et 45.4 Reg.
2, 11.
3 Reg.
19, 8.
4 Reg.
2, 8.4 Reg.
2, 11.Phil.
3, 20.4 Reg.
2, 14 sq.
Luc.
1, 17.Matth.
3, 4.Matth.
11, 9 sq.

check insolence, that heaven should be closed to the impious who had polluted the things of earth! Meet was it also that a prophet, for the condemnation of a sacrilegious king, was sent to a widow in Sarephta of Sidonia, who, since she preferred piety to food, merited that she alone should not feel the distress of the general drought. And so the urn of barley meal did not fail when the waters of the torrent failed. 3. Why should I present the rest of this history? While fasting he raised the widow's son from the dead, while fasting he brought down rain at his word, while fasting he drew down fire from heaven, while fasting he was snatched in a chariot to heaven and by a fast of forty days he gained the presence of God. Then finally, he deserved more when he fasted more. With fasting mouth he caused the waters of the Jordan to stand, and with dusty footsteps he passed over the channel of the overflowing stream suddenly become dry. Justly the Divine Will judged him worthy of heaven, so that with his very body he was snatched up, since he lived the heavenly life in the body and exemplified on earth the manner of living above.

3, 4. For what is fasting unless the substance and image of heaven? Fasting is the restoration of the soul, the food of the mind; fasting is the life of the angels; fasting is the death of guilt, the destruction of sins, the means of salvation, the root of grace, the foundation of chastity. By this step we come more quickly to God, by this step Elias ascended, before, on departing to heaven in a chariot, he left this inheritance of moderate sobriety to his disciple; and in this virtue and spirit of Elias came John. Hence in the desert he also devoted himself to fasting; and his meat was locusts and wild honey. And therefore he who had surpassed the strength of human life in continence was thought not a man but an angel. Of him we read: Even more than a prophet. For this is he of whom it is written: Behold I send my angel before thy face, who shall prepare thy way before thee. Who by human power could have mounted fiery horses, fiery chariots; who could have guided aerial chariots save him who had changed the nature of the human body by virtue of incorruptible fasting? 5. But of the deeds of Elias we have already discoursed much and often in diverse books, and I think we should guard against cum praesertim in opere suo ipse laudetur. imitemur ergo illum et eam escam quaeramus, cuius uirtute diebus ac noctibus progredi ad⁵ supernorum possimus cognitionem. non enim omnis esca materialis⁶ nec omnis cibus corporalis: est cibus⁷ mentis, ut diximus, quo epulantur⁸ animae, de quo ait dominus: meus⁹ cibus est, ut faciam uoluntatem patris mei, qui in caelis est. hic cibus¹⁰ angelorum, ut diuino¹¹ famulentur imperio. nulla illis cura mensarum, nullus conuiuiorum usus, nullae repositae¹² epulae, nullus uini potus aut siceriae,¹³ nulla distentio¹⁴ corporis, nulla uentris offensio.

Ioh.
4, 34.

- 4, 6. Itaque ne terrenum quis aut nouellum putet esse ieiunium, primus usus mundi a ieiunio coepit, quando¹ lux clara resplenduit. secundus² dies ieiunio, quando caeli factum est firmamentum. tertio³ die terra pabulum germinauit, natura obsequium praeuit: ieiunium tamen caelestis⁴ disciplina seruabat. quarto⁵ die luminaria facta sunt solis et lunae: et adhuc ieiunium. quinto prodixerunt aquae⁶ repentia animarum uiuarum et uolatilia super terram secundum firmamentum caeli, et⁷ uidit deus quia bona sunt. et⁸ benedixit ea deus dicens: crescite et multiplicamini et replete aquas, quae sunt in mari, et uolatilia multiplicentur super terram: et adhuc ieiunium. denique 'benedixit ea' scriptum est et dixit: crescite, non dixit: edite et manducate.⁹ sexto¹⁰ die bestiae sunt creatae et cum bestiis orta edendi potestas est et usus escarum. ubi cibus coepit, ibi finis factus est mundi, ibi coepit sua incrementa nescire, ibi coeperunt diuina¹¹ circa¹² eum opera feriari.¹³ quo indicio declaratum est quod¹⁴ per cibos mundus haberet imminui, per quos desiit augeri. nemo¹⁵ delictum sciebat, nemo poenam timebat, nemo nouerat mortem. plantauit¹ dominus paradisum ad gratiam beatorum, posuit² ibi hominem operari et custodire eum et, uti sciamus non esse nouellum ieiunium, primum illic³ legem⁴ constituit de ieiunio; sciebat⁵ enim quod per escam culpa haberet intrare. prima poena de ieiunii praeuaricatione⁶

Gen.
1, 3.
Gen.
1, 6.
Gen.
1, 11.

Gen.
1, 16.
Gen.
1, 20.
Gen.
1, 21.
Gen.
1, 22.

Gen.
1, 25.
cf. 28 sq.

Gen.
2, 8.
Gen.
2, 15.

recurring to the same; particularly since he himself is praised in his own work. Accordingly let us imitate him and let us seek that food, by virtue of which we can advance by day and by night to the knowledge of heavenly things. For not all food is material nor all meat corporeal: there is the meat of the mind, as we have said, on which souls feast; concerning which the Lord says: My meat is to do the will of my Father who is in heaven. This is the meat of angels, namely to serve the Divine Will. For them there is no care of courses, no familiarity with banquets, no renewal feasts, no drinking of wine or intoxicants, no distention of the body, no vexation of the stomach.

4, 6. And so, lest anyone may think that fasting is earthly or new, the first experience of the world began with fasting, when the clear light shone brightly; and the second day began with fasting, when the firmament of heaven was made. On the third day the earth produced food, nature offered its homage: yet the Wisdom of Heaven observed fasting. On the fourth day the lights of the sun and moon were made: and still there was fasting. On the fifth day the waters brought forth the creeping things of living creatures and the fowls over the earth under the firmament of heaven, and God saw that they are good. And God blessed them saying: Increase and multiply, and fill the waters which are in the sea, and let the fowls multiply upon the earth: and still there was fasting. And then He blessed them, it is written, and said: Increase; He did not say “partake of food and eat.” On the sixth day beasts were created and with the beasts there arose the capability of eating and the use of foods. When food began to exist, then the completion of the world was made, then the world began not to know its own increase, then the Divine Labors upon it began to cease. And by this sign it was made manifest that through food the world would necessarily be destroyed, since through this it had ceased to be increased. No one knew crime, no one feared punishment, no one knew death. 7. The Lord planted paradise for the pleasure of the blessed; there he placed man to work it and keep it; and, that we may know that fasting is not new, there He instituted first the law of fasting; for He knew that through food crime must needs enter. The first punishment dicente mandato⁷ dei: de⁸ ligno quod est scientiae boni et mali non edetis; qua die autem manducaueritis ex eo morte moriemini. eo usque autem nemo⁹ praeuaricari nouerat, ut adhuc orta non esset quae prima est praeuaricata indictum¹⁰ abstinentiae. lex a domino deo, praeuaricatio¹¹ legis a diabolo: culpa per cibum, latebra¹² post cibum: cognitio¹³ infirmitatis in cibo, uirtus firmitatis in ieiunio. denique quamdiu interdictis abstinuerunt,¹⁴ nesciebant esse se nudos: poteaquam manducauerunt de interdicta arbore, nudatos¹⁵ se esse cognouerunt. merito ergo mulier, ubi culpa¹⁶ agnouit auctorem, interrogata: serpens¹⁷ persuasit mihi, et manducaui. serpens gulam suadet, dominus ieiunare decernit. denique ipse ait: ieiunate¹⁸ et orate, ne intretis in temptationem. itaque gula¹⁹ de paradiso regnantem expulit, abstinentia ad paradisum reuocauit errantem.

Gen.
2, 17.Gen.
3, 1,
et 8.Gen.
3, 11.Gen.
3, 13.Matth.
26, 41.

- 8 Et dixit deus: ecce¹ Adam factus est tamquam unus ex nobis. inridens utique deus, non adprobans dicit, hoc² est: putabas te similem fore nostri? quia uoluisti esse quod non eras, destitisti esse quod eras. itaque, dum supra te esse adfectas, infra te esse coepisti. denique³ uestiuit eum tunica pellicia prius et sic ait: ecce Adam, quasi dicat: ecce amicus tuus, ecce dignum indumentum⁴ tuum, hic te uestitus decet. qui diuina⁵ affectant tali digni habentur ornatu. ecce quo te tua culpa deduxit, ecce nunc in hac tunica pellicia tamquam unus ex nobis aperuisti⁶ oculos. circumspecte diligenter: nudum te aspicias, quem uestitum putabas. gula ergo nudos facit, ieiunia operiunt et exutos. unde dominus ait: operui¹ in ieiunio animam meam. bonum operimentum² quod et animam tegit, ne a temptatore³ deprehendatur, ne a temptatore nudetur. bonum uelamen⁴ quod tegit culpam. tegit abstinentia, tegit gratia, beati⁵ enim quorum remissae

Gen.
3, 22.Gen.
3, 21.Gen.
3, 22.Psalm.
68, 11.Psalm.
31, 1.

is for the transgression of the law of fasting, the command of God saying: Of the tree which is of the knowledge of good and evil ye shall not eat; but on what day ye shall eat of it, ye shall die the death. Moreover to such a degree did no one know how to transgress that the day had not yet arisen which first transgressed the command of abstinence. The law was from the Lord God, the transgression of the law, from the devil; sin was through food, hiding after food: the knowledge of weakness was in food; the virtue of strength, in fasting. Hence as long as they fasted from forbidden things, they did not know that they were naked: after they ate of the forbidden tree, they realized that they had been made naked. Rightly then, on being questioned, did the woman reply when she recognized the author of the sin: The serpent persuaded me and I did eat. The serpent urges the cause of the appetite, the Lord decrees fasting. Therefore He Himself says: Watch and pray that ye enter not into temptation. And so appetite drove man, while reigning supreme, from paradise; abstinence recalled him to paradise from his wandering.

8. And God said: Behold Adam has become as one of us. Mockingly of course, not approvingly, does God speak, that is: "did you think that you should be like us? Because you have wished to be what you were not, you have ceased to be what you were. Accordingly, while you were aspiring to be above yourself, you have begun to be beneath yourself." Therefore He first clothed him in a tunic of skin and spoke thus: "Behold Adam," as if He should say: "Behold thy cloak, behold thy worthy raiment, this clothing becomes thee. They who aspire to divine things are held worthy of such adornment. Behold whither thy sin hath brought thee; behold now in this tunic of skin, thou, as if one of us, hast opened thine eyes. Look about carefully: thou seest thyself naked, whom thou thought'st clothed." 9. Accordingly appetite makes us naked, fastings cover us even when we are without clothing. Wherefore the Lord says And I covered my soul in fasting. Good is the covering which covers the soul also lest it be seized by the tempter, lest it be made naked by the tempter. Good is the cloak which covers sin. Abstinence covers it, grace covers it; for blessed are they whose iniquities are forgiven, and whose sins are sunt iniquitates et quorum tecta sunt peccata. tegit gratia, dum remittit⁶ et omnem abolet⁷ errorem: tegi tabstinentia, dum obumbrat⁸ uitium et maesto⁹ abscondit affectu¹⁰ atque extenuat paenitendo. etenim ieiunium et elemosyna¹¹ a peccato liberant. opertus erat Adam uirtutum uelamine priusquam praeuaticaretur, sed tamquam exutus praeuaticatione uidit¹² esse se nudum, quia indumentum quod habebat amiserat. in¹³ diebus enim ieiuniorum uestrorum orietur¹⁴ inquit tibi matutinum lumen tuum et sanitas tua matura orietur et praecedet ante te iustitia et circumdabit te maiestas domini. bonum uestimentum lux. scriptum est enim: circumdatus¹⁵ luce sicut uestimento. bonum¹⁶ uestimentum, quando circumdate dominus et operit ieiunantes.

Tob.
4, 11.Gen.
3, 7.

Is. 58, 8.

Psalm.
103, 2.

- 5, 10 Nudatus¹ erat Noe, quando inebriatus est: texit eum pietas filiorum. at nudatus erat per² ignorantiam, non per intemperantiam; adhuc enim uinum nesciebatur. in³ principio generis humani ignorabatur ebrietas,⁴ primus uineam⁵ ipse plantauit: dedit⁶ naturam, ignorauit potentiam. itaque uinum nec⁷ suo pepercit⁸ auctori. quid⁹ mirum si, cum dominus ipse creaturas¹⁰ suas laudauerit, et iste¹¹ miratus est? itaque cum delectaret eum reperti muneris gratia, temptauit uehementior creatura insuetos¹² senis artus, turbauit noua potio. dormitauerum¹³ inquit qui ascenderunt equos. ascendit¹⁴ corporis uoluptates: et iustus¹⁵ obdormiuit.¹⁶ sed illius ebrietas nobis suadet sobrietatem semel enim inebriatus est Noe; ubi uero malum ebrietatis agnouit, inuentum¹⁷ suum ad remedium temperauit, non effudit ad uitium. unde apostolus ait: uino¹⁸ modico utere propter frequentes tuas infirmitates. manebat antequam uinum inueniretur omnibus inconcussa¹ libertas; nemo sciebat a consorte² naturae suae obsequia³ seruitutis exigere. non esset hodie seruitus, si ebrietas non fuisset. orepserat⁴ quidem fraternalis praelationis inuidia, manebat tamen adhuc paternalis pietatis reuerentia. laesa pietas est, dum ridetur ebrietas. non⁵ illis itaque solis nocent uina quos temptant, sed⁶ et illis amplius quorum oculis temulenta⁷ ebriorum membra

Gen.
9, 21, sp.Gen.
9, 20.Psalm.
75, 7.1 Tim.
5, 23.Gen.
4, 4 sq.

covered. Grace covers when it remits and effaces all error: abstinence covers when it overshadows vice and conceals it by a feeling of sorrow and lessens it by repentance. For fasting and alms deliver from sin. Adam had been covered by a cloak of virtues before he transgressed. But uncovered, as it were, by his transgression, he saw that he was naked, because the garment which he had he had lost. For in the days of your fastings, Shall thy morning light arise, He says, and thy health shall speedily arise, and thy justice shall go before thee, and the majesty of the Lord shall surround thee. A good garment is light. For it is written: Surrounded with light as with a garment. A good garment it is when the Lord clothes and covers those fasting.

5, 10. Noe had been uncovered when he was drunk: the filial devotion of his sons covered him. But he had been uncovered through ignorance, not through intemperance; for up to this time wine was not known. In the beginning of the human race drunkenness was unknown. He himself first planted a vineyard; he gave it its nature, he was ignorant of its power. And so wine did not spare even its author. What wonder if, since the Lord Himself has praised His creatures, he also marvelled at them? Hence the pleasantness of the newly found gift delighted him, too strong a creature assailed the unaccustomed limbs of the old man, the new drink confused him. They have all slumbered he says, who mounted on horseback. He mounted the pleasures of the body: and, though a just man, fell asleep. But his drunkenness persuades us to sobriety. For Noe became drunk only once; when he recognised the evil of drunkenness, he tempered his discovery to a remedy, he did not let it go to a vice. Wherefore the Apostle says: Use a little wine for thy frequent infirmities. 11. Unimpaired liberty was the possession of everyone before wine was discovered; no one knew how to exact the obedience of servitude from his consort in nature. There would be no servitude to-day if there had been no drunkenness. Envy of brotherly preference indeed had already crept in, yet up to this time reverent devotion to parents was maintained. Injured was this devotion when drunkenness was laughed at. And so not alone to those whom they assail do wines do harm, but even more to those before whose eyes nudantur. hinc risus inreuerens⁸ nascitur, hinc libido flammatur,⁹ ut multo maiore temulentia¹⁰ eos uina perturbent quorum oculos ac mentem inebriauerint quam quorum membra prostrauerint.

- 12 Legimus¹ etiam quod patrem Loth inebriauerint filiae in eo monte, ad quem timentes incendia Sodomitana confugerant et habitabant in spelunca. conuenit ebrietati atque concurrat aetas, sexus,² solitudo, locus³ ferarum magis latibulis quam humanis aptior domiciliis. fuit itaque ebrietas
- 13 origo incesti, pessimae generatricis⁴ partus deterior. at non Abraham¹ uinum in suo conuiuio ministrabat: immolabat uitulum et butyrum et lac etiam angelis hospitibus exhibebat²—caeli dominum, mundi⁸ agnoscebat⁴ auctorem—; uinum enim exhibere non poterat. sed recte illic deerat
- 14 materia⁵ peccati, ubi erat remissio⁶ peccatorum. denique¹ adnuntiauit eum Iohannes² neque manducans panem neque bibens uinum; qui enim Christum adnuntiat ab omni uitiorum incentiuo³ praestare se debet alienum. uicit igitur sanctum Noe uel⁴ etiam Loth Abrahae nepotem⁵ ebrietas, quorum alter, cum ieiunaret, diluui⁶ superstes fuit, alter
- 15 incendio. Moysen¹ quoque cognouimus sitiendi populo aquarum² amaritudines temperasse, non uina. cui petra³ aquam uomuit potuit et uini abundantia⁴ non deesse. denique deus dixit: percuties⁵ petram, et exiet aqua et bibet populus, non dixit: exiet uinum in populo; periculosum⁶ enim erat uinum ministrare, quod fortiores ferre uix possent.
- 6, 16. Denique Moyses de ieiunio legem¹ dedit, de uino non dedit. ipsum² quoque ieiunantem non uoces magnae, non fulgora et nubes nimbose,³ non fumigans⁴ Sina perterrituit. neque⁵ uero introisset in nubem et uocem dei loquentis de medio ignis sine⁶ periculo salutis audisset nisi munitus⁷ armis ieiunii. quadraginta⁸ enim diebus ieiunauit in monte, cum legem acciperet a⁹ domino deo nostro. et¹⁰ in superioribus

Gen. 19,
33 sq.

Gen. 18,
2 et 8.

Math.
3, 4.

Exod.
15, 25.

Exod.
17, 6;
Num.
20, 11.

Exod. 19,
16. sq.
Exod.
24, 18.

Exod.
24, 18.
Exod. 32,
1 et 6.

the drunken limbs of the intoxicated are uncovered. From this arises irreverent laughter, from this is lust inflamed, so that with a much greater intoxication do wines trouble those whose eyes and mind they make drunk than those whose bodies they prostrate.

12. We read also that Lot's daughters made their father drunk on that mountain to which they had fled in fear of the fires of Sodom and in which they were dwelling in a cave. Age, sex, solitude, and a place more fitted for the dens of wild beasts than for the dwellings of men, suited and conspired to drunkenness. And so drunkenness was the origin of incest, an offspring worse than its wretched mother. 13. But Abraham did not serve wine at his feast: he sacrificed a calf and he offered butter and milk even to his angel guests—he recognised the Lord of heaven, the author of the world—, for he could not serve wine. And rightly there the occasion of sin was wanting where there was the remission of sins. 14. Hence, John neither eating bread nor drinking wine announced Him; for he who announces Christ must show himself free from every incentive to vices. Therefore drunkenness overcame the holy Noe and also Lot the nephew of Abraham; of whom one, because he fasted was a survivor of the deluge, the other, of the fire. 15. Likewise we know that Moses tempered for his thirsting people the bitterness of waters, not wines. To him for whom the rock poured forth water even an abundance of wine could not be lacking. Therefore, God said: Thou shalt strike the rock, and water shall come out and the people shall drink. He did not say: "Wine will come out of it among the people;" for it was dangerous to serve wine, which even the stronger men could scarcely take.

6, 16. Consequently Moses issued a law on fasting, about wine he did not legislate. Moreover the mighty voice, the flashes of lightning and the dark cloud, and smoking Sina, all these did not terrify him while fasting. Nor indeed would he have entered into the cloud and have heard the voice of God speaking from the midst of the fire without danger to his safety, unless he had been fortified by the arms of fasting. For he fasted on the mountain forty days when he received the law from the Lord our God. And on the heights of the mountain indeed, the law was being given to

- quidem montis lex dabatur Moysi ieiunanti, in inferioribus populo manducanti praeuaricatio sacrilega luxu¹¹ accendebatur epulantium. quo spectaculo¹² motus fregit tabulas Moyses indignum¹³ iudicans ut ebrio populo lex daretur. itaque tabulas¹⁴ legis, quas accepit abstinencia, conteri¹⁵ fecit
- 17 ebrietas. quid uero alia dicam? nonne sterilitatem¹ matris Sampso uini abstinencia fecundauit et parientem fecit ex sterili quoniam iuxta² praeceptum domini uinum non bibit? nonne Annam³ non manducantem exaudiuit dominus et infecunditatem⁴ eius soluere ieiunia? ex⁵ quibus duo (qui) generati sunt, unus fortissimus, alius obseruantissimus, dignos se praebuerunt, qui ieiunii gremio⁶ diu foti et quodam abstinenciae fusi utero viderentur. idem itaque Sampso,⁷ qui matris sobrietate generatus est, allophylorum⁸ insultantium
- 18 sibi ebrietate est uindicatus. Helisaeus¹ uates, qui de magistro didicerat parsimoniam, cum filios aleret prophetarum, uitis agrestis grumulis² mensas³ onerabat et ineptis⁴ siluestribus hospitalis humanitatis implebat officium. quorum offensi amaritudine cum manducare non possent, leuis farinae aspersione⁵ omnem illam amaritudinem⁶ temperauit propheticae⁷ munere abstinenciae ueneni⁸ uires euacuans.⁹
- 7, 19, Est¹ quaedam creaturae natura, quam amiantum uocant, nullo facilis² igne consumi, quae inposita focus ignescit, ilico sublata de flamma tamquam aquarum infusione³ munda resplendet. talia⁴ erant Hebraeorum puerorum corpora, quae de ieiunio in amianti transformata⁵ naturam uaporem ignis non ad dispendium⁶ sui, sed ad gratiam mutuabantur.⁷ denique cum furerent fornacis incendia, ut ultra quadraginta cubitos flamma⁸ per circuitum funderetur consumens plurimos quos repperiret Chaldaeorum, qui naphtha,⁹ pice et stuppa atque sarmento alimenta¹⁰ ignibus ministrabant, ubi cum ieiunio ingressi sunt, discusso ardore flammaram in medio fornacis coepere statim roris¹¹ spiritu refrigerantis

Exod. 32, 19.

Iud. 13, 4 et 14.

1 Reg. 1, 13, 15 et 20.

Iud. 16, 23 et 29 sq.

4 Reg. 4, 38 sq.

Dan. 3, 46 sq.

the fasting Moses, while, at its foot, a sacrilegious transgression was being enkindled in the people as they ate with the extravagance of banqueters. Moved by this sight, Moses broke the tables, judging it unworthy that a law be given to a drunken people. And so the tables of the law which abstinence received, drunkenness caused to be shattered. 17. But why should I speak further? Did not abstinence from wine make fertile the barrenness of Samson's mother and cause her to be fruitful instead of barren, since according to the precept of the Lord she did not drink wine? Did not the Lord give heed to Anna when she did not eat, and did not fastings remove her unfruitfulness? And the two sons who were born of them, the one very strong, the other very religious, showed themselves worthy of appearing to have long been nourished in the bosom of fasting, and brought forth, as it were, from the womb of abstinence. And so that same Sampson, who was born through the sobriety of his mother, was avenged through the drunkenness of the gentiles who taunted him. 18. The prophet, Elisaeus, who had learned frugality from his master, when he fed the sons of the prophets, loaded his tables with the hulls of wild vines and with the unseemly fruits of the forest fulfilled the duty of kind hospitality. When vexed by the bitterness of these things they could not eat, by the sprinkling of light meal he tempered all that bitterness, destroying the power of the poison by virtue of his prophetic abstinence.

7, 19. There is a kind of natural substance that men call earth-flax, which is not easily consumed by fire. This substance when placed on the hearth, ignites; but immediately, when removed from the flame, it shines as if clear water had been poured upon it. Like this were the bodies of the Hebrew youths, which having been transformed by fasting into the nature of earth-flax, received the heat of fire, not to their loss but to their gain. Therefore, although the fires of the furnace so raged that the flames spread upward in a circuit for more than forty cubits, consuming many of the Chaldeans whom they reached—who were supplying fuel to the flames with brimstone, pitch, tow, and dry sticks—; when they entered there fasting, the fury of the flames in the middle of the furnace was dissipated; and they immediately began to grow moist

- umescere, ita ut eorum nullus capillus¹² capitis exureretur, 20 quia illam quoque ieiunia comam pauperant. Daniel,¹ uir desideriorum, trium ebdomadam ieiunio leones quoque docuit ieiunare. missus² in lacum in³ adamantis rigorem abstinentiae soliditate membra duratus non patuit⁴ uulneri. sic eum constrinxerant ieiunia, ut in eius corpore ferarum morsibus locus esse non posset. clausa⁵ tenebant leones ora, quae abstinentiae⁶ propheticæ sanctitas comprimebat, ut ea ferae aperire non possent meriti⁷ quibusdam uinculis alligata.
- 21 ieiunium¹ itaque uirtutem ignis extinxit, ieiunium ora obstruxit leonum, ieiunium maris fluentia solidauit,² ieiunium petram soluit³ in fontes aquarum, uirtute ieiunii contra suam mutata naturam et fluctus obriguit et petra inundauit.
- 8, 22 Et quid¹ uetustis utar exemplis, cum abundet² ieiunium etiam praesentium muneribus gratiarum? quis³ deteriorauit domum suam ieiunio, quis inminuit facultates? cui non suspecta luxuries, cui non uenerabilis⁴ abstinentia? cuius torum⁵ appetiuit parsimonia, cuius pudorem non laesit ebrietas? ieiunium continentiae magisterium⁶ est, pudicitiae⁷ disciplina, humilitas⁸ mentis, castigatio⁹ carnis, forma¹⁰ sobrietatis, norma uirtutis, purificatio¹¹ animae, miserationis expensa,¹² lenitatis¹³ institutio, caritatis inlecebra, senilis¹⁴ gratia, custodia iuuentatis,¹⁵ ieiunium est infirmitatis¹⁶ adleuamentum, alimentum¹⁷ salutis. nemo¹⁸ crudelitatem ieiunando incidit, nullus per continentiam ictum¹⁹ sanguinis sensit, immo nullus non repressit et reppulit. bonum itineris²⁰ uiaticum, bonum totius uitae, bonum in
- 23 mari: sedat naufragia, cibum seruat. graue dicunt esse ieiunium: respondeant quis e¹ ieiunio defecerit, multi in prandio, plerique dum uomunt epulum fudere² animam. quod³ postremo animal ieiunium sibi causam fuisse mortis ingemuit? per⁴ escam laqueus non cauetur, in⁵ esca hamus latet: cibus deducit in foueam, cibus inducit in retia, cibus⁶ uisco etiam aues inligat, cibus uolantes deponit⁷ ad mortem.

Dan. 10,
3 et 11;
6, 16.

Dan.
10, 2.

from the breath of a cooling dew, so that not a hair of their head was burned because those locks of theirs had also been nourished by fastings. 20. Daniel, a man of desires, by a fast of three weeks indeed taught lions to fast. Being sent into the lions' den with his limbs hardened to the rigor of adamant through the firmness of abstinence, he was not susceptible to wounds. So had fastings compressed him that there was no place in his body for the teeth of wild beasts. The lions held their mouths closed; mouths which the sanctity of the prophet's abstinence restrained, so that, bound as it were, by the bonds of merit, the beasts could not open them. 21. Fasting therefore extinguished the power of fire, fasting closed the mouths of lions, fasting made solid the streams of the sea, fasting dissolved rock into fountains of water; changed against their own nature by the power of fasting, both the wave became hardened and the rock overflowed.

8, 22. But why should I use ancient examples when fasting abounds also in the rewards of present favors? Who has made his own home worse by fasting, who has thereby impaired his wealth? To whom is luxury not suspect, to whom is abstinence not venerable? Whose bed has frugality lusted after, whose modesty has drunkenness not offended? Fasting is the instruction of continence, the discipline of chastity, the humility of the mind, the chastisement of flesh, the mark of sobriety, the norm of virtue, the purification of the soul, the expenditure of compassion, the foundation of gentleness, the allurements of charity, the grace of age, the protection of youth, fasting is the alleviation of infirmity, the nourishment of health. No one through fasting has fallen into overloading of the stomach, no one through continence has suffered apoplexy; on the contrary no one has not thereby checked and repelled such things. It is a good viaticum for a journey, a good viaticum for one's whole life, a good viaticum on the sea: it stays shipwrecks, it husbands food. 23. They say that fasting is severe: let them tell who has died from fasting. Many while dining, many while they were vomiting up their feast, have poured forth their souls. Finally what animal has bemoaned that fasting was the cause of its death? On account of food the snare is not avoided, in food the hook lies hidden; food leads down into the quae non propter uentrem pericula? muta animalia crimen nesciunt et in hoc solo tamquam pro crimine puniuntur. ieiunium sobrietas⁸ mentis est. hoc uigent sensus, in hoc iudicia tractantur, in conuiuio pocula. ieiunium custodit disciplinam, luxuriam sequitur inopia. mater⁹ est luxuria famis Tob. 4, 13. secundum¹⁰ propheticum dictum. ieiunium quietem diligit, luxuria inquietudinem:¹¹ ieiunium otia serit, luxus negotia.

- 24 Ferietur¹ aliquando coquorum mastigiarum machaera, requiescat obsonator,² qui antequam luceat fores³ pulsat alienas et tamquam bellum aliquod immineat excitat dormientes. turbatum uides, anhelantem⁴ aduertis.⁵ interrogas quae causa perturbationis. pascit,⁶ inquit, dominus meus, ubi uinum melius ueneat quaerit, ubi durior uulua curetur, ubi iecur mollius, ubi fasianus pinguior, ubi⁷ piscis recentior. cursitat⁸ per diuersa et cum imnuenerit, summo⁹ cursu properat, inquietat¹⁰ dominum somnolentum,¹¹ auctionatur¹² pretia. si pretium mouerit piscis, nusquam meliores adserit¹³ inueniri, immo deesse. heri,¹⁴ inquit, tempestas, hodie procella; uix istum potui latentem deprehendere. multi concursant in macello. si tu reddideris, alter plus dabit, et quid exhibebis in prandio? istius uini ille natalis¹⁵ est, haec ex illo lacu lecta ostrea.¹⁶ talis¹⁷ fit de singulis licitatio; hasta¹⁸ quaedam agitur inter obsonatorem et pastorem. turbatus addicit¹⁹ patrimonium, rogat adhuc per quos suorum bonorum iura minuantur. curritur ad coquinam,¹ fit ingens strepitus, fit tumultus. tota exagitur familia, maledicunt omnes, quod nulla² his requies detur. tandem aliquando da requiem coquo, statue pincernae³ dexteram: summum gelu riget.⁴ ille in frigida⁵ exercet manus. illi marmora lauantur; mundant⁶ pauimenta uino madida et spinis⁷ cooperta piscium. quanti dum ambulant uulnerantur! in ipso conuiuio clamor epulantium, gemitus uapulantium.⁸ si quid pitfall, food draws into the snare, food entangles even birds with birdlime, food brings down flying creatures to their death. What dangers are there not on account of the stomach? Dumb animals are ignorant of crime and in this alone are punished, as it were, for crime. Fasting is sobriety of the mind. Through this the mind waxes strong; in this opinions are discussed; at the banquet, cups. Fasting maintains discipline, want follows luxury. Luxury is the mother of famine according to the saying of the prophet. Fasting loves rest, luxury restlessness: fasting sows repose; luxury, anxiety.

24. Let the knife of the scoundrel cooks for once keep holiday; let the caterer rest, who before it is daylight knocks at the doors of others, and, as if some war were imminent, awakens those sleeping. You see that he is disturbed, you notice him panting. You ask what is the cause of his trouble. He says "My master feasts and he seeks where the best wine is sold, where the firmest sow's matrix is kept, where, the tenderest liver, where, the fattest pheasant, where, the freshest fish." He runs about everywhere and when he has found out, he hastens at top speed, he arouses his sleepy master. He auctions off his prices. If the price of fish disturbs him, he asserts that nowhere can better be found, indeed they are not to be had. "Yesterday" he says, "there was a tempest, to-day, there is a storm; scarcely was I able to seize upon this one as it lay hidden. Many are gathering in the market. If you do not take it, another will give more and what will you serve at dinner? That is the age of this wine, this is the choice oyster from that lake." Such is the bargaining made over each thing; a spear, as it were, is driven between caterer and vender. In his excitement he sells his patrimony, he continues to ask through whom the rights of his property are impaired. 25. There is rushing to the kitchen, a great noise arises, an uproar is made. The entire household is in confusion, all are cursing because no rest is given them. Now at last, give rest to the cook, raise the butler's right hand, his fingers are stiff with cold. Thae man employs his hands in icy water. Those wash marbles; they clean floors soaked with wine and covered with fish bones. How many are wounded while they walk about! At the feast itself there is the shouting of the forte displicuit amicis, rident: tu indignaris. sileat⁹ aliquando domus a multis perturbationibus huc atque illuc discurrentium,¹⁰ a sono immolatorum¹¹ animalium, uacet fumo et semustolatorum nidore.¹² non coquinam, sed carnificinam¹³ putes, proelium geri, non prandium curari: ita¹⁴ sanguine omnia natant.

- 26 Malae dominae¹ seruitur gulae, quae semper expetit, numquam expletur. quid enim insatiabilis uentre? hodie suscipit, cras exigit. cum² impletus fuerit, disputatur de continentia: cum digesserit,³ uale uirtutibus dicitur, quaerit luxuriam. inter pocula philosophia praedicatur, inter philosophos uina laudantur. *uigiliae*⁴ inquit et cholera et tortura

Eccli.
31, 28.

- 27 uiro insatiabili. manducat et paulo post eum paenitet. non¹ illum diutius sua intemperantia delectauit diuitem, qui *induebatur purpura et bysso et epulabatur cottidie splendide, cuius*² *ad ianuam Lazarus ille mendicus iacebat plenus ulceribus, cupiens*³ saturari ex his quae de mensa cadebant diuitis. paulo post cum esset mortuus, coepit rogare positus⁴ in inferno, ut⁵ extremum digiti sui pauper ille in aquam intingeret et refrigeraret linguam eius, quae ardebat incendio. ubi illae copiae, ubi illae ebrietates?⁶ sitit qui inebriabatur, abundat⁷ qui mendicabat.⁸ in ipso conuiuio dum bibunt, sitiunt et cum⁹ inebriati fuerint, amplius bibunt. quasi aperto gurgite uinum iam non bibitur, sed infunditur: poculum non libatur,¹⁰ sed exinanitur.

Luc.
16, 19.

Luc.
16, 20.

Luc.
16, 21.

Luc.
16, 24.

- 9, 28 *Spinae*¹ inquit nascuntur in manu ebriosi, quia ipse se manibus suis uulnerat, ipse ulcera sibi in pectus deicit. his spinis² scindit uestimentum³ fidei quod accepit et thesaurum suum seruare non poterit; omnis⁴ enim ebriosus et fornicator egebit et induet⁵ se scissa uestimenta insipientiae. et ideo potentes⁶ uinum prohibentur bibere, *ne*⁷ cum biberint, obliuiscantur sapientiam. denique bibebant uinum in ebrietatem

Prov.
26, 9.

Prov.
31, 5.

banqueters, the groans of servants being beaten. If perchance anything has displeased your friends, they laugh; you get indignant. For once let the house be quiet from the great noise and confusion of those running hither and thither, from the sound of slain animals; let it be free from the smoke and smell of half burned meats. You would think it not a kitchen, but a slaughter house; that a battle was being fought, not a dinner being prepared; so does everything swim in blood.

26. One is a slave to an evil mistress, the appetite, that is always seeking and is never satisfied. For what is more insatiable than the stomach? To-day it receives, to-morrow it demands. When it has been filled there is talk about temperance: when it has digested its food, farewell is bidden to virtues, it seeks indulgence. Between cups philosophy is lauded, among philosophers wines are praised. Watchings he says, and choler, and gripes are with an insatiable man. He eats and a little later he repents him. 27. Not very long did his intemperance delight that rich man, who was clothed in purple and fine linen; and feasted sumptuously every day, at whose gate Lazarus the beggar lay full of sores, desiring to be filled with those things which fell from the rich man's table. When shortly after he died, being in hell, he began to ask that the poor man might dip the tip of his finger in water and cool his tongue, which was burning with the fire. Where were those riches, where those carousals? He thirsts who was wont to be drunk, he abounds who asked for alms. At the very feast while they drink, they thirst; and when they have become drunk they drink more. Just as if a whirlpool had been opened, wine is no longer drunk but is poured in; the cup is not sipped but drained.

9, 28. Thorns, he says, grow in the hands of a drunkard, since he wounds himself with his own hands; he himself casts ulcers into his own heart. With these thorns he tears the garment of faith which he has received, and he will not be able to guard his own treasure: for every drunkard and fornicator will want and will put on himself the torn garment of folly. And so men in power are forbidden to drink wine, lest when they drink they forget wisdom. 29. Therefore the men in power were drinking wine unto drunkenness who desired eagerly to yield themselves up to

- potentes qui Olopherni¹ principi militiae regis Assyriorum se tradere gestiebant, sed non bibebat femina Iudith, ieiunans² omnibus diebus uiduitatis suae praeter festorum³ dierum sollemnitates.⁴ his⁵ armis munita processit et omnem Assyriorum circumuenit exercitum. sobrii uigore⁶ consilii abstulit Olophernis caput, seruauit⁷ pudicitiam, uictoriam reciperauit. haec enim succincta⁸ ieiunio in castris praetendebat⁹ ailenis, ille uino¹⁰ sepultus iacebat, ut ictum uulneris sentire non posset. itaque unius mulieris ieiunium
- 30 innumeros¹¹ strauit¹² exercitus ebriorum. Esther quoque pulchrior facta ieiunio — dominus¹ enim gratiam sobriae mentis augebat — omne genus suum, id est totum populum² Iudaeorum a persecutionis³ acerbitatibus liberauit, ita⁴ ut regem sibi faceret esse subiectum, non libidinis ardore flammatum, sed caelesti miseratione conuersum, ita ut et poena in impium retorqueretur et honor sacris redderetur altaribus.⁵ itaque illa quae triduo⁶ ieiunauit continuo et corpus suum aqua lauit plus placuit et uindictam⁷ rettulit. Aman autem dum se regali iactat conuiuio, inter ipsa uina poenam⁸ suae
- 31 ebrietatis exsoluit. est ergo ieiunium reconciliationis¹ sacrificium, uirtutis² incrementum, quod fecit etiam feminas fortiores augmento³ gratiae. ieiunium⁴ nescit faeneratorem, non sortem⁵ faenoris nouit, non redolet usuras mensa ieiunantium, non strangulant filium continentis uiri paternae centesimae, non uexant uiduam oppignorata⁶ sobrii uiri iura defuncti,⁷ non defaenerata⁸ excludit heredem aula⁹ ieiuni.
- 32 etiam ipsis ieiunium conuiuio dat gratiam. dulciores¹ post famem epulae fiunt, quae adsiduitate fastidio sunt et diurna continuatione uiliscunt.² condimentum³ cibi ieiunium est. quanto audior adpetentia,⁴ tanto esca iocundior. commendat sitis poculum. nescit uini quaerere uenustates⁵ qui quidquid hauserit transmittit⁶ ad satietatem, non⁷ ad iudicium nare suspendit. usu etiam pretiosa degenerant.⁸ quorum autem difficilis possessio, eorum grata perfunctio.⁹ ipse¹⁰ sol post noctem gratior, ipsa lux post tenebras splendidior et post

Iudith
13, 19;
5, 1.

Iudith 7,
22; 8, 6; 12, 9
et 20.

Esth. 4,
16; 5, 9;
7, 1, sq.

Holofernes, the leader of the army of the king of the Assyrians; but the woman Judith did not drink, fasting all the days of her widowhood except during the solemnities of feast days. Fortified by these arms she went forth and circumvented the entire army of the Assyrians. Through the vigor of her sober counsel she carried off the head of Holofernes, preserved her chastity, regained victory. For she, girt with fasting, watched in the camp of the enemy; he lay buried in wine so that he could not feel the force of the wound. And thus the fasting of one woman overthrew the innumerable armies of drunkards. 30. Esther also, made more beautiful by fasting—for the Lord increased the beauty of her sober mind—freed her entire race, that is all the people of the Jews, from the bitternesses of persecution; so that she made the king subject to her, not because he was inflamed with the fire of passion, but was moved with heavenly pity, so that punishment was turned back upon the wicked and honor was restored to the sacred altars. And so she who fasted continuously for three days and bathed her body with water was more pleasing and paid back vengeance. But while Aman boasted at the royal banquet, in the very midst of wines he paid the penalty of his drunkenness.

31. Therefore is fasting a sacrifice of reconciliation, an increment of virtue, which has made even women stronger through an increase of grace. Fasting knows not the money-lender, is ignorant of the nature of interest; the table of those who fast is not redolent of usuries; the interest on the debt contracted by his father does not strangle the son of a temperate man; the pledged rights of a sober man dead do not trouble the widow; the palace of a fasting man, uninvolved in debt, does not exclude its heir. 32. Fasting gives grace even to banquets themselves. After hunger feasts become more delightful, which through frequent succession become a source of disgust and through daily occurrence grow cheap. Fasting is the condiment of food. The more eager the appetite, the more pleasing the food. Thirst commends the cup. He knows not how to seek the pleasures of wine who goes to satiety in whatever he drinks, who does not raise his nose to pass judgment. Even precious things deteriorate with use. Moreover, of whatever things the possession is difficult, of these the enjoyment is pleasing. The uigilias sopor dulcior, ipsa salus post aegritudinis¹¹ temptamenta¹² iocundior. ab ipso mundi¹³ conditore didicimus saepe diuersitatibus¹⁴ cumulari gratiam. patrocinator¹⁵ ergo et conuiuio fames et gratior fit mensa ieiuniis.

- 10, 33 Mystica¹ quoque mensa ieiunio comparatur, illa mensa, de qua dicit Dauid: parasti² in conspectu meo mensam aduersum eos qui tribulant me. famis acquiritur pretio et poculum³ illud inebrians sobrietate caelestium⁴ sacramentorum siti quaeritur. dixit enim dominus: qui⁵ sititis ite ad aquam et quicumque non habetis argentum ite et emite et bibite et manducate. et alibi ait: ecce⁶ qui seruiunt mihi manducabunt, uos uero esuriatis: ecce qui seruiunt mihi bibent, uos autem sitietis. qui uos nisi qui ante potastis? de quibus supra dixit: parastis⁷ daemoniis mensam et implestis fortunae poculum. ergo si ad⁸ mensam illam uenerabilem ieiunia nos sancta perducunt, si hac fame illa quae sunt aeterna⁹ mercamur, quid de iis dubitamus quae in usu humano sunt, quod etiam haec nobis faciat suauiora ieiunium? non omnis autem fames acceptabile¹ ieiunium facit, sed famis, quae dei² timore suscipitur. considera.³ quadragesima⁴ totis praeter sabbatum et dominicam ieiunatur diebus. hoc⁵ ieiunium domini pascha concludit. uenit iam dies⁶ resurrectionis, baptizantur⁷ electi, ueniunt ad altare,⁸ accipiunt sacramentum,⁹ sitientes totis hauriunt uenis. merito dicunt singuli refecti¹⁰ spiritali cibo et spiritali potu: parasti¹¹ in conspectu meo mensam, et poculum tuum inebrians quam praeclarum! non sola autem fames quaeritur, sed plena disciplina¹² ieiunii. denique aliis dicitur: in¹³ diebus enim ieiuniorum uestrorum inuenitis uoluntates uestras et omnis subditos uobis stimulat. an ad iudicia et rixas ieiunatis et percutitis pugnis? ut quid mihi tale ieiunium, ita ut audiat in clamore uox uestra? non hoc ieiunium ego elegi et diem, ad humiliandam animam suam homi-

Psalm.
22, 5.
Psalm.
22, 5.

Is. 55, 1.

Is. 65, 13.

Is. 65, 11.

Psalm.
22, 5.

Is. 58,
3-6.

very sun is more pleasing after the night; the very light is brighter after darkness and sleep is sweeter after wakefulness; health itself is more enjoyable after the trials of sickness. From the Maker Himself of the world we have learned that grace is often increased through diversities. Accordingly hunger is the patron of the banquet, and the table is made more pleasing through fasting.

10, 33. The Mystical Table also is obtained by fasting, that Table of which David says: Thou hast prepared a table before me, against them that afflict me. Hunger is acquired at a price, and that cup which inebriates with the sobriety of the heavenly Sacraments is sought by thirst. For the Lord has said: You who thirst go to the water: and whoever of you have no money, go and buy and drink and eat. And elsewhere He says: Behold they who serve me shall eat, but you shall be hungry: behold they who serve me shall drink, and you shall be thirsty. Who are "you" unless you who have drunk before, concerning whom He has said above: You have set a table for demons, and have filled the cup of Fortune? Therefore if holy fasting leads us to that venerable table, if by this hunger we can purchase those things which are eternal, why do we hesitate about the things which are within the sphere of human use, since fasting makes these also more pleasing for us?

34. Not all hunger, however, makes fasting acceptable, but the hunger which is entered upon through fear of God. Recall to mind: During Lent there is fasting on all days except the Sabbath and Sunday. The Pasch of the Lord closes this fast. Now comes the day of the Resurrection, the "elect" are baptised, they come to the altar, they receive the Sacrament, thirsting they drink through all their veins. Rightly do they say, each being refreshed by spiritual food and spiritual drink: Thou hast prepared a table before me, and thy chalice which inebriateth me, how goodly it is! Hunger alone however, is not demanded, but the full discipline of fasting. Therefore to others is it said: Behold in the day of your fast you find your own wills, and you goad on all who are subject to you. Or do you fast for debates and strifes, and strike with your fists? Why is there such a fast for me so that your cry is heard in clamor? Not this fast, have I chosen, for a man to afflict his soul even for a day; not if thou shouldst wind nem, nec si flectas ut circulum collum tuum, cinerem etiam et cilicium substernas, nec sic uocabitis ieiunium acceptum. non tale ieiunium ego elegi, dicit dominus. quod ieiunium improbetur audiuius, nunc audiamus quod sit probabile. sed¹⁴ solue omnem colligationem iniustitiae tuae, dissolue obligationes uiolentarum commutationum, dimitte confractos in remissionem et omnem conscriptionem iniquam disrumpe. frange panem tuum esurienti et egenos non habentes tectum induc in domum tuam. si uideris nudum, cooperi et domesticos seminis tui non despicias. uides quae species sit et forma ieiunii, qui mentis¹⁵ habitus, ut orationi¹⁶ uaces, ut in¹⁷ lege dei die et nocte meditare.

Is. 58,
6 sq.

- 35 Ipsa figura¹ corporis plena grauitatis. nullus² rubor ebrietatis circumfusus genas, qui³ intuentium offendat aspectus, sed uultus casto micat pallore⁴ reuerendus.⁵ sermo grauior, oculus uerecundior, gressus⁶ stabilior atque moderatior; plerumque enim turbatiore incessu proditur motus⁷ animorum. uultus intentior et quidam cogitationis⁸ suae arbiter et tacitus⁹ cordis interpret, ut neque tristitiam praetextat¹⁰ neque soluatur¹¹ risu incontinenti.¹² non enim hoc superfluum¹³ putes nostrae esse commonitionis,¹⁴ cum sapientia¹⁵ in euangelio dicat: cum¹⁶ autem ieiunatis, nolite fieri sicut hypocritae tristes. ideo¹⁷ dixit hypocritas, eo quod simulatione alienam¹⁸ personam induant, sicut in scaena qui tragoedias canunt (et) pro eorum dictis quorum personas¹⁹ gerunt motus suos excitant, ut aut irascantur aut maereant uel exultent; adfectant²⁰ enim isti ut ieiunare uideantur, hominibus magis quam deo cupientes probari, quod faciebant

Matth.
6, 16.

- 36 Iudaei. et¹ ideo nobis dicitur: uos² autem cum ieiunatis, unguite caput uestrum et faciem uestram lauete, ne pareatis hominibus quia ieiunatis, sed patri uestro, qui est in abscondito. et pater uester, qui uidet in abscondito, reddet uobis. quid est unguite caput uestrum? sed³ et luxuriosi dicunt: 'uino et unguentis nos repleamus'. unguento enim se ungunt qui corporei odoris gratiam quaerunt: sed illa unguenta libidinis inlecebram mouere consuerunt. aliud est sobrietatis⁴ unguentum, de quo dicit ecclesia ad sponsum:

Matth.
6, 17 sq.

thy head about like a circle, and spread sackcloth and ashes, and not thus will ye call an acceptable fast. Not such a fast have I chosen, says the Lord. We have heard what kind of fasting is rejected, now let us hear the kind that is commendable. Loose every band of injustice, loose the bonds of violent contracts, let them that are broken go free, and tear asunder every unjust writing. Deal thy bread to the hungry, and bring the needy and the harborless into thy house. If thou shalt see one naked, cover him, and thou shalt not despise the domestics of thy seed. You see what the appearance and nature of fasting is, what the disposition of the mind should be, so that you may have time for prayer, that you may meditate upon the law of God day and night.

35. The figure itself of the body is full of dignity. No blush of drunkenness is suffused on the cheeks to offend the gaze of onlookers, but the countenance is bright with a chaste pallor inspiring respect. Speech is rather serious, the eye rather modest, the gait rather firm and moderate; for frequently a disturbance of the mind is betrayed by the disordered pace. The rather intent look is, as it were, both the arbiter of its thought, and the silent interpreter of the heart; so that it neither disguises sadness nor is it changed by immoderate laughter. For do not think that this is unnecessary for our admonition, because Wisdom says in the Gospel: And when you fast be not as the hypocrites sad. He said hypocrites for this reason, that they assume another character through pretense, just as those who perform tragedies on the stage excite their own feelings in keeping with the words of those whose characters they represent so that they either become angry, or grieve, or rejoice; for they put on that they may appear to be fasting, desiring to be approved more by men than by God, as the Jews did. 36. And therefore it is said to us: But ye when ye fast anoint your head and wash your face, that ye appear not to men to fast, but to your Father who is in secret: and your Father who seeth in secret will repay ye. What is “anoint your head”? And even voluptuous people say ‘let us provide ourselves with wine and ointments.’ For they anoint themselves with ointment who seek the charm of a perfumed body: but those ointments are wont to produce the allure-ment of passion. Different is the ointment of sobriety, of which the *unguentum*⁵ exinanitum nomen tuum, aliud oleum, quo artus⁶ animae et quaedam membra pinguescunt. unde et David ait: *inpinguasti*⁷ in oleo caput meum; hoc est oleum⁸ laetitiae, quo unctus est Iesus Christus a patre deo, ut prae omnibus suis emineret consortibus. hoc iubet ungi caput nostrum, ut oleo laetitiae obducatur omnis simulata tristitia, ne uidearis ieiunium tuum uendere hominibus, ne⁹ uidearis contristari in animae salute; nemo¹⁰ enim tristis coronatur, nemo maestus triumphat. unge ergo caput tuum, ubi sensus sapientis sunt: *oculi*¹¹ enim sapientis in capite eius. ad¹² mysteria uocaris et nescis; disces, cum ueneris. at reminiscere illud: *sicut*¹³ unguentum in capite, quod descendit in barbam: tunc cognosces quid sit ungere caput uestrum, quomodo placueris deo, ut tibi sua patefaceret sacramenta, daret gratiam spiritalem. est¹ et aliud caput mysticum. quod illud? audi: *caput*² mulieris uir, caput autem uiri Christus. mitte in Christum, mitte etiam in caput eius unguentum; caput³ eius deus est. illa mulier ecclesiae typum⁴ gerens, quae⁵ in caput eius misit unguentum, confessa est eius diuinitatem, et quae in pedes misit confessa est eius passionem.⁶ utraque laudatur: et tu fac quo lauderis, quo remissionem⁷ accipias peccatorum. *laua*⁸ faciem tuam, emunda⁹ animam tuam peccatricem, laua conscientiam tuam. index¹⁰ enim facies plerumque est conscientiae et quidam tacitus¹¹ sermo mentis, cum aut peccato compungimur¹² aut integritate laetamur. noli¹³ hanc exterminare faciem, laua illam et omnem sordem conscientiae tuae dilue. exterminat faciem suam qui¹⁴ aliud corde gerit, aliud foris praetendit. non nos uelut quodam peripetasmate¹⁵ operiamus: quod intus est foris luceat, quod foris est intus operetur.¹⁶ nemo in ieiunio culpam includat, pure ferat innocentiam; ieiunium etenim culpae interfectorium¹⁷ est.

Cant.
1, 3.Psalm.
22, 5.Psalm.
44, 8.Eccles.
2, 14.Psalm.
132, 2.1 Cor.
11, 3.1 Cor.
11, 3.
Matth.
26, 7.Luc. 7,
37 sq.Matth.
6, 17.Matth.
6, 16.

11, 38 Nemo¹ amarioribus praeoptet dulcia. dulcis uoluptas uidetur, amarum ieiunium. hoc amaro² illud dulce³ tollatur.

Church says to her bridegroom: Thy name is as ointment poured out; different is the oil with which the joints and limbs, as it were, of the soul, become shining. Wherefore David also says: Thou hast anointed my head with oil; that is the oil of gladness with which Jesus Christ was anointed by God the Father, that He might be preëminent about all His fellows. With this He orders our head to be anointed that all feigned sorrow may be covered over with the oil of gladness, lest you may seem to sell your fasting to men, lest you may seem to be sad in the salvation of your soul; for no sorrowful man is crowned, no mournful man triumphs. Anoint therefore thy head, wherein are the senses of the wise man; for the eyes of a wise man are in his head. You are called to the Mysteries and you know it not; you will learn when you come. But recall this: like the precious ointment on the head, that ran down upon the beard; then you will know what it is to anoint your head; how pleasing you are to God, that He should throw open His Sacraments to you, that He should give you spiritual grace.

37. There is also another head, a mystical head. What is that? Hear this: The head of the woman is the man; but the head of man is Christ. Pour ointment upon Christ, pour ointment also upon His Head; His Head is God. That woman, typifying the Church, who poured ointment upon His Head, confessed His Divinity; and she who poured it upon His feet confessed His Passion. Both are praised. Do you also that whereby you may be praised, whereby you may receive the remission of sins. Wash your face, cleanse your sinful soul, wash your conscience. For the face is often the index of the conscience; and, as it were, the silent speech of the mind, when we either feel remorse for sin or rejoice in our innocence. Do not destroy this face; wash it, and cleanse out all sordidness from your conscience. He destroys his face who cherishes one thing in his heart, and outwardly pretends another. Let us not cover ourselves, as it were, with a kind of carpet; let what is within shine without, let what is without operate within. Let no one enclose sin in his fasting, let him carry his innocence purely; for fasting is the means of destroying sin.

11, 38. Let no one prefer sweet things to bitter. Pleasure seems sweet; fasting, bitter. Let that sweetness be destroyed by

- solent amara etiam ipsis plus prodesse corporibus. sicut⁴ enim cum in intimis puerorum uisceribus uermes ex cibi indigestione⁵ nascuntur extingui non queunt nisi cum amarior potus infunditur aut mendicamentorum uis⁶ inolescitur⁷ asperior, quorum odore moriantur, ita profundum animae
- 39 uirtus ingressa ieiunii culpam latentem interficit. quid¹ Esau seruum fratri suo fecit? nonne esca ad² horam dulcis, amara in posterum? quid Iacob dominum fratri dedit? nonne contemptus³ cibi ad tempus amarior, sed salubris in reliquum? ipsa corpora dulcibus frequenter inflantur et melle iecur tenditur, idem tamen escae amaritudine temperatur. ideo non mediocris, sed laudata quaestio: de⁴ manducante exiuit esca et de forti dulce. alii habent: et de tristi dulce, Graeci codices maxime. sed et forte⁵ laboriosum est; exit
- 40 enim dulce⁶ de tristitia uel labore. noli¹ ergo te iactare, cum ieiunas, noli gloriari, ne nihil tibi prosit ieiunium; quae² enim ad ostentationem fiunt non in futurum fructum iam extendent suum, sed praesentium mercedem consumunt. Helias³ in deserto erat, ne quis ieiunantem videret nisi soli corui, cum pascerent. Helisaeus⁴ in deserto erat, ubi non inueniretur esca nisi amara. Iohannes⁵ in deserto erat, ubi solas locustas aut mel siluestre inueniret. ieiunantibus epulae pio angelorum ministerio⁶ deferebantur. prandebat⁷ Daniel inter ieiunantes leones. ille⁸ prandebat alienum prandium, ferae non tangebant suum. ieiunantibus⁹ epulae uolant, prandentibus pedes uacillant: ieiunantibus¹⁰ de caelo manna descendit, epulantibus culpa praeuaricationis¹¹ ascendit.

Gen. 25,
29 sq.Iud.
14, 14.3 Reg.
17, 6.
4 Reg.
4, 39.
Matth.
3, 4.Dan. 14,
32 sq.Exod.
16, 13.
Exod. 16,
15; 32, 6.

- 12, 41. Sed quid hoc est? dum de ieiunio disputo, strepitus audio conuiuiorum. nisi fallor, in sermone meo redoluit prandium. sonus ergo litterarum inuitat, impatientiae¹ exempla non terrent. etenim² qui ieiunantem et ea quae legis³ sunt feren-

Exod. 32,
1 sq.

this bitterness. Bitter things are wont to be more beneficial even to our bodies themselves. For just as worms, when they are produced in the inmost vitals of children through the indigestion of food, cannot be destroyed unless a bitter potion be administered, or medicines of a pungent quality be injected, from the odor of which they die, so the virtue of fasting having entered the depth of the soul destroys the hidden sin. 39. What made Esau the slave of his brother? Was not the food, sweet for the moment, bitter afterwards? What gave Jacob the mastery of his brother? Was not contempt of food bitter temporarily, but salutary thereafter? Our bodies themselves are frequently bloated from sweet things and the liver is distended by honey; yet the same organ is regulated by bitter food. Therefore not trivial, but praiseworthy is the riddle: Out of the eater came forth food, and out of the strong sweetness. Others have: And out of the bitter came forth sweetness, especially the Greek codices. But the "strong" also is toilsome; for sweetness comes forth from bitterness or labor. 40. Therefore do not boast when you fast, do not glory lest fasting profit you nothing; for those things which are done for ostentation will not prolong their fruit into the future, but they consume the reward for present deeds. Elias was in the desert, that no one might see him fast except the ravens alone, when they supplied him with food. Eliseus was in the desert where no food except bitter could be found. John was in the desert, where he could find only locusts and wild honey. Feasts were served to those fasting by the holy ministry of angels. Daniel dined among fasting lions. He dined on the dinner of another, the wild beasts did not taste theirs. Feasts fly to those who fast, the feet stagger of those who dine: manna descended from heaven to those who were fasting, the sin of prevarication ascended from those who were banqueting.

12, 41. But what is this? While I am speaking of fasting, I hear the uproar of banquets. Unless I am mistaken food has become redolent in my sermon. Therefore the sound of language invites, examples of impatience do not disturb me. For the people, who did not suffer themselves to wait for him who was fasting and bringing those things which are of the Law, straighttem expectare non passus est *populus*⁴ utique sedit manducare et bibere et surrexerunt ludere. uidemus sacrilegium ebrietati fuisse coniunctum. nam sicut mater⁵ fidei continentia ita perfidia mater ebrietas est. in quod facinus non ista praecipitat? sedent in foribus tabernarum homines¹ tunicam non habentes nec sumptum sequentis² diei. de imperatoribus et potestatibus³ iudicant, immo regnare sibi uidentur et exercitibus imperare. fiunt ebrietate diuites qui sunt ueritate inopes. aurum donant, dispensant⁴ pecunias populis, ciuitates⁵ aedificant qui non habent cauponi unde potus suis corporibus pretium soluant. feruet⁶ enim uinum in his, nesciunt quid loquantur. diuites sunt, dum inebriantur; mox⁷ ubi uinum digesserint,⁸ cernunt se esse mendicos. uno die

42 bibunt multorum dierum labores. de ebrietate ad¹ arma consurgitur, calicibus tela succedunt. pro uino sanguis effunditur et ipsum sanguinem uina fuderunt. quam² fortes sibi homines uidentur in uino, quam sapientes, quam disertis, quantum etiam pulchri ac decori, cum stare non possint! mens³ necesse est titubet, lingua⁴ balbutiat, pallor⁵ exsanguis ora suffundat, factor⁶ ebrietatis horrore sit. barbari⁷ in ferrum ruunt, uulgi in rixas. si⁸ quis eorum pugno fuerit percussus, uideas

43 ora⁹ saucium uini lacrimas fundere, miserabiles¹⁰ epilogos decantare. habet unum hoc temulentia, ut emolliat¹¹ et resoluat corda temulentorum;¹² sicut¹³ ignis enim probat ferrum durum, ita et uini incendio etiam superborum hominum cor liquescit. omnes sibi in uino aequales uidentur, nullus inferior. non pauper¹ diuiti cedit, utpote qui pauperem esse se nescit: non infirmus ualido, cui omnis in bibendo est fortitudo: non mendicus locupleti, non ignobilis honorato, cum bibentes illum regem habeant qui bibendo superauit uiros. meritoque scriptum est: aequalis² uita hominibus uinum in ebrietate. sed utinam et quod sequitur audires: bibas³ illud moderate, ut sis sobrius! non habes quod accuses uinum. in⁴ iocunditatem creatum est, non in ebrietatem ab initio. exultatio animae et cordis est, si moderate

Exod.
32, 6.Exod.
21, 18.Eccli.
31, 32.Eccli.
31, 32.
Eccli.
31, 35,
36, 38.

way sat down to eat and drink, and rose up to play. We see that sacrilege was joined to drunkenness. For as restraint is the mother of faith, so drunkenness is the mother of faithlessness. Into what crime does it not rush headlong? 42. Men without a tunic, without even funds for the following day, lounge at the doorways of taverns. They pass judgment on emperors and officers of state; indeed they seem to themselves to reign, and to command armies. In drunkenness do they become rich who, in reality, are poor. They bestow gold, dispense money to people, and build cities, who do not have the wherewithall to pay the innkeeper the price for their bodies' drinking. For wine is hot within them, they know not what to say. They are rich men while they are drunk; as soon as they have digested the wine, they perceive that they are beggars. In a single day they drink the labors of many days. 43. From drunkenness they rush to arms, weapons succeed cups. Blood is poured out in place of wine, and wines have shed blood itself. How brave do men seem to be to themselves in wine, how wise, how eloquent! How much grace and comeliness do they seem to have when they cannot stand! The mind must needs reel, the tongue stammer, bloodless pallor suffuse the countenance, and the foulness of drunkenness become a horror. The barbarians rush to battle; the populace, to brawls. If anyone of them is struck with a fist, you may see him with wounded face shedding the tears of wine, and repeating again and again mournful epilogues. Intoxication has this one characteristic, that it softens and loosens the hearts of the intoxicated; for just as fire tries hard iron, so also even the hearts of proud men melt in the fire of wine. 44. All, under the influence of wine, seem equal to one another, no one is inferior. The poor man does not yield to the rich, seeing that he does not know that he is poor; nor the weak, to the strong, whose whole strength is in drinking; nor the beggar, to the man of wealth; nor the ignoble, to the illustrious; since drinkers count him king who has vanquished men in drinking. And rightly it is written: Wine taken with drunkenness is equal life to men. But would that you might hear also what follows: Drink it moderately so that thou mayest be sober. You have no charge to bring against wine. It was created from the beginning to make men joyful, and not to make them drunk. There is joy to the soul bibas, immoderatioꝛ autem potus in iracundiam concitat et 45 ruinas multas efficit. sed forte dicant has esse potationes¹ uulgarium et leuissimorum hominum. ueniamus ergo ad horum potentium et fortissimorum conuiuia. non ego hic unguentatos² adulescentulos aut coronatos rosis proferam, qualem³ ferunt fuisse illum qui delibutus⁴ unguentis, redimitus⁵ floribus, subnixus⁶ meretricibus, antelucano⁷ potu ebrius et diurno⁸ cereorum comitatus lumine philosophi⁹ auditorium¹⁰ disputantis ingressus sit, quo audito coronas,¹¹ ut aiunt, sensim detraxerit, unguenta¹² deteriserit, scortis uale dixerit, philosophus¹³ postea tantus euaserit, ut esset sobrietatis exemplum qui fuerat ante ebrietatis ludibrium. non enim unum emendatum illis inuideo, ut doceam genus eorum luxuriae a me non esse simulatum. certe ille si respicit a uino, fuit tamen semper temulentus sacrilegio.

- 13, 46. Apage¹ igitur hinc adulescentes lubricos, ad conuiuia proeliorum² uenimus. inter³ arma prandendum est. stipa-tores hic sunt bellici, qui ministrant succincti auro et Baby-lonicis⁴ lumbos⁵ suffulti balteis, aureis torquibus nitent colla, aureis bullis⁶ zonam tegunt, aureis thecis⁷ cultros includunt suos, quibus dimicent cum epulis diuidendis. adsistunt pueri coma⁸ nitentes ex gente barbarica ad hos electi usus per⁹ singularum distantes aetatum uices. cernas populorum diuer-sorum ordines, aciem ordinatam¹⁰ putes: uasa¹¹ exposita argentea, pompam arbitreris: cornu¹² in medio uini plenum non proeliaris,¹³ sed epularis¹⁴ instrumentum bucinæ, 47 quod¹⁵ discumbentes in certamen accendat. primo¹ minoribus poculis uelut ferentariis pugna praeluditur. uerum haec non sobrietatis species, sed bibendi est disciplina. etenim ut tragoediarum actores primo sensim uocem excitant, donec² udae uocis aperiant iter, ut postea magnis possint clamoribus personare, ita isti quoque in principio praelusoriis³ se exer-cent poculis, ut inritent sitim,⁴ ne forte restinguant eam et satiati postea bibere non possint. ergo ubi⁵ res calere coeperit, poscunt maioribus poculis, feruor inardescit⁶ martius,⁷ cibo and the heart if you drink moderately, but a more immoderate drinking arouses to anger and effects many ruins. 45. But perchance they may say that these are the drinking bouts of common and insignificant men. Therefore let us go to the banquets of the mighty and the powerful. I shall not present here youths perfumed and crowned with roses, such as they say that he was, who, besmeared with ointment, wreathed with flowers, supported by harlots, drunk with all night drinking and accompanied by the light of candles in daylight, entered the lecture room of the disputing philosopher; and, on hearing him, slowly removed the garlands, as they say, wiped off the ointment, bade farewell to the harlots, and afterwards turned out to be so great a philosopher, that he, who had been before the laughing stock of drunkenness, became the example of sobriety. For I do not begrudge them one who reformed, to show that their kind of luxury has not been falsely represented by me. Surely if that youth recovered from wine, he was, however, always drunk with sacrilege.

13, 46. Away hence, then, with wanton youths: we come to the banquets of warriors. We must dine amidst arms. The attendants here are warlike, who serve with loins girt with gold and supported with Babylonian belts. Their necks shine with golden collars, they cover their girdles with golden studs, and in golden sheaths they inclose the knives with which they may combat with the viands to be divided. Boys with shining locks from a barbarian race, chosen for these services through a regular succession in age, act as attendants. You might see ranks of different people, you might imagine them a well ordered battle line; the silver vessels that are set forth you might judge a public display; in the middle, a horn full of wine; not the instrument used as the horn of battle, but that of the banquet, to arouse those reclining to the contest. 47. First preparation for battle is made with the smaller cups just as if with light troops. But this is not the sign of sobriety but the discipline of drinking. For just as the actors of tragedies first raise their voices gradually until they open the moist path of the voice, that afterwards they may be able to cry out in loud tones, so these also, in the beginning, practice themselves with preliminary cups to stimulate thirst, lest perchance they quench

- sitis exaestuat⁸ et, ubi inminui uisa,⁹ potu meraciore¹⁰ reparatur.¹¹ certant pocula¹² cum ferculis¹³ et inter morsus saepe remittuntur. deinde¹⁴ procedente potu longius con-tentiusque¹⁵ diuersa et magna certamina quis bibendo praecellat. nota grauis, si quis excuset, si quis temperandum forte uinum putet. et haec donec ad¹⁹ mensas perueniatur 48 secundas. at ubi¹ consummatae fuerint epulae, putes iam esse surgendum: tunc de² integro potum instaurant suum, cum consummauerint, tunc incohare se dicunt, tunc deferuntur fialae,³ tunc⁴ maximi crateres quasi instrumenta bellorum. ac ne inmoderatum hoc arbitreris, mensura proponitur, certatur⁵ sub iudice, sub lege decernitur. agonithetes⁶ illis furor est, stipendium debilitas, uictoriae praemium culpa. pendit an-ceptus⁷ diu et dubius belli euentus; furor enim ille est proeliaris.⁸ cedunt pincernarum⁹ manus uina fundentium et cocorum labores calida¹⁰ ministrantium, cedunt qui mensuras ipsas bonas supereffluentes¹¹ diligenti librant examine,¹² ne quid effundant: non cedunt bibentes.
- 49 Sola illa sunt sine excusatione certamina. in bello si¹ quis se inferiorem uiderit, arma conuertit et meretur ueniam: hic si quis calicem conuertat, urgetur ad potum. in scammate² si quis manum³ leuat, exors⁴ quidem palmae, sed immunis⁵ iniuriae est: in conuiuio etsi manum reuocet a uino, ori⁶ eius infunditur. omnes inebriantur, uictores uictique omnes ebrii⁷ iacent plerique sopiti. nec portari eos ad sepulchrum licet, priusquam is qui pascit de⁸ omnibus se uindicatum uiderit, ut ulciscatur dispendium.⁹ qui¹⁰ autem damna non sentit hanc mensae suae gloriam putat, si ex¹¹ ea uulnerati 50 omnes ac saucii tamquam de harena exeant. spectaculum¹ triste Christianorum oculis et miserabili specie. cernas iuuenes terribilis² uisu hostibus de conuiuio portari foras et it and, being satiated, afterwards be unable to drink. Therefore when the affair begins to get warm, they challenge with larger goblets; their martial rage takes fire, thirst is set aglow by food, and, when it seems to be diminished, it is revived by purer liquor. Drinks vie with courses and are often brought back between bites. Then, as the drinking proceeds for some time and with more intensity, great and diverse contests arise to determine who excels in drinking. It is a serious breach if anyone pleads an excuse, if anyone thinks that the strong wine should be tempered. And this continues until they come to the dessert. 48. But when the feast has been consumed, you would imagine that now they must rise; they then renew their drinking afresh; when they have finished eating, then they say that they are beginning; then saucers are brought in; then, the largest mixing bowls, the instruments as it were, of warfare. And, lest you might think this excessive, a measure is proposed, contests are waged under a judge, decisions are made under law. Their moderator is madness, their stipend, weakness, their prize of victory, sin. The wavering and doubtful issue of the contest is long in the balance, for that madness is the madness of battle. The hands of the butlers pouring wine, and of the cooks performing their labors with warm water give up; they give up who carefully balance these good overflowing measures lest they pour out anything, the drinkers do not give up.

49. These contests alone are without excuse. In war if any one sees himself inferior, he retreats and merits pardon: here if any one turns back his goblet he is pressed to drink. In a wrestling match if any one raises his hand he is of course deprived of the palm, but is free from injury; at banquets, although he withdraws his hand from wine, it is poured into his mouth. All are intoxicated, victors and vanquished all lie drunk, most of them in a stupor. And they may not be carried to a tomb before the one who feeds them has seen himself revenged upon all, so that he may avenge the expense. And indeed the one who does not feel losses considers this as a glory to his table, if all depart from it wounded and injured as if from the arena. 50. A sad spectacle for the eyes of Christians and a deplorable sight. You may see young men terrible for their enemies to behold, being carried outinde ad conuiuium reportari, repleti ut exhauriant et exhauriri ut bibant. si³ quis uerecundior fuerit, ut⁴ erubescat surgere, cum iam immoderatos potus tenere non possit, anhelare⁵ uehementius, gemere, sudare, signis prodere quod pudeat confiteri. ibi unusquisque pugnas enarrat⁶ suas, ibi fortia facta sua praedicant, narrant tropaea uino⁷ madidi et somno⁸ soluti nesciunt mente quid lingua proferant. unusquisque sterit et potat, dormit et dimicat, et si quando consurrectum fuerit, uiri⁹ proeliores stare non possunt, egressu uacillant. rident seruuli¹⁰ dominorum opprobria, manibus suis portant militem¹¹ bellatorem, inponunt equo. itaque¹² hac atque illac tamquam nauigia sine gubernatore fluctuant et tamquam uulnere icti in¹³ terram defluunt, nisi¹⁴ excipiantur a seruulis alii referentur¹⁵ in scutis, fit pompa ludibrii. quos mane insignis armis spectaueras, uultu¹⁶ minaces, eosdem uesperis cernas etiam a¹⁷ puerulis inpune rideri sine ferro uulneratos, sine¹⁸ pugna interfector, sine hoste turbatos, sine senectute tremulos, in¹⁹ ipso iuuentatis flore marcentes.

- 14, 51. Quis¹ tale miscuit furoris poculum, quis tantum infudit² mentibus uenenum? periclitatur³ homo lutum esse de corpore et ipse sibi reus est insaniae uoluntariae, corruptelae spontaneae.⁴ tamen nec uos excusamini, qui uocatis ut amicos et emittitis ut inimicos. quanto melius in terram tua uina fudisses! sed et terra inebriat⁵ et asperiores⁶ etiam ipsas feras reddit, si uini contigerit odor. denique uindemiae⁷ tempore si uineam intrauerint, solent ebrietate succendi. quid te delectant damna sine gratia? rogas⁸ ad iocunditatem, cogis ad mortem: inuitas⁹ ad prandium, eferre uis ad sepulchrum: cibos promittis, tormenta inrogas: uina praetendis, uenena suffundis. omne enim quidquid nocet uenenum est.

side from the banquet, and thence being carried back to the banquet; being filled again that they may empty themselves, and being emptied that they may drink. If anyone is more modest, so that he blushes to rise when now he can no longer hold his immoderate draughts, he pants feverishly, groans, sweats, and shows by signs what he is ashamed to confess. There each one relates his battles, there they boast of their brave deeds, soaked with wine they relate their victories and overcome by sleep they know not in their mind what they utter with their tongue. Everyone snores and drinks, sleeps and fights; and, whenever they arise, these warriors cannot stand, they stagger as they walk out. Servants laugh at the disgrace of their masters; in their arms they carry the martial soldier, and put him upon his horse. And so here and there like ships without pilots they reel about; and, as if stricken with a wound, they sink to the ground unless they are caught by their servants. Others are carried out on their shields, a procession of mockery takes place. Those whom early in the morning you had beheld distinguished by their arms and with threatening faces, the same you might see in the evening being laughed at with impunity even by little boys, wounded without a weapon, killed without a battle, panic-stricken without an enemy, trembling without old age and falling away in the very flower of youth.

14, 51. Who mixed such a cup of madness, who poured such terrible poison into their minds? Man runs the risk of being the clay of his body, and he himself is guilty of his own voluntary madness, of his free willed corruption. However, neither are you yourselves excused who invite men as friends and send them forth as enemies. How much better would you have spilled your wines upon the ground! But the earth also becomes drunk and renders even the wild beasts themselves more savage if the odor of wine comes to them. Hence if they enter the vineyard at the time of the vintage, they are wont to be enkindled with drunkenness. Why do losses without favor delight you? You summon men to enjoyment, you force them to their death; you invite them to dinner, you mean to carry them out to their grave; you promise food, you inflict torture; you set out wines, you pour in poisons. For everything that harms is a poison. It takes away the senses, burns out tollit¹⁰ sensus, uiscera exurit, somnum infestat, caput uexat.

 52 etiam¹ maior uis uini quam ueneni est. denique uenenum uino excluditur, non uinum ueneno. merito deus per Moysen non solum ueneno sed etiam draconum ueneno uinum conparauit dicens: furor² draconum uinum illorum et ira aspi- datum insanabilis. et³ pulcre addidit insanabilis; multi enim a reliquo serpentium ueneno curantur, nemo ab ebrietate. certe ueneno caro uulneratur, mens sine noxa est: ebrietas ad corporis mortem mentis⁴ etiam crimen adiungit. aduerte⁵ autem et perfidia⁶ uenenum uini declaratum nomine. ait enim supra de alienigenis,⁷ qui nescirent⁸ deum: de⁹ uinea enim Sodomae uinum eorum est et uitis eorum uitis Gomorrae:
uua eorum uua fellis, botrys amaritudinis in ipsis.

Deut.
32, 33.Deut.
32, 32.

15, 53. Putatis me tamquam uino¹ crapulatum intemperantius ieiunii praedicationi² hunc miscuisse sermonem: et adhuc propter hos fortissimos uiros quanta praeterii, quanto minora dixi quam dominus locutus est! audistis quid per Moysen dixerit, audite quid³ in libro sermonum Esaiiae scriptum est.
 inuehitur enim dominus in huiusmodi uersus et ait: uae⁴ his qui surgunt mane et sectantur sicera, qui ebrii sunt uesperis; nam uinum eos comburet. cum cithara enim et psalterio et tympanis uinum bibunt, opera autem dei non respiciunt et opera manuum eius non considerant. cui uae, inquit, cui⁵ iudicia, cui tumultus diuersa singulis, temulentis omnia. uae⁶ enim his qui ebrii sunt uesperis! quid⁷ igitur illis qui⁸ et ante uesperam et frequenter in lucem madent? ergo uae⁹ sibi debitum habent concertationes. conserunt¹⁰ lites, in¹¹ caedem prosiliunt, ueniunt¹² ad iudicia uel uocantur. habent ergo et iudicia tamquam rei. fit nonnumquam grauior tumultus, quia uino mens peruertitur ebriosi: et¹³ non meminit regis nec magistratus, ut scriptum est, et omnia per talenta facit loqui. et non meminere, cum biberint, amicitiae nec fraternae necessitudinis, sed post tumultum sumunt gladios

Luc.
3, 4.
Is. 5,
11 sq.Prov.
23, 29.

Is. 5, 11.

3 Esdr.
3, 21,
22, 23.

the vitals, destroys sleep, troubles the head. 52. Even greater is the power of wine than that of poison. Therefore poison is driven out by wine, not wine by poison. Rightly did God through Moses compare wine not only with poison but also with the venom of dragons, saying: Their wine is the madness of dragons, and the fury of asps, which is incurable. And well did he add incurable; for many are cured from venom left by snakes, no one, from drunkenness. The flesh certainly is wounded by venom, the mind is without harm: drunkenness adds to the death of the body the guilt also of the mind. Moreover, note that the poison of faithlessness also has been expressed in terms of wine. For he says above of the gentiles who knew not God: Their wine is of the vineyard of Sodom, and their vine is the vine of Gomorrah: their grapes are grapes of gall, the clusters of bitterness in them!

15, 53. You imagine that I, as if surfeited with wine, have intermingled this discourse rather intemperately with the preaching of fasting: and as yet how much have I omitted on account of these brave men, how much less have I said than the Lord hath spoken! You have heard what He said through Moses; hear what is written in the book of the sayings of Isaias. For the Lord inveighs in verses of this kind and says: Woe to them who rise up early in the morning and follow intoxicating drink, and are drunk in the evening: for wine will burn them. For with the harp, and the psaltery, and the timbrels, they drink wine: but the works of the Lord they regard not, nor do they consider the works of his hands. Who hath woe? he says, Who hath judgments, who hath tumults? Other men have diverse troubles, drunkards have all. For woe to them who are drunk in the evening! What then of those who are intoxicated before evening and frequently until dawn? Therefore, as the woe that is their due, they have quarrels. They engage in disputes; they rush into bloodshed; they go, or are called, to judgment. Therefore, like defendants, they also have their judgments. Sometimes a rather serious disturbance arises because the mind of the drunkard is subverted by wine: And he does not remember the king or the magistrate, as it is written, and he makes all things speak through talents. And they do not remember, when they drink, friendship nor fraternal ties; but after the tumult they

- et cum a uino mersi fuerint et surrexerint, non meminerunt ipsi quae gesserint.* habent ergo etiam dignam mercedem
- 54 tumultus. praeterieram¹ certe ego citharam psalteria tym- Is. 5, 12.
 pana, quae cognouimus conuiuio huiusmodi frequenter adhiberi, ut uino et cantu excitentur libidines. plerique etiam Persico² more mulieres dignas temulentorum³ consortio induci iubent et ab his fialas accipiunt atque illis se substernunt sedentibus. et hunc ritum sacratae⁴ habent obseruationis,⁵ ebrietatis ministerium.⁶ habent ergo uinum et barbari:
 libenter his Romani indulgent, ut et ipsi soluantur in potus et eneruati ebrietate uincantur. nec⁷ solum uinum ebrietatem facit, sed et sicera. denique Hebraei⁸ omnem potum qui Lev.
10, 9.
 inebriat sicerae nomine uocant.
- 55 Non¹ inmerito ergo uae illis qui² mane ebrietatis potum requirunt, quos conueniebat deo laudes referre, praeuenire³ lucem et occurrere oratione⁴ soli⁵ iustitiae, qui suos uisitat et Mal.
4, 2.
 exurgit nobis, si nos Christo, non uino⁶ et sicerae surgamus.
 pii⁷ hymni dicuntur, et tu citharam tenes? psalmi canuntur, et tu psalterium sumis aut tympanum? merito uae, quia salutem relinquis, mortem eligis. uix⁸ diluculum, et iam cursatur per tabernas, uinum quaeritur, excutiuntur tapetes,⁹ accubitus¹⁰ festinant sternere, lagynas argenteas, auratos
- 56 calices exponunt. uae, inquit, ista quaerentibus! calix¹ aureus Ier. 51,
7 sq.
Babylon in manu domini inebrians omnem terram. a uino eius biberunt omnes gentes, ideo commotae sunt. et subito cecidit Babylon et contrita est. calix² ergo aureus contritus est, quia Babylon contrita est, quae est calix aureus. sed quamuis auro se iactet et pretio,³ in⁴ domini et ipsa est potes-tate. denique diuina indignatione conteritur. qua⁵ ratione calix aureus? quoniam qui ueritate deficitur quaerit inlecebram, ut species saltem pretiosa ad bibendum aliquos possit take up their swords; and when they have been immersed in wine and stand up they themselves do not remember what they have done. Therefore they have even a worthy reward for their tumult. 54. I had certainly passed over the cithara, psalteries, and timbrels, which we know are frequently used at banquets of this kind, that the passions may be aroused by wine and song. Many also, in Persian fashion, have women worthy of the companionship of drunkards brought in; and from these they receive saucers; and they recline with these women seated with them. And they hold this a rite of hallowed observance and the ministry of drunkenness. Now the barbarians also use wine; the Romans freely indulge them, so that too they may give themselves over to drinking, and, on being weakened by drunkenness, be conquered. And not only does wine cause drunkenness, but strong drink also. Hence the Hebrews designate every drink which intoxicates by the word "sicera."

55. Not unjustly therefore is there woe to them who seek the drink of drunkenness early in the morning, whom it would become to render praises to God and to anticipate the dawn, and meet with prayer the Sun of Justice Who visits His own, and rises for us if we rise for Christ, and not for wine and strong drink. Hymns are recited by the holy, and do you hold the cithara? Psalms are sung and do you take up the psaltery or timbrel? Rightly is there woe because you abandon salvation, because you choose death. Scarcely is it daybreak, and already there is bustling through the taverns; wine is sought, coverlets are shaken out, men hasten to arrange the large couches, and they set out silver flagons and golden cups. "Woe" He says to those who seek these things! 56. Babylon hath been a golden cup in the hand of the Lord, that made all the earth drunk: all the nations have drunk of her wine, and therefore they have staggered. Babylon is suddenly fallen, and destroyed. Therefore the golden cup is destroyed because Babylon is destroyed, which is a golden cup. But although she boasts of gold and wealth, even she herself is in the power of the Lord. Therefore she is destroyed by the Divine wrath. With what design is a cup golden? It is because the cup which is lacking in truth seeks an allurement, in order that a costly appearance, at 57 inlicere. constitue¹ ante oculos pompam huius saeculi: uides speciosam inlecebram, sed inanem gratiam. non² te inducant aurea uasa et argentea; habemus³ et nos thesaurum in uasis fictilibus. uas⁴ apostolicum fictile est, sed in eo thesaurus est Christi. uae⁵ siceram mane sectantes! aureum est hoc uas, poculum est: in eo poculo uenenum⁶ mortis, uenenum libidinis, uenenum ebrietatis est. hoc qui⁷ biberit commouetur et cadit. commouetur non solum corpore sed etiam corde turbato; commoueri enim peccati est.

2 Cor.
4, 7.

Is. 5, 11.

- 16, 58. Denique Cain¹ exiens a conspectu dei habitauit in terra Naid, quod interpretatione significat commotionem. ergo² qui calice aureo inebriatur peccato mouetur. quid te sub maledicto constituis Cain illius parricidae, ut tremas atque mouearis? sed et persecutores³ domini transeuntes mouebant capita sua; exagitabat enim eos spiritus⁴ nequam, qui repleta a se corpora mouere consuevit. et ille cum⁵ defuerit tremor desinit, ebrietas autem perpetuum dat tremorem. sudant⁶ uinum corpora temulentorum: si leuius contigeris, uinum
- 59 exprimis. ebrietas fomentum¹ libidinis, ebrietas incentiium² insaniae, ebrietas uenenum insipientiae.³ haec⁴ sensus hominum mutat et formas, per⁵ hanc fiunt ex hominibus equi adhinnientes, siquidem naturali⁶ uapore corporis calidi et praeter naturam uini calore flammati cohibere se non queunt et in bestiales⁷ libidines excitantur, ut⁸ nullum tempus praescriptum habeant, quo deceat indulgere concubitu. uocem amittunt, colore uariantur, oculis ignescunt, ore anhelant, fremunt naribus, in furorem inardescunt, sensu⁹ excidunt. hinc frenesis¹⁰ periculosa, hinc calculi¹¹ grauis poena, hinc¹² exitialis cruditas, hinc uomitus¹³ frequens semesas¹⁴ epulas cum internorum¹⁵ uiscerum cruore fundentium. mentior,¹⁶ nisi eadem dominus per Hieremiam locutus¹⁷ est dicens: bibite¹⁸ et inebriamini et uomite: et cadetis et non surgetis.

Gen.
4, 16.

Gen.
4, 14.

Marc.
15, 29.

Ier.
5, 8.

Ier.
25, 27.

least, may be able to entice some to drink. 57. Place before your eyes the pomp of this world; you see the brilliant allurements, but the empty beauty. Let not golden and silver vessels deceive you: And we have a treasure in earthen vessels. The Apostolic vessel is earthen, but in it is the treasure of Christ. Woe to them that follow after strong drink early in the morning! Golden is this vessel, is this cup; in this cup is the poison of death, the poison of passion, the poison of drunkenness. He who drinks this is shaken and falls. He is shaken not only in body but also in his troubled heart; for to be shaken belongs to sin.

16, 58. Therefore, Cain, departing from the sight of God dwelt in the land of Naid, which interpreted signifies "shaking." Therefore he who is drunk from a golden cup is shaken by sin. Why do you put yourself under the curse of that parricide Cain, that you may tremble and be shaken? And the persecutors of the Lord also, passing by, wagged their heads; for they were being agitated by the Evil Spirit who is accustomed to shake bodies filled with himself. And when he is wanting, the trembling ceases; but drunkenness causes a perpetual trembling. The bodies of the intoxicated sweat wine; if you touch them even lightly you press out wine. 59. Drunkenness is the kindling wood of passion, drunkenness is the incentive of madness, drunkenness is the poison of folly. This vice changes the senses and forms of men, through this vice from men they become neighing horses; since indeed, being warm with the natural heat of the body and inflamed beyond the measure of nature by the heat of wine, they cannot restrain themselves, and are excited to bestial passions, so that they have no time prescribed in which it would be fitting for them to indulge in coition. They lose their voice, they change color, their eyes burn with passion, they pant with open mouth, they snort with distended nostrils, they are enkindled into rage, they go out of their senses. From this comes dangerous delirium, from this comes the heavy affliction of gall stones, from this comes fatal indigestion, from this comes frequent vomiting on the part of those who belch forth half eaten dainties together with the blood of their inner vitals. I speak falsely if the Lord has not said the same things through Jeremias in these words: Drink ye, and be drunken, and vomit: and ye will fall and will rise no more.

60 Hinc¹ etiam uanae imagines, incerti uisus, instabilis gressus. umbras saepe transiliunt² sicut foueas. nutat³ his terra, subito erigi et inclinari uidetur, quasi uertatur. timentes in faciem ruunt et solum manibus adprendunt aut concurrentibus⁴ montibus sibi uidentur includi. murmur in auribus tamquam maris⁵ fluctuantis fragor et resonantia fluctu litora. canes si⁶ uiderint, leones arbitrantur et fugiunt. alii risu⁷ soluuntur incondito, alii inconsolabili⁸ maerore deplorant, alii inrationabilis⁹ cernunt pauores. uigilantes¹⁰ somniant, dormientes litigant. uita¹¹ his somnium est, somnus his multus est. excitari nullis uocibus possunt: quantolibet¹² stimulandos impulsu putes, nisi¹³ resipierint, uigilare non possunt.

61 unde bene Hieremias huiusmodi hominem tamquam superfluum¹ creaturam deflendum putat. quid² est enim homo ebrius nisi creatura superflua? itaque sic ait: sicut³ fletum Iazer deflebo te, uitis, quia deserta est ciuitas Iazer, et infra: uinum⁴ erat in torcularibus tuis: mane non calcauerunt, meridie autem non fecerunt. Iazer⁵ πολῆσις περισσός, factura⁶ superflua est—moderatio⁷ enim naturalis est, supra mensuram quidquid est superfluum habetur—ita est ebrietas, quae⁸ fletu prophetico deploratur. unde ait apostolus: nolite⁹ inebriari uino, in quo est luxuria. sed implemini spiritu. est¹⁰ ergo ebrietas culpae, est et gratiae. et forte haec naturae quae gratiae, quia¹¹ ad imaginem et similitudinem dei facti spiritu¹² sancto repleti esse debemus.

Ier.
48, 32.

Ier.
48, 33.

Eph.
5, 18.

Gen.
1, 26.

17, 62. Quid autem obtestationes potantium loquar? quid memorem sacramenta, quae uiolare nefas, arbitrantur? ‘bibamus’ inquiunt. ‘opto¹ salutem imperatorum,’ ut qui non biberit fiat reus indeuotionis;² uidetur enim non amare imperatorem qui pro eius salute non biberit. o³ pia⁴ deuotionis obsequium! ‘bibamus pro salute exercitus, pro comitum uirtute, pro filiorum sanitate’. et haec uota ad deum peruenire iudicant

60. From this come also deluding visions, uncertain sight, and tottering gait. Often they leap over shadows as if they were pitfalls. The ground sways beneath them, suddenly it seems to be raised and lowered as if it were turning. In terror they fall upon their faces and grasp the ground with their hands; or they imagine that they are being engulfed by mountains rushing upon them. There is rumbling in their ears like the crashing of a tossing sea and shores resounding from the waves. If they see dogs they think them lions and flee. Some are convulsed in uncouth laughter, others weep with inconsolable grief, others perceive senseless terrors. While awake they sleep, while asleep they quarrel. Life to them is a dream and their sleep is deep. They cannot be aroused by any voices; whatever be the shock by which you would imagine they must be aroused, unless they recover, they cannot awake. 61. Therefore well does Jeremias think that a man of this kind should be mourned as a superfluous creature. For what is a drunken man but a superfluous creature? And so he speaks as follows: I will weep for thee like the weeping of Jazer, O vine, because the city of Jazer is deserted; and below: there was wine in thy wine presses: early in the morning they have not treaded, and they have not at midday. Jazer is a ποίησις περισσός, a “superfluous creature”—for moderation is natural, whatever is beyond measure is held superfluous—; so is drunkenness which is lamented in the weeping of the prophet. Wherefore the Apostle says: Be ye not drunk with wine, wherein is luxury: but be ye filled with the Holy Spirit. There is, therefore, inebriation from sin; there is also, from grace. And perchance this inebriation from grace belongs to our nature, because, being made to the image and likeness of God, we ought to be filled with the Holy Spirit.

17, 62. Why should I speak moreover of the adjuration of drinkers? Why should I mention the oaths which they think it a crime to violate? ‘Let us drink,’ they say ‘Here’s to the health of the emperors’, so that he who does not drink becomes guilty of irreverence; for he seems not to love the emperor who does not drink to his welfare. Oh the compliance of pious devotion! ‘Let us drink to the welfare of the army, to the courage of our comrades,

- sicut illi⁴ qui calices ad sepulchra martyrum deferunt atque illic in uesperam bibunt; aliter se exaudiri⁵ posse non credunt. o stultitia hominum, qui ebrietatem sacrificium putant, qui existimant illis ebrietatem placere qui ieiunio passionem⁶
- 63 sustinere didicerunt. quantos de intemperanti conuiuio nouimus ad tormenta uenisse! dum per¹ ebrietatem de imperio suo certant et sibi regna promittunt, honores aliis pollicentur, infelices ad poenam ducti sunt, qui quid dicerent nesciebant. unde² plerique boni iudices ea quae per ebrietatem dicta essent tenenda ad crimen non putauerunt. plerique etiam uino utuntur ut eculeo et quibus tormenta non eliciunt uocem proditiōis eos temptant bibendo, ut patriae³ statum, salutem ciuium, defensionis suae prodant consilia; uirtus enim plerumque uincit dolorem, fidem autem potus excludit. cognoui plerosque fidiculis⁴ exulceratos⁵ nomen suum negasse: quis
- 64 inter cymbia⁶ textit quod latere cupiebat? quid¹ retexam auditum mihi non poculi, sed profluuii² genus, quo in ora hominum tamquam per fistulas aut canales³ uina funduntur? homines hos an utres uerius aestimarim? tamen ipsi utres, nisi moderata transfusio⁴ sit, saepe rumpuntur; per cornu⁵ etiam fluentia in⁶ fauces hominum uina decurrunt, et si⁷ quis respirauerit, commissum flagitium, soluta acies: loco⁸ motus habetur. aqua⁹ decurrens a Libano cautes rupeas soluit, quomodo mollibus putant nequaquam nocere uisceribus uinolent-
- 65 torum¹⁰ impetus¹¹ fluentorum? elefantos¹ quoque ferunt promoscide² haurire aquae plurimum, eosdem tamen ad³ sedandam sitim moderato potu esse contentos, sed si forte ab aliquo caupone fuerint mercede fraudati, indignantes replere concauum⁴ promoscidis, non⁵ ut ebibant, sed effundant, atque in momentariis⁶ inundationibus⁷ inrigare⁸ eius tabernam de⁹ quo se putauerant uindicandos. siccantur¹⁰ ad potum subito to the health of our sons.' And they judge that these prayers come to God, just as those who bring their cups to the tombs of the martyrs and drink there to the evening—otherwise they do not believe that they can be heard. Oh the folly of men, who think drunkenness a sacrifice, who consider that drunkenness is pleasing to those who learned to endure suffering by fasting! 63. How many do we know have come to torments through intemperate feasting! While they were disputing in drunkenness concerning their power and were assuring themselves of kingdoms, and promising honors to others, miserably were they lead to punishment who knew not what they said. Wherefore many good judges have thought that those things which are spoken in drunkenness ought not to be considered open to accusation. Many also employ wine as an instrument of torture; and those from whom torments do not elicit a word of betrayal, they tempt through drink to betray the state of their country, the safety of citizens and the plans of their own defense; for courage frequently overcomes pain, but drink expels loyalty. I know that many, though sorely wounded by cords, have refused to tell their name: who has concealed amid his cups what he wished to remain hidden? 64. Why should I disclose, not the kind of drinking but rather of pouring, of which I have heard, whereby wines are poured, as it were, into the mouths of men through tubes or pipes? Should I consider them men or, more truly, wineskins? Yet wineskins themselves, unless the pouring is moderated, often burst. Flowing also through a horn do wines run down into the throats of men; and if anyone takes breath, a disgraceful act is committed, the battle line is broken, he is considered as driven from his place. Water flowing down from Lebanon dissolved rocky cliffs; how do they think that the current of streams of wine can in no wise harm the tender vitals? 65. They say also that elephants drink up a great deal of water with their trunks, yet that the same are content to quench their thirst with a moderate draught; but if perchance they are defrauded of their due by some innkeeper, being angry, they fill up the hollow of their trunks, not to drink, but to pour forth; and in quick discharges they flood his tavern upon whom they had thought that they must take revenge. Quickly reservoirs for drinking are dried up and suddenly are poured out; everything swims. To lacus ac repente funduntur, natant omnia: cui non mirum tam immania beluarum corpora superfluum nil tenere?

- 18, 66. Sed quid de uiris loquamur, quando etiam feminae, quas oportet sollicitiorem castitati sobrietatis adhibere custodiam, usque¹ ad ebrietatem bibunt? deinde² surgentes, quas etiam intra secreta³ domus uel audiri ab alienis non conuenit uel uideri, prodire in publicum non uelato capite, uultu⁴ procaci! apostolus⁵ mulieres tacere etiam in ecclesia iubet, domi uiros suos praecipit interrogare. illae in plateis inuerecundos⁶ etiam uiris sub conspectu adulescentulorum intemperantium choros⁷ ducunt, iactantes comam, trahentes⁸ tunicas, scissae⁹ amictus, nudae lacertos, plaudentes¹⁰ manibus, saltantes pedibus, personantes uocibus, inritantes in se iuuenum libidines motu¹¹ histrionico, petulanti oculo, dedecoroso¹² ludibrio. spectat corona¹³ adulescentium et fit miserabile theatrum.¹⁴ inter saltantium ruinas et spectantium lapsus caelum impuro contaminatur aspectu, terra turpi saltatione polluitur, quae
- 67 perobscaenis¹⁵ saltatibus¹⁶ uerberatur. quomodo patienter¹ loquar, pie praeteream, conuenienter defleam? uinum nobis tantarum animarum damna intulit! etenim si uinum² et mulieres discedere a deo faciunt, quod uel ebrietas uel libido praeuaricationis inlecebrae sint, si singula ac separata (faciunt, unita)³ quid faciant? unde non inmerito ait sapiens
- 68 ante nos quidam: mulier⁴ ebriosa ira magna. quid¹ autem mirum, si uino decipiuntur animae feminarum, cum² omnes illae tribus patrum, cum de petra biberent aquam, manna manducarent, gentes ualidissimas uincerent, et non erat in his ullus infirmus? ubi³ uero carnes desiderare coeperunt et desiderii⁴ in Aegyptum conuertebantur, nequaquam⁵ ex tot milibus hominum in terram repromissionis praeter duos peruenire meruerunt. itaque quid boni sit sobrietas, quid mali intemperantia hinc colligere⁶ datur: quando⁷ immurmurabant requirentes Aegypti delicias a⁸ serpentibus moriebantur, quando per⁹ maris rubri transibant semitam, aquam bibeant. non¹⁰ igitur ueremur exemplum, non fugimus delicias, ne nos futurorum bonorum¹¹ adeptione defrudent?¹²

1 Cor. 14,
34-35.

Eccli.
19, 2.

Eccli.
26, 11.
Exod. 16,
13 sq.

Exod.
16, 3.
Num.
26, 65.

Num.
21, 6.
Num.
14, 25.

whom is it not marvelous that beasts of such huge bodies retain nothing superfluous?

18, 66. But why should we speak about men, when even women, whom a more solicitous care should urge to the chastity of sobriety, drink unto drunkenness? Then they rising, whom it does not befit to be heard or be seen by strangers even within the privacy of their homes, sally forth in public with unveiled head and brazen face! The Apostle orders women to be silent even in church; he enjoins them to ask their husbands at home. These in the public squares perform, before the gaze of debauched youths, dances shameless even to men, tossing their hair, trailing their tunics, with torn garments, with naked arms, clapping their hands, leaping with their feet, uttering loud cries, inciting the passions of the youths towards themselves by their histrionic movements, impudent eyes, and disgraceful wantonness. A circle of young men look on and a pitiable spectacle takes place. Between the falls of the dancers and the reelings of the spectators, heaven is contaminated with the impure sight; the earth which is beaten with obscene dances is polluted by unseemly dancing. 67. How shall I speak patiently, pass over piously, bemoan fittingly? Wine has inflicted upon us the loss of so many souls! For if wine and women cause men to depart from God, because both drunkenness and passion are allurements to sin; if singly and separately they do this, what would they do united? Wherefore not without cause does a certain wise man say before us: A drunken woman is great anger. 68. Moreover what wonder if the souls of women are beguiled by wine, when all those tribes of the fathers, while they drank water from the rock, and while they ate manna, conquered the strongest nations, and there was not even one weakling among them? But when they began to desire flesh and were turned by their desires to Egypt, out of so many thousands of men not more than two deserved to enter the land of promise. And so what a good sobriety is, what an evil, intemperance, it is possible to gather from this: when they murmured seeking again the pleasures of Egypt, they were killed by serpents; when they crossed through the road of the Red Sea, they drank water. Shall we not, therefore, fear example, shall we not flee from pleasures, lest they defraud us from obtaining future blessings?

- 19, 69. Et quid aliorum utar sententiis? ipsi bene pasti ac luxuriosi quid sibi sperent audiamus. inducit enim eos Esaias propheta dicentes:¹ manducemus² et bibamus; cras enim moriemur, meritoque exclamat: ululate³ naues Cartaginis, quia perierunt et amplius non erunt. quod est dictum de uisione Tyri, quam luxuriosam urbem cognouimus. ideoque⁴ nona uisio est, non septima aut octaua, quod ea neque legem⁵ custodiat neue euangelii gratiam, cum et sabbato⁶ legitimo ignes libidinis adolere sit uetitum, et euangelii serie octauus dies resurrectionis inluceat. idem⁷ autem dies primus atque octauus, quia dominica⁸ dies in se recurrit. luxuria⁹ ergo nec fidem habet nec obseruantiam disciplinae, luxuria seminarium¹⁰ et origo uitiorum est. nec arbitremini me aduersus apostolum dixisse, quia¹¹ ille ait auaritiam radicem esse uitiorum omnium, quoniam luxuria¹² ipsius est mater auaritia. etenim¹³ cum exhauserit quis luxuriando¹⁴ proprias facultates, quaerit¹⁵ postea auara compendia. audistis¹ quid hodie lectum sit. mercatores² inquit Phoenicum transmeantes mare; in aqua multa semen mercatorum sicut messis, quae deferitur. uicinae istae sunt ciuitates,³ Tyrus Phoenicae, Sidon, uicinae ut locis ita et uitis, mercatores a negotiationibus periculosa transfretatione⁴ maris lucella⁵ quaerentes. sollicita⁶ uita hominum, inquieta⁷ conuersatio et quodam semper in turbine, uentis ipsis mobilior, quibus uoluitur atque huc et illuc saepe iactatur. utique accusatis crebra naufragia: quis uos nauigare conpellit? quasi non inuidia⁸ opum et terras faciatis intutas⁹ et ad latrocinium plurimos excitetis? mare non ad nauigandum deus fecit, sed propter elementum¹⁰ pulchritudinem. latius pelagi¹¹ fudit aequora certe, ut freto includeret terras, ne longius¹² tu uagus et exul errares. sed tempestate iactatur mare: timere ergo, non usurpare debetis. elementum innocens nil deliquit, temeritas humana sibi est ipsa discrimini. denique qui¹³ non nauigat nescit timere naufragium. dominus dixit: dominamini¹⁴ piscium maris, non dixit: enouigate¹⁵ in fluctibus, denique

Is. 22, 13.

Is. 23, 1.

Exod.
35, 3.Matth.
28, 1.1 Tim.
6, 10.

Is. 23, 2.

Gen.
1, 28.
Ion.
1, sq.

19, 69. And why should I use the judgments of others? The well fed and luxurious, let us hear what they hope for themselves. For Isaïas, the prophet, represents them as saying: Let us eat and drink; for tomorrow we shall die; and justly he exclaimed, Howl ye ships of Carthage, because they have perished and will be no more. This is said of the vision of Tyre, which we know was an extravagant city. And therefore the vision is the ninth, not the seventh or the eighth; because it observes neither the law nor the grace of the Gospel, since it was forbidden to kindle the fires of passion on the Sabbath of the Law, and according to the sequence of the Gospel, the eighth day dawns as the Day of the Resurrection. Moreover the first and the eighth day are the same, because the Lord's day returns to itself. Luxury, therefore, possesses neither faith nor the observance of discipline; luxury is the seedbed and origin of vices. And do not think that I have spoken contrary to the Apostle because he says that avarice is the root of all evils, since luxury is the mother of avarice itself. For when anyone has exhausted his own wealth by dissolute living, afterwards he seeks compensation through avarice. 70. You have heard what has been read to-day. The merchants, he says, of the Phœnicians passing over the sea; in much water is the seed of merchants as the harvest that is brought in. These are neighboring cities, Tyre of Phœnicia, Sidon; neighboring in sites, so also in evils; merchants seeking paltry gains from their business ventures by perilous crossing of the sea. Solicitous is the life of men, restless and always in a whirl, as it were, their way of living, more changeable than the very winds, by which it is turned and often tossed hither and thither. You of course complain of repeated shipwrecks: who compels you to sail? As if you do not make lands unsafe through the envy of riches, and excite many to piracy! God did not make the sea for navigation, but on account of the beauty of the element. He extended the expanses of sea rather widely that He might enclose the lands by water, lest you might stray too far as a wanderer and exile. But the sea is tossed by the tempest: therefore you ought to fear, not turn it to your use. The innocent element has committed no wrong, human temerity is a source of danger unto itself. Accordingly, he who does not sail knows not how to fear shipwreck. The Lord said: Rule over the fishes of the sea; He did not et propheta Iona, qui missus est in Nineuem, ut paenitentiam¹⁷ praedicaret, uquia uoluit nauigare, ut fugeret¹⁸ a facie dei, tempestate turbatus et sorte¹⁹ ductus et iactatus in mare et exceptus a ceto est.

- 71 Propheta quoque Daud ait, cum dei circa¹ hominem commemoraret gratiam: omnia² subiecisti sub pedibus eius, oues et boues uniuersas, insuper et pecora campi, uolucres caeli et pisces maris, qui perambulant semitas maris. piscibus dedit,³ non hominibus perambulare maris semitam. ad escam tibi mare datum est, non ad periculum: cibo, non ad mercatum utere. cur tibi periculum generas⁴ de uoluptate? cur separatioris⁵ elementi profunda rimaris? cur inuquietas⁶ mundi altiora secreta?⁷ cur postremo saepius sulcare⁸ atque exarare fluctus inpatiens nauta contendis? cur temptas frequenter innoxia⁹ aequora, inritas procellas? o inexplebilis¹⁰ auaritia mercatorum! cedit tibi et mare et inuquietudinem¹¹ tuam pelagus non potest sustinere. denique totiens recurrentibus mercatoribus exaratum: erubescere,¹² Sidon, dixit mare. tamquam fatigati¹³ elementi uox ista dicentis est: erubescere, Sidon, hoc est 'meos¹⁴ fluctus negotiator arguis, cum sis ipse fluctibus inuquietior.¹⁵ erubescere uel pudore, quoniam periculo non moueris. uerecundiores uenti sunt quam uestrae cupiditates. illi habent otia sua, numquam uestra quaerendi studia feriantur¹⁶ et cum otiosa tempesta est, numquam uestra otiosa nauigia sunt. uersatur¹⁷ unda sub remige, quando quiescit a flamine.¹⁸ non¹ parturiui inquit nec peperii nec enutriui iuuenes. quid me inuquant² quos nescio, quos non agnosco? 'ite³ in Cartaginem, ululate qui inhabitatis insulas! Is. 23, 6. supra dixit: ululate,⁴ naues Cartaginis! Cartaginem etenim Is. 23, 1. Tyrii condiderunt et⁵ ideo Cartaginenses sequuntur luxuriam conditorum transfusa in se decolora⁶ successione⁷ nequitiae, pessimorum uitiorum heredes deteriores. et bene luxuriosos naues dixit. sicut illae uento ita hi cibo iactantur et uino.

Psalm 8,
7-9.

Is. 23, 4.

Is. 23, 4.

Is. 23, 6.

Is. 23, 1.

say: 'Sail out on the waves.' Therefore even the prophet Jonas, who was sent Nineveh to preach penance, because he wished to sail so that he might flee from the face of God, was tossed by a tempest, and was selected by lot, and was cast into the sea, and was rescued by a whale.

71. The prophet David, also, said, when he was relating the favor of God toward man: Thou hast subjected all things under his feet, all sheep and oxen, moreover the beasts also of the fields. The birds of the air and the fishes of the sea, that pass through the paths of the sea. He has given to fishes, not to men, to pass through the path of the sea. For food was the sea given to you, not for your peril; use the food, but not for gain. Why do you create peril for yourself from enjoyment? Why do you lay open the depths of the more separate element? Why do you disturb the solitudes of the world? Why, at last, do you, as an impatient sailor, so often hasten to plough and dig up the waves? Why do you tempt the blameless seas, provoke the storms? Oh insatiable avarice of merchants! Even the sea yields to you and the main cannot withstand your unrest. Therefore, after being so often ploughed by returning merchants, Be ashamed, O Sidon, hath said the sea. This is the voice of the fatigued element, as it were, saying: Be ashamed Sidon; that is: 'Merchant you accuse my waves although you yourself are more restless than they. Blush indeed for shame since you are not disturbed by peril. More modest are the winds than your desires. They have their rests, never do your cravings for gain take holiday. Even when the weather is quiet never are your ships quiet. The water is churned under the oar when it is at rest from the blast. 72. I have not been in labor, it says, nor have I brought forth, nor have I nourished up young men. Why do they disquiet me whom I know not, whom I do not acknowledge?' Go to Carthage, howl, ye inhabitants of the islands! Above it said: Howl ye ships of Carthage! For the Tyrians founded Carthage, and so the Carthaginians followed the luxury of their founders, a degenerate succession of iniquity being transferred to them as baser heirs of shocking vices. And well did it call the luxurious, "ships". Just as the latter are tossed about by the wind, so are the former by meat and wine. Bodies filled with insulas repleta potu inhabitant corpora, naufragiis circumsonant,⁸ tunduntur fluctibus ebrietatis, nec per diem nec noctu quiescunt. horum⁹ igitur mercatorum semen in aqua, (in aqua) messis fructus est. in aqua enim labores¹⁰ suos seminant, ut pericula¹¹ metant, in aqua illis seges pullulat,¹² in aqua messis exuberat,¹³ fructus ipse in aqua est, numquam tutus et solidus. unde recte ait: 'qui seminabat in terra non¹⁴ introiit in negotiationem, immo qui seminabat in caelo. sed¹⁵ est et bona terra, in qua quicumque seminauerit fructus ei caelestes orientur.'

Is. 23, 3.

Ezech. 28,
et 18.Matth.
13, 23.

- 20, 73. *Ululate*¹ inquit—iterum ait—*naues Cartaginis, quoniam perit munitio uestra. et erit in illa die, relinquetur Tyrus et infra: eritque*² post annos LXX Tyrus ut canticum meretricis. uide quibus uerbis utatur propheta nec refugiat uerborum³ istiusmodi uilitatem. nos interdum refugimus, non⁴ quo nobis quam illis lingua sit castior, sed auctoritas inferior. maior enim uis rerum in talium expressione⁵ sermonum⁶ est, ut qui delicta non erubescunt⁷ erubescant uel nomina delictorum. erit inquit Tyrus ut canticum meretricis. uidete ne cum aliquis illos choros⁸ uiderit duci, turpia uerba cantari, dicat: ecce facta est Tyrus ut canticum meretricis. oraculum⁹ propheticae adnuntiationis impletum. et subiecit: *accipe*¹ citharam, uagare, ciuitas meretrix oblita, bene cithariza multa canta, ut fiat memoria tui. et erit post LXX annos Tyrus ut canticum meretricis et uisitationem faciet deus Tyri. unde possumus et in² bono canticum³ Raab illius meretricis accipere, quae exploratores Iesu fidei⁴ mente suscepit. nam et dominus ait: *cantaui*⁵ uobis, et non saltastis, et Dauid ait: *cantate*⁶ domino canticum nouum, cantate domino omnis terra. hoc est canticum meretricis, quod illa ante meretrix in Adam et Eua terra cantauit, meretrix in populo⁷ nationum. haec meretrix plurimas meretrices bonas fecit, de quibus dictum⁸ est a domino Iesu ad illum electum et seniore populum dei: *publicani*⁹ et meretrices praecedunt uos in regnum dei.

Is. 23,
14, sq.

Is. 23, 15.

Is. 23, 15.

Is. 23, 15.

Is. 23,
16-17.

Ios. 2, 1.

Luc.
7, 32.
Psalm.
95, 1.Matth.
21, 31.

drink inhabit islands, resound with shipwrecks, are beaten with the waves of drunkenness, and are not quiet by day or night. Therefore the seed of these merchants is in the water; in the water is the fruit of their harvest. For in the water they sow their labors so that they reap dangers; in the water their crop sprouts for them; in the water their harvest grows abundant; the very fruit is in the water, never safe and sound. Whereupon he says rightly: 'He who sowed in the earth did not enter into traffic; that is, he, of course, who sowed in heaven. But there is also good earth, and whoever shall sow in this, for him there shall come forth heavenly fruits.'

20, 73. Howl, he says he repeats it—O ye ships of Carthage, for your strength is laid waste. And it shall come to pass in that day, Tyre shall be abandonc: and below, but after seventy years, Tyre shall be as the song of a harlot. Behold what words the prophet employs, and how he does not avoid the baseness of words of this kind. We ourselves sometimes avoid them, not because our tongue is more chaste than theirs, but our authority inferior. For very great is the force of words in the vivid exposition of such things, so that they who do not blush at their sins blush at least at the names of their sins. Tyre shall be, he says, as the song of a harlot. Beware, lest, when someone sees those dances being performed, and unseemly words being sung, he say: "Behold Tyre has become as the song of a harlot. The word of the prophet's announcement has been fulfilled." 74. And he added: Take up a harp, wander about thou harlot city that hast been forgotten: sing well many songs, that thou mayest be remembered. But after seventy years Tyre shall be as the song of a harlot, and the Lord will visit Tyre. Wherefore we can accept even in good part the song of that harlot, Rahab, who took in the spies of Josue with believing heart. For the Lord also says: We have piped to you and you have not danced, and David says: Sing ye to the Lord a new canticle: sing to the Lord all the earth. This is the song of the harlot which that harlot earth sang before in Adam and Eve; the harlot that sang in the people of the nations. This harlot made many good harlots, of whom it has been said by the Lord Jesus to that chosen and elder people of God; The publicans and harlots shall go into the kingdom of God before you.

- 75 Ergo quoniam tam misericordem habemus dominum, qui etiam graui ignoscat errori, conuertamur a uitiiis, non¹ recedamus a lege, praeceptum² domini quasi seruuli³ sedulis studiis exequamur. quid nobis cum impuritibus⁴ et inpudicitiiis,⁵ quid cum operibus diaboli? audistis⁶ hodie in lectione decursa quid legio⁷ dixerit: quid⁸ mihi et tibi est, Iesu, fili dei? et tu dic, si forte uides pugnare aduersum te diaboli temptamenta:⁹ *‘quid mihi et tibi est, Belial?’*¹⁰ ego seruus Christi sum, illius redemptus sanguine, illi me totum mancipauit.¹¹ quid mihi et tibi est? non noui opera¹² tua, nihil tuum quaero, nihil tuum possideo, nihil tuum desidero.⁷ quanto magis nos separari oportet a diabolo, si se ille discernit¹³ a Christo? et si fuimus ei in aliquo obnoxii, iam non sumus. confugimus¹⁴ ad medicum. uulnera superiora curauit, et si quid superest acerbitalis, medella¹⁵ non deerit. etsi quid iniuriae fecimus, memor non erit qui¹⁶ semel donauit. etsi grauia deliquimus, magnum¹⁷ medicum inuenimus, magnam medicinam gratiae eius accepimus; magna medicina enim tollit¹⁸ peccata magna. habemus etiam plura subdita,¹ quibus peccata² nostra redimamus. pecuniam habes, redime peccatum tuum. non uenalis est dominus, sed tu ipse uenalis es. peccatis tuis uenditus es: redime te operibus³ tuis, redime te pecunia tua. uilis pecunia, sed pretiosa est misericordia. elimosyna⁴ namque a peccato liberat; et alibi: redemptio⁵ uiri diuitiae eius; et in euangelio: facite⁶ uobis amicos de mammona iniquitatis. et uenenum frequenter antidoto⁷ temperatur, hoc est ueneno uenenum⁸ excluditur, ueneno mors repellitur, uita servatur. fac et tu quasi⁹ bonus dispensator de instrumento¹⁰ auaritiae subsidium¹¹ misericordiae, sinceritalis¹² gratiam de corruptionis¹³ inlecebra.

Luc.
8, 28.2 Cor.
6, 15.Tob.
12, 9.
Prov.
13, 8.
Luc.
16, 9.

- 21, 77. Audistis¹ quid hodie lectum sit: ecce² uenit dominus disperdere orbem terrarum. quasi manu sanctus propheta demonstret, quasi oculis aduenientem uideat iudicii³ diem, ita dicit: ecce uenit dominus disperdere orbem terrarum. immo

Is. 13, 5.

Is. 13, 5.

75. Therefore since we have a Lord so merciful, that He forgives even a grievous sin, let us turn from vices, let us not depart from the law, let us follow out the precept of the Lord, as it were, with the zealous efforts of a servant. What have we to do with impurities and immodesties; what, with the works of the devil? You have heard in the lesson read to-day what Legion has said: What have I to do with thee, Jesus, Son of the Most High God? Do you also say, if perchance you see the temptations of the devil fighting against you: 'What have I to do with thee, Belial? I am the servant of Christ, redeemed by His blood; I have given up myself entire to Him. What have I to do with thee? I know not thy works, I seek nothing of thine, I possess nothing of thine, I desire nothing of thine.' How much more ought we to be separated from the devil, if he sets himself apart from Christ? And if we have been subject to him in anything, we are no longer. We have taken refuge with the physician. He has cured our former wounds, and if any pain remains, a remedy will not be wanting. Although we have done some injury, He will not be mindful of it Who has once forgiven. Although we have committed grievous faults, we have found a great physician; we have received the great medicine of His grace; for great medicine removes great sins. 76. We have also many things furnished to us whereby we may redeem our sins. You have money: redeem your sin. The Lord is not venal, but you yourself are venal. You have been sold by your sins; redeem yourself by your works, redeem yourself by your money. Cheap is money, but precious is mercy. For Alms delivereth from death; and in another place: The ransom of a man's life are his riches; and in the Gospel: Make unto yourselves friends of the mammon of iniquity. And poison is frequently tempered by an antidote: that is, poison is expelled by poison; by poison is death repelled, life saved. Do you also, like a good steward, make the aid of mercy from the instrument of avarice, and make the favor of purity from the enticement of corruption.

21, 77. You have heard what has been read to-day: Behold the Lord comes to destroy the world. As if the holy prophet were pointing out with his hand, as if he were seeing with his eyes, the Day of Judgment approaching, so he says: Behold the Lord comes to destroy the world. Indeed since in spirit even the quia in⁴ spiritu prophetis etiam quae futura sunt tamquam praesentia reuelantur, ideo quae uidebat nobis quoque demonstrare cupiebat, ut nos ad conuersionem⁵ ab⁶ errore reuocaret.

78 nec tamen quisquam frangi debet, cum audit¹ quia disperdet dominus orbem terrarum, ne forte dicat: 'esto, nos grauius peccata commisimus: quid deliquit caelum, quid terra, quid mare, ut et illa disperdat? cur perit tam pulcher² ornatus?' angusti³ est animi eiusmodi opinio. ceterum si altius⁴ spectes, inuenies hoc esse pro nobis quod putas esse contra nos, iudicabis hoc esse pro mundo quod aduersus mundum arbitraris. non semper stadium refertum est spectatoribus, non semper certaminibus inquietum,⁵ non semper concretum⁶ puluere, sed quando certamina, tunc populus in spectaculo, luctator⁷ in scammate,⁸ puluis in stadio. ubi decursa certamina, conuentus soluitur, discedit unusquisque aut uictor ad gratiam aut uictus ad opprobrium. euehit⁹ corona uictorem, uictum premit uerecundia, angit¹⁰ iniuria. si quis ergo postea ingrediatur¹¹ stadium, uideat uacuum¹² celebritatis, dicat agonisthae¹³ cur uacet stadium, cur sileant certamina, cur sollemnitatis¹⁴ ferietur,¹⁵ respondebit qui agoni¹⁶ praeest: 'oportet requiescere athletas, oportet¹⁷ requiescere spectatores.' qui¹⁸ enim laboris est fructus nisi requies post laborem? similiter et orbis terrarum aliquando soluendus est, ut sit requies fatigatis.

79 Athletae¹ sumus, in quodam stadio decernimus spiritali. denique bonus athleta dicebat: facti² sumus spectaculum huius mundi; et alibi: sic³ curro non ut in incertum, sic enitor, non ut aera caedens, sed castigo corpus meum; et alibi: superiora⁴ obliuiscens et ea quae sunt priora adpetens ad destinatum sequor, ad brabium. athletae⁵ ergo sumus, legitime certandum est. multa luctamina⁶ sunt, et qui hodie uictus est cras se reparat. ante ad brabium⁷ contenditur, ad coronam postea. numquid⁸ athleta otio uacat, cum semel dederit⁹ cer-

1 Cor. 9, 24.

1 Cor. 4, 9.

1 Cor. 9, 26 et 27.

Phil. 3, 13 et 14.

2 Tim. 2, 5.

things which are to come are revealed to the prophets as present, what he saw, therefore, he desired to show to us also that he might recall us to conversion from error. 78. And yet no one should be crushed when he hears that the Lord will destroy the whole earth, lest perchance he say: 'Let it be so, we have committed serious sins: in what has heaven failed, in what the earth, in what the sea, that He destroy these also? Why does such beautiful adornment perish?' A thought of this kind belongs to a small mind. But if you look more deeply you will find that this is for us which you think is against us; you will judge that this is for the world which you think is opposed to the world. Not always is the stadium crowded with spectators, not always restless with contests, not always thick with dust; but when there are contests, then there are people in the amphitheatre, a wrestler in the wrestling place, dust in the stadium. When the contests have been run off, the gathering is dispersed; each one departs either, as victor, to favor, or as vanquished, to disgrace. The crown raises up the victor; shame presses the vanquished, injury causes pain. If afterward, then, any one enter the stadium, and see it without a crowd, and should ask the superintendent of games why the stadium is vacant, why the contests are silent, why the celebration has ceased, the president of the contests will reply, 'The athletes must rest, the spectators must rest.' For what is the fruit of labor, if not rest after labor? In like manner the world also at some time must be destroyed, that there may be rest for the weary.

79. We are athletes, we strive, as it were, in a spiritual stadium. Hence, a good athlete was wont to say: We are made a spectacle of this world: and elsewhere: I so run, not as at an uncertainty: I so fight, not as one beating the air: But I chastise my body; and elsewhere: forgetting the things that are behind, and stretching forth myself to those that are before, I press towards the mark, to the prize. We are athletes, therefore; we must contend lawfully. There are many contests, and he who has been vanquished to-day, retrieves himself on the morrow. The contest is first for the prize, then for the crown. Does an athlete have any time for rest when once he has given his name for the contest? He exercises daily, he anoints himself daily. Even an athlete's diet

tamini nomen suum? exercetur cottidie, ungitur cottidie. ipse cibus ei agonisticus¹⁰ datur, disciplina¹¹ exigitur, castimonia custoditur. et tu dedisti nomen tuum ad agonem¹² Christi, subscripsisti ad competitionem¹³ coronae: meditare, exercere, ungere oleo¹⁴ laetitiae, unguento¹⁵ exinanito. cibus¹⁶ tuus cibus sobrietatis sit, nihil habeat intemperantiae, nihil luxuriae, potus tuus parrior, ne quid ebrietatis obrepat, custodi corporis castimoniam, ut possis esse habilis¹⁷ ad coronam, ne existimatio tua offendat spectatoris affectum,¹⁸ ne te fautores tui negligenter uideant et deserant. spectant te archangeli¹⁹ et potestates et dominationes et illa angelorum decem milia decem milium. sub tantis erubescere considera quam dedecorosum²⁰ sit, ingressus²¹ stadium uigorem²² animae tuae excita, lacertos²³ excute. progressus in scamma²⁴ necesse est excipias puluerem, subeas aestiui²⁵ solis flagrantiam.²⁶ grauis aestus, sed dulcis uictoria: molesta caligo pulueris, sed speciosa²⁷ tolerantia.²⁸ nemo stadium²⁹ puluerulentus ingreditur, sed puluerulentum reddunt certamina: ibi³⁰ colligitur puluis, ubi palma proponitur. nemo³¹ iterum

80 nitidus coronatur, puluerulentum decet uictoria. ueni ergo, domine Iesu, exeat¹ corona tua, dimitte uictores in requiem, uictos ad conpunctionem.² etsi³ disperdis orbem terrarum, Is. 13, 5. plura sunt inuisibilia⁴ opera tua quam quae uidimus. qui angustioris⁵ est animi illa non cernit, dolet⁶ quod disperdas orbem terrarum, sed qui⁷ nouit spectare quae inuisibilia sunt gaudet ut uenias et omnes liberes. gaudent athletae, qui possunt dicere: ueniat⁸ regnum tuum, fiat uoluntas tua sicut in caelo et in terras gaudebit⁹ creatura mundi, ut a uanitate mundi istius liberetur, quae nunc¹⁰ congemiscit et parturit, quia uanitati etiam illa creatura subiecta est, donec multiplicetur adoptio¹¹ filiorum et totius corporis redemptio compleatur. in¹² bono ergo disperdet¹³ orbem terrarum. erit¹⁴ etenim caelum nouum et nox¹⁵ non erit amplius. denique reuelabit¹⁶, inquit, faciem eius, ut reuelata facie spectemus gloriam Christi.

1 Cor.
9, 25.Cant.
1, 3.Coloss.
1, 16.

Is. 13, 5.

Matth.
6, 10.
Rom. 8,
20-23.Is. 13, 5.
Apoc.
21, 1;
22, 5.
2 Cor. 3,
16 et 18.

is given to him, discipline is demanded, continence is observed. And you have given your name for the contest of Christ, you have signed for the competition for the crown; take thought, exercise yourself, anoint yourself with the oil of gladness, cleanse yourself from ointment. Let your food be the food of sobriety, let it have nothing of intemperance, nothing of luxury; let your drink be rather moderate, lest any drunkenness steal upon you; guard the continence of your body, so that you can be fit for the crown; let not your character offend the feelings of the spectator; let not your supporters behold you neglectful of yourself and desert you. The Archangels behold you, and the Powers, and the Dominations, and those ten thousands of ten thousands of angels. Consider how disgraceful it would be to be shamed before such; having entered the stadium, arouse the strength of your soul, bestir your muscles. When you have come into the wrestling place you must take on dust, you must withstand the blazing heat of the summer sun. The heat is severe, but the victory is sweet; the cloud of dust is disagreeable, but the endurance is splendid. No one enters the stadium covered with dust, but the contests send him back covered with dust; there the dust is collected where the palm is offered. No one unsoiled, moreover, is crowned; victory becomes him who is covered with dust. 80. Come therefore, Lord Jesus, let Thy crown go forth, dismiss the victors to their rest; the vanquished, to penance. Even if Thou destroyest the world, more numerous are Thy invisible works than those which we have seen. He who is of too narrow mind does not see those things, he grieves because Thou destroyest the world; but he who knows how to perceive those things which are invisible, rejoices that Thou comest and freest all. The athletes rejoice who can say: Thy kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven. The creature of the world, that now sighs deeply and travailleth, will rejoice that it will be delivered from the vanity of the world, because that creature also is subject to vanity, until the adoption of the sons be multiplied and the redemption of the entire body be completed. For good, therefore, He will destroy the whole world. For there will be a new heaven and Night shall be no more. Finally, He will uncover his face, He says, that we all may behold the glory of the Lord with face uncovered.

- 22, 81. Aduertimus¹ igitur in stadio constituti² quantis³ aut delectationi aut dolori erimus, qui nunc fautores nobis sunt ne pro nobis incipiant erubescere. sicut⁴ enim erit gaudium in caelo super uno peccatore paenitentiam agente, ita erit maestitia super⁵ eo qui non⁶ exorata uenia cursum⁷ uitae huius confecerit. castigemus⁸ ergo corpus nostrum ieiuniis, fugiamus indecoras comisationes. caueamus ne nobis dicatur: ululate⁹ a uino, ne ueniat Moyses, Leuitas aduocet. quicumque paratus¹⁰ ad dominum armatam dexteram gerat, separet se ab iis qui manducando et bibendo grauiam contraxere peccata. et hodie Moyses uenit, cum lex¹¹ recensetur:
- 82 Moyses uocat, cum lex praecipit. apostolus docet ut¹ separemus nos ab omni fratre inquiete agente. percutiamus eum gladio² spiritali, qui est uerbum dei. non³ fratris, non propinqui accipiamus personam, sed omnem inmundum⁴ a Christi secernamus altaribus,⁵ ut emundet⁶ et corrigat lapsus
- 83 suos, quo⁷ ad sacramenta Christi redire mereatur. si quis autem non est baptizatus, securior conuertatur¹ remissionem² accipiens peccatorum . . . uelut³ ignis quidam peccata consumit, quia⁴ Christus in igne et spiritu baptizat. denique hunc typum⁵ legis in Regnorum libris, ubi⁶ Helias super altare ligna inposuit et dixit ut mitterent⁷ supra de hydriis aquam. et⁸ dixit: iterate, et iterauerunt. et dixit: iterate tertio, et iterauerunt et tertio. et, cum⁹ manaret aqua, precatus est Helias, et¹⁰ ignis descendit e caelo. tu es homo super altare, qui ablueris¹¹ aqua, cuius exuritur culpa ut uita renouetur: lignum¹² enim et stipulam consumit ignis. noli timere ignem per quem inluminaris.¹³ ideo tibi dicitur: accedite¹⁴ ad eum et inluminamini. suscipite iugum Christi. nolite¹⁵ timere quia iugum est: festinate, quia leue est. non conterit¹⁶ colla, sed honestat. quid dubitatis, quid procrastinatis?¹⁷ non alligat ceruicem¹⁸ uinculis, sed mentem¹⁹ gratia
- 84 copulat, non necessitate constringit, . . . quid¹ negas adhuc esse temporis? omne² tempus opportunum ad indulgentiam. si³ aurum tibi offeram, non mihi dicis: cras ueniam, sed iam

Luc.
15, 10.Ioel.
1, 5;2 Thess.
3, 6.Eph.
6, 17.Deut.
4, 24.
Matth.
3, 11.
3 Reg.
18, 33.3 Reg.
18, 34
et 38.Psalm 33, 6.
Matth.
11, 29 sq.

22, 81. We note, therefore, when we are in the stadium, to how many we shall be a joy or grief who are now our supporters. Let them not begin to blush for us. For just as There shall be joy in Heaven upon one sinner doing penance, so there will be sadness upon him who has made the course of this life without obtaining forgiveness. Therefore let us chastise our bodies by fasting, let us flee unseemly revelling. Let us take care that it may not be said to us: Howl from wine; lest Moses may come, lest he summon the Levites. Whoever is ready for the Lord let him bear his right hand armed, let him separate himself from those who, through eating and drinking, have contracted grievous sins. Even to-day Moses comes when the Law is spoken of; Moses calls when the Law commands. 82. The Apostle teaches That we withdraw ourselves from every brother acting disorderly. Let us pierce him with the sword of the Spirit which is the word of God. Let us not respect the person of a brother, of a kinsman, but let us separate every unclean man from the altars of Christ, that he may cleanse and amend his faults, that he may deserve to return to the Sacraments of Christ. 83. Moreover if anyone has not been baptized, let him with all the greater security be converted, receiving the remission of his sins . . . as a kind of fire consumes sins, since Christ baptizes in fire and spirit. Hence, you read of this type in the Books of Kings where Elias placed wood upon the altar and told them to pour water thereupon from urns. And he said, Do the same the second time. And they did it the second time. And he said: Do the same also the third time, and when the water dripped about, Elias prayed and fire descended from heaven. You, O man, are upon an altar, you who are purified by water and whose sin is burned out that life may be renewed; for fire consumes wood and stubble. Do not fear the fire through which you are enlightened. Therefore it is said to you: Come ye to him and be enlightened. Take up the yoke of Christ, do not fear because it is a yoke; hasten because it is light. It does not bruise the neck but adorns it. Why do you hesitate, why do you delay? It does not bind the neck with chains, but it unites the mind by grace; it does not constrain by compulsion, . . . 84. why do you say that it is not yet time? All times are opportune for indulgence. If I should offer you gold you do not exigis. nemo differt, nullus excusat: redemptio⁴ animae promittitur, et nemo festinat. Iohannes⁵ in paenitentiam baptizabat, et omnis Iudaea conueniebat: Christus⁶ baptizat in spiritu, Christus gratiam dispensat,⁷ et cum fastidio conuenitur. typum⁸ baptismatis demonstraui Helias⁹ et caelum aperuit, quod fuit clausum tribus¹⁰ annis et sex mensibus. quanto maiora munera ueritatis sunt! aperuit utique caelum non pluuia descendens, sed ascendens gratia; nemo¹¹ enim nisi per aquam et spiritum ascendit in regnum caelorum. clauserat caelum hominibus perfidia,¹² sed aperuit fides.

- 85 patebat et ante hoc caelum hominibus. denique¹ Enoch raptus ad caelum est. iterum² clausum est, sed aperuit Helias,³ qui raptus est curru. et uos potestis ascendere, si sacramenti⁴ gratiam consequamini. quousque delectationes, quousque commissationes? instat⁵ iudicii dies: dum differs gratiam, mors⁶ adpropinquat. quis dicat: 'non mihi nunc uacat, occupatus sum, non⁷ mihi demonstres lumen, nolo tam cito me redimas, non mihi adhuc opus est regnum⁸ caeleste?' nonne hoc dicit qui⁹ excusat a baptismo? et quanta gratia renouaris, o homo! (purgaris) et non exureris, sanaris et non doles, reformaris¹⁰ et non dissolueris, ictum¹¹ mortis non excipis et resurgis.¹² et adhuc dissimulas,¹³ adhuc expectas ut uiuas saeculo,¹⁴ postea te reseruas deo? ignoras¹⁵ quod Cain propterea displicuerit sacrificium, quoniam non primitiua¹⁶ optulit,¹⁷ sed primitiuis ipse perfunctus¹⁸ de¹⁹ sequentibus munus²⁰ deo temptauit offerre, Abel autem primitiarum²¹ oblatione praelatus meruit insigne pietatis?

Matth.
3, 11.

3 Reg. 17,
1 et 18.

Ioh.
3, 5.

Gen.
5, 24.

4 Reg.
2, 11.

Gen. 4,
3 sq.

say to me: 'To-morrow I shall come,' but you demand it immediately. No one delays, no one excuses: redemption of the soul is promised, and no one hastens. John baptized unto penance and all Judaea followed him: Christ baptizes in Spirit, Christ dispenses His grace, and is met with scorn. Elias showed the type of baptism and opened heaven which had been closed for three years and six months. How much greater are the rewards of truth! Not the descending rain, indeed, opened heaven, but ascending grace; for no one save by water and the Spirit ascends into the Kingdom of Heaven. Faithlessness had closed heaven to man, but faith opened it. 85. Heaven even before this was open to men. Therefore Henoch was taken up into heaven. Again it was closed; but Elias opened it, who was taken up in a fiery chariot. And you can ascend if you obtain the grace of the Sacrament. How long will there be licentious pleasures, how long drunken revelling? The Day of Judgment draws nigh; while you put off grace, death approaches. Who would say, 'Now I have no time, I am busy, do not show me the light, I do not wish that Thou redeem me so quickly. I have yet no need of the Kingdom of Heaven?' Does he not say this who excuses himself from baptism? And with how great grace are you renewed, O man! You are purified from sin and are not burned, you are cured and do not suffer, you are remade and are not dissolved, you do not receive the sting of death, and you rise again. And do you yet neglect it, do you yet intend to live for the world, and then keep yourself for God? Do you not know that on this account the sacrifice of Cain was displeasing, that he did not offer the first fruits, but he himself, after enjoying the first fruits, tried to offer a gift to God from those remaining; but that Abel, preferred through his offering of the first fruits, merited the mark of piety?

COMMENTARY.

SECTION 1.

1. Helia: Schenkl has this reading; the Benedictines, Elias; the Vulgate, Elias; the Greek, Ἡλίας. On the spelling of the word with h, a probable imitation of the Septuagint, cf. Vigouroux, Vol. 2, p. 1670.

2. divinum ad patres resultavit oraculum: divinum . . . oraculum is a pagan phrase used in a Christian sense. Ambrose often uses the word oraculum with the epithet caeleste also. Cf. McGuire 166. The T. L. L. V 1621, 77-78 quotes the combination divinum oraculum for: Stat. Theb. 1, 491; Firm. err. 14, 1; 22, 2; Aug. civ. 10, 23. resultavit is Poetic, Silver, and Late Latin. Cf. K.-Schm. s. v. The word occurs frequently in Ambrose in connection with "prophecies or utterances of Scripture, and of the voice of God." For examples, cf. McGuire 236. For the Scriptural allusion, cf. Num. 10, 9-10.

3. tuba canerent: for the phrase, cf. Paul. Fest. p. 19: tubis canebant; Comm. Apol. 1001: ecce canit caelo rauca tuba. For further citations, cf. T. L. L. III 265, 72-84; 266, 1-10. The expression here is due to Scriptural influence.

4. populi sui: for the use of populus in this sense referring to the chosen people, cf. Deut. 32, 36: iudicabit Dominus populum suum.

5. misericordiae . . . incentiva: in its use here as a neuter subst., incentivum is Late Latin, being cited for: Tertullian, Ps.-Cyprian, Arnobius, Ammianus, Jerome, Rufinus, Sidonius. It also occurs as a feminine subst. in Ambrose. Cf. B.-G. s. v. For a further instance of the same phrase, cf. Ambr. off. 2, 28, 136.

6. in diebus laetitiae: in Late Latin, especially in Eccl. Latin, the preposition with the Abl. to express time becomes practically the rule. For a complete treatment of the temporal Abl. with in, cf. Salonijs 131-132. The phrase here is undoubtedly due to Scriptural influence. Cf. Cant. 3, 11: et in die laetitiae; Esther 9, 22: dies isti . . . laetitiae; Tob. 13, 10: agite dies laetitiae.

7. in numeniis suis: for this use of the Abl. cf. n. 6. The word numeniis is confined to Eccl. Latin, being cited first for Tertullian. For the allusion, cf. Psalm 80, 4: Buccinate in neomenia tuba, in insigni die sollemnitatis vestrae.

8. unde et: the use of unde as an equivalent of quare is Late Latin. Cf. K.-Schm. s. v.; Saloni^{us} 212. The use of et = etiam is found to some extent in Livy, and then in Silver and especially in Late writers. The use of et = etiam after unde = quare is very common in Ambrose. Cf. McGuire 41.

9. Psalm 80, 4. The Old Version reads: Canite Deo initio mensis in tuba, in diem insignis sollemnitatis nostrae. For the Vulgate reading cf. n. 7 above. Cf. also Basil 164 A (1 A): Σαλπίσατε, φησίν, ἐν νεομηνίᾳ, σάλπιγγι, ἐν εὐσήμεν ἡμέρᾳ ἑορτῆς ὑμῶν. Τοῦτο πρόσταγμα ἐστὶ προφητικόν.

10. dies sollemnitatis: sollemnitas is Late Latin, being cited from Gellius on. It is especially common in the Christian writers. Note the use of the Gen. of quality without an accompanying adjective. This use probably occurs first in Phaedrus and Ps.-Quintilian, and then in Late writers from Apuleius on. Cf. St.-Schm. 399; Saloni^{us} 84-89. The phrase dies sollemnitatis is obviously used here under the influence of the Scriptural passage above.

11. tamquam . . . progredientes: tamquam with the present participle in the Classical period is cited only for Cic. Brut. 201: et ego tamquam de integro ordiens . . . inquam; but the construction becomes frequent in Silver and Late Latin. Cf. St.-Schm. 603; K.-Steg. II, 1, 791. This usage is frequent in the Letters of St. Ambrose. Cf. Adams 71.

12. adnuntiemus sollemnitatis diem: adnuntiare is Silver and Late, and particularly frequent in Eccl. Latin. Cf. T. L. L. s. v. For the phrase sollemnitatis dies, cf. n. 10.

13. simul nobis et certamen imminet et victoria repromittitur: for the thought cf. Num. 10, 9. certamen, a term borrowed from the language of the games, is employed here in the sense of a spiritual struggle. The use of such expressions in portraying the battle or contest that the Christian must fight with the powers of evil in his combat for salvation, occurs frequently in Eccl. Latin, chiefly under the influence of the well-known passages in St. Paul quoted in Sect. 79. Cf. Teeuwen, Sprachlicher Bedeutungswandel bei Tertullian, pp. 101-120; particularly pp. 106-108. repromittitur, "to promise again" or "anew," as here, is first cited for Suetonius. Cf. B.-G. s. v.

14. non quo ipse egeret certamine: the use of non quo with the subjunctive to express a rejected reason is confined chiefly to Cicero. Cf. St. Schm. 787; K.-Steg. II, 2, 385. For a further instance in Ambrose, cf. McGuire 153.

15. ut nobis formam bellandi ante praescriberet et postea daret gratiam triumphandi: for very similar expressions, cf. Cic. rep. 2, 26: animos ardentis consuetudine et cupiditate bellandi mitigavit Numa; Sil. 8, 26: praecepta modumque bellandi. Numerous instances of the same nature are cited in the T. L. L. I 1817, 1818. For a like development of the same thought, cf. Ambr. epist. 63. 15: unde et dominus Jesus volens nos adversus diaboli tentamenta fortiores reddere, certaturus ieiunavit; ut sciremus quia aliter illecebras mali non possumus vincere.

16. denique ieiunavit salvator . . . temptator accessit: for the allusion, cf. Luc. 4, 2. denique = igitur. This use of denique is Late Latin. Cf. K.-Schm. s. v. ieiunare is Late Latin, probably used first by Tertullian. Cf. K.-Schm. s. v.; Rönsch 165. salvator: Late Latin, and used very commonly among Christian writers as a designation of Christ. Cf. K.-Schm. s. v. temptator: used here as often in Christian writers to designate Satan. The word itself is Classical. For further instances of this and other terms used by Ambrose for designating Satan, cf. Petschenig's Index (C. S. E. L. vol. 64, 6) 428.

17. gulae direxit spiculum dicens: the usual construction with dirigere "aiming at" or "directing at" is ad or in with the Acc.; but the Dat., as here, is rare, being cited twice for Vergil, once for Sen., Bell., Drac., Baudon., Apon. Cf. T. L. L. V 1240, 25; 1241, 63. 65. 82. 84; 1243, 40; 1244, 41. To these add the present passage from Ambrose. For a similar expression, cf. Ambr. Nab. 14, 62; epist. 63, 15. Used of weapons, dirigere is noted first for Vergil in Poetry, and first for Valerius Maximus in Prose. This usage is frequent in the Poets and the Vulgate. Cf. T. L. L. V 1241, 58 ff. For the phrase dirigere spiculum, cf. Ov. met. 12, 605: arcus obvertit in illum certaue letifera direxit spicula; Verg. Aen. 7, 497: Aseanius curvo direxit spicula cornu. spiculum in Classical Latin is mostly Poetical. The present participle of dicere introducing Scriptural quotations is almost conventional in Eccl. Latin. Cf. Bayard 245.

18. Luc. 4, 3.

19. laquei: as here, "snares of sin", is frequent in Ambrose, who like other Eccl. writers. employs the word through the influence of Scripture. Cf. e. g. Ambr. Nab. 6, 28; 17, 73.

20. praetendit: in this sense of "to put before another", Poetic in Classical Latin. being cited in this meaning first for Vergil.

21. inlaquearet adpetentiam corporalem: inlaqueare is very rare. In its transferred meaning, as here, it is cited for Cicero and Horace. Cf. B.-G. and For. s. v. adpetentiam is noted twice for Cicero, three times for Pliny, otherwise Late. The T. L. L. gives eleven citations from Ambrose exclusive of the present passage. Cf. T. L. L. II 279, 60-84; 280, 1-20. The adjective corporalis is found first in Seneca's Letters. It is most common in Eccl. writers. Cf. T. L. L. s. v.

22. Luc. 4, 4. The Old Version has in pane solo vivet for in solo pane vivit. The thought is developed more fully by Basil (who adds a passage from Matth. 11, 11; and also refers incidentally to II Cor. 11, 27; ibid. 12, 2; Matth. 4, 2). Cf. Bas. 177 C (7 E, 8 A).

23. absolutione diabolicae quaestionis: absolutio used in this sense of "a solution" (of a riddle) is Late Latin. For similar phrases, cf. Aug. quaest. hept. 1, 162; 4, 18: facilior est absolutio quaestionis, quia . . .; Macr. Gramm. VI (diff. 18, 3): haec et quaestio et absolutio cum latinitate communis est. Cf. T. L. L. I 181, 66-78. diabolicus: Eccl. Latin, being cited first for Iren. 5, 25, 1.

SECTION 2.

1. speciosa militia: the use of speciosa in this sense of "beautiful" "brilliant" is Poetical and Silver Prose. militia (Poetic, Silver, and Late) is used here by Ambrose pertaining to "warfare" in the military service of Christ. Cf. Teeuwen 106 ff. Undoubtedly the use of the word here is due to Scriptural influence. Cf. Job 7, 1: militia est vita hominis super terram. Cf. also Sect. 1, n. 13.

2. ut ieiunare delectaret: such an apparent irregularity in sequence of tenses is found in Classical Latin even in Cicero, particularly in consecutive clauses as here. Cf. St.-Schm. 703. On the use of ieiunare, cf. Sect. 1, n. 16.

3. magis quam: = potius quam. This deviation from the Classical usage is frequent in Late writers. Cf. K.-Schm. s. v. magis.

4. de Heliae ieiuno ore vox missa caelum clausit: for the allusion, cf. 3 Kings 17, 1 ff.; 16, 31 ff. Basil develops this thought at length. He refers to 3 Kings 19, 8 ff., and quotes 3 Kings 17, 1. Cf. Bas. 172 C (5 BC); 193 B (14 D).

5. populo Iudaeorum: Scriptural. Cf. 1 Mac. 8, 20: et populus Iudaeorum miserunt nos ad vos; 1 Mac. 14, 20: populo Iudaeorum, fratribus, salutem.

6. etenim: etenim is common first in Cicero and then in other Classical writers. It is less frequent among Silver writers, but its usage is again extensive in Late Latin. Cf. St.-Schm. 681; K.-Steg. II 2, 128.

7. altare: the singular of this word is found first in Petron. 135 and Apul. Plat. 1, 1; and then very frequently among Christian writers. Note that Ambrose uses the word here of a pagan altar. For further instances of this designation for an altar to false gods, cf. 4 Kings 23, 12, 15-16; 16, 10 ff.; 2 Par. 14, 2; and especially 4 Kings 21, 4-5 where both altare and ara are synonymous terms indicating the pagan altar. On the distinction between altare and ara, cf. Cabrol-Leclercq, Dictionnaire d'Archéologie Chrétienne et de Liturgie I 3155-3189, especially pp. 3156-3157.

8. idolo: when used in Classical writers the word means "image", "spectre", "apparition", while in the Christian sense it signifies "an image of a false god". Cf. B.-G. For further citations from Ambrose, cf. Barry 212.

9. ad verbum prophetarum: for the allusion, cf. 3 Kings 17, 1; 18, 1. The phrase ad verbum prophetarum is a Scriptural echo; cf. e. g. Bar. 1, 21; Deut. 13, 3.

10. tribus annis et sex mensibus: it seems certain now that duration of time expressed by the Abl. appears already in Early Latin; cf. e. g. Ter. Ad. 520: ut triduo hoc perpetuo e lecto nequeat surgere; Plaut. Mil. 212: quod bini custodes semper totis horis occubat. Though Catullus, Cicero, and Caesar use this construction, its frequency only becomes apparent in Propertius and Ovid, and then in subsequent writers who, for the most part, prefer this usage to that of the Acc. of duration. Cf. St.-Schm. 452; K.-Steg. II 1, 360; Svennung 22 ff.; Saloni 121-132.

11. ros pluviarum: the expression is probably due to Biblical influence; cf. 3 Kings 17, 1: si erit annis his ros et pluvia.

12. cecidit super terram: for this phrase, cf. 1 Kings 17, 49: et cecidit in faciem suam super terram; 2 Kings 13, 31: et cecidit super terram.

13. congrue: Late Latin. Cf. T. L. L. s. v.

14. terrena: in this sense of the "things of earth", as opposed to heaven, Late and chiefly Eccl.

15. condemnationem: cited twice for Cicero; otherwise common only in the Jurists and Late writers. Opposed to absolutio, as here, it is Eccl. Cf. T. L. L. IV 122, 78-84; 123, 49-54. Cf. also McGuire 113.

16. ad viduam in Sarepta Sidoniae: for this phrase and for the thought of the remainder of this Section, cf. 3 Kings 17, 9, ff.

17. devotionem: Late Latin in its transferred meaning, of "piety", "devotion", as here, and particularly common in Eccl. writers. The word is very frequent in Ambrose. Cf. T. L. L. V 879, 20-40.

18. ariditatis: cited for Varro and Pliny, otherwise for Late writers. For further instances of it in Ambrose, cf. T. L. L. II 564, 15-55.

19. aerumnam: though this word appears quite frequently in the works of Cicero, there is a suggestion in his De Finibus 2, 118, that its use was already archaic: sic enim maiores nostri labores non fugiendos tristissimo tamen verbo aerumnas etiam in deo nominaverunt. (Cf. T. L. L. s. v.) It appears in Sallust, Livy and Seneca, but Quintilian does not hold it in good repute. (Cf. Inst. 8, 3, 26.) Late writers from Apuleius on employ the word quite frequently. Cf. T. L. L. I 1069, 11 ff. Cf. also K.-Schm. s. v., and McGuire 124.

20. 3 Kings 17, 16. Ambrose is the source for this reading in the Old Version as cited by Sabatier. Schenkl, adopting the readings of certain Mss., writes polenta while the Benedictines have pollentae. The latter certainly seems to be the correct reading, as the phrase is obviously taken from Scripture. The Greek has: καὶ ἡ ὑδρία τοῦ ἀλεύρου οὐκ ἐξέλιπεν; the Vulgate: hydria farinae non defecit. Cf. also 3 Kings 17, 7.

21. torrentis: as a substantive = flumen etc., cited once for Cicero; otherwise Poetical, Silver, and Late. Cf. B.-G. s. v.; Georges s. v.

22. fluenta: Poetical, Silver, and Late. The word is common in Ambrose. Cf. T. L. L. s. v.

SECTION 3.

1. ieiunus filium viduae ab inferis resuscitavit: for the allusion, cf. 3 Kings 17, 22. Cf. Bas. 172 C (5 B): νηστεύων ἀπέδωκε τῇ χήρᾳ τὸν παῖδα, ἰσχυρὸς φανεῖς κατὰ τοῦ θανάτου διὰ νηστείας. resuscitare: signifying "to raise from the dead", confined to the Christian writers who use it frequently.

2. ieiunus pluvias ore deposuit, ieiunus ignis deduxit e caelo: for the allusion, cf. 3 Kings 18, 38 and 45.

3. ieiunus curru raptus ad caelum: cf. 4 Kings 2, 11.

4. quadraginta dierum ieiunio: cf. 3 Kings 19, 8.

5. divinam . . . praesentiam: the "Divine Presence". The T. L. L. (V 1622, 12) cites only one instance of this phrase: Bened. reg. 19, 2. Cf. Linderbauer 262. From Ambrose, add the present instance and Iac. 1, 7, 31; ibid. 1, 8, 39: divinae praesentiae.

6. ieiuno ore statuit fluenta Iordanis, etc.: for the allusion, cf. 4 Kings 2, 8. For the phrase ieiuno ore, cf. Sect. 2, n. 4.

7. redundantis: this use of redundans as a simple adjective is cited only for Eccl. Latin. Cf. Georges and B.-G. s. v.

8. alveum: is Poetical, Silver and Late when signifying a "channel" or "bed of a river", as here. Cf. T. L. L. I 1790, ff.

9. pulverulento: mostly Poetic and Silver Latin.

10. divina sententia: a Classical phrase employed here in a Christian sense. For further instances of its occurrence in Pagan and Christian authors, cf. T. L. L. V 1622, 82-83.

11. cum ipso raperetur corpore: for the thought, cf. 4 Kings 2, 11.

12. caelestem vitam: cf. Cic. Tusc., 1, 75: hoc et, dum erimus in terris, erit illi caelesti vitae simile. For further citations of this phrase, cf. T. L. L. III 69, 69-70.

13. supernae usum conversationis exhibebat in terris: cf. Vulg. Phil. 3, 20: nostra autem conversatio in coelis est: unde etiam Salvatorem expectamus Dominum nostrum Iesum Christum. The adjective supernus is Poetic, Silver, and Late. The use of conversatio in this sense of "manner of living" is Late and especially common in Eccl. Latin. Cf. T. L. L. IV 850, 71-84; 851 ff.

SECTION 4.

1. substantia et imago caelestis: substantia is cited first for Quintilian. Cf. Kaulen 28; K.-Schm. s. v. On the nature and substance of heaven, Ambrose has an elaborate discussion in his hex. 1, 6, 20-24. Cf. T. L. L. III 72, 44-45 for further instances of imago with the epithet caelestis.

2. refectio: Silver Latin.

3. cibus mentis: for the same phrase, cf. Sect. 5.

4. excidium: Poetical, Silver, and Late.

5. remedium salutis: for a somewhat similar combination of these words cf. Cic. Cluent. 67: acrioribus saluti suae remediis subveniendum putavit. salus in this sense of "eternal salvation" is Eccl. Latin and occurs frequently in Scripture, appearing e. g. 194 times in the Vulgate.

6. radix gratiae: for a similar expression, cf. Ambr. Cain et Ab. 2, 9, 28: fidem esse radicem virtutum omnium; id. in psalm 118, serm. 12, 21: radice virtutum.

7. fundamentum est castitatis: for similar expressions, cf. Cic. Planc. 9: pietas fundamentum est omnium virtutum; Sen. dial. 7, 15, 4: non das virtuti fundamentum gravi; Ambr. in Luc. 5, 82: omnium autem fundamentum docet esse virtutum obedientiam caelestium praeceptorum.

8. hanc hereditatem sobrietatis: for the allusion, cf. 4 Kings 2, 14. sobrietas is used only by Seneca and Val. Maximus in the Silver Age and then by writers of the later period. In its use here Ambrose is apparently influenced by the Latin New Testament which makes sobrietas the equivalent of the Greek σωφροσύνη. For a fuller discussion of the word, cf. McGuire 227.

9. abstemiae: cited for, Lucilius, Varro, Vitruvius, Horace, Ovid, Quintilian, and Pliny; otherwise Late Latin. For instances of the word in Ambrose, cf. his exc. Sat. 2, 96; in psalm 118, serm. 20, 4. Cf. T. L. L. I 188, 52-84; 189, 1-14.

10. dereliquit: in this sense of "bequeath" found in Sall. Iug. 5, 7: Iugurtham Masinissa . . . privatum dereliquerat; then in Seneca and Pliny. Otherwise it is confined to Late Latin. Cf. T. L. L. V 627, 49-73.

11. in hac virtute et spiritu Heliae venit: cf. Luc. 1, 17: ante illum in spiritu et virtute Eliae. The phrase, in spiritu venire is Scriptural; cf. e. g. Luc. 2, 27: et venit in spiritu in templum.

12. denique in deserto et ille vacabat ieiuniis: esca autem eius erat locustae et mel silvestre: for the allusion, cf. Matth. 3, 4. esca autem . . . silvestre is taken directly from Matth. 3, 4, but is not so noted by Schenkl. On the use of denique, cf. Sect. 1, n. 16. On the fasting of John in the desert, cf. also Bas. 177 C (7 E).

13. et ideo: this use of et ideo as a conclusive particle to connect coordinate sentences is confined chiefly to Fronto and later writers, although occurring in Varro and Celsus. For its use in Ambr. Nab., cf. McGuire 43. Cf. K.-Steg. II, 2, 146.

14. possibilitatem: Late Latin. For instances of its use in Ambrose, cf. Adams 100; Barry 23.

15. supergressus fuerat: this verb is Silver and Late Latin. On the use of fueram here to form a compound tense, cf. Introduction, p. 25.

16. de ipso: ipso = eodem here. The use of ipse alone = idem may occur even in Suetonius, but the usage only becomes quite definite and frequent from Tertullian on. Cf. St.-Schm. 479-480; Svennung, Orosiana, 67-68; Salonijs, 236.

17. Matth. 11, 9 ff. Except for the use of qui for et this is identical with the Old Version.

18. scriptum est: = γέγραπται, is a Scriptural phrase occurring, e. g., 100 times in the Vulgate. Due to this Biblical influence, Eccl. writers employ the expression frequently to introduce Scriptural quotations.

19. equos . . . currus . . . ascendere: ascendere equum is cited first in Latin Prose for Suet. Iul. 61. Other citations are given in the T. L. L. II 755, 60-33. As used here with the Acc. without a preposition, the verb is Poetic, Silver, and Late. Cf. T. L. L. II 755, 46 ff. McGuire (213) attributes the frequency of this verb in Eccl. writers to the influence of the Latin Bible. It occurs, e. g., more than 600 times in the Vulgate.

20. incorruptibilis: Eccl. Latin.

SECTION 5.

1. gestis: the phrase "res gesta" is the common Classical usage, although gesta is already found in Nepos. Cf. Georges s. v.

2. frequenti . . . sermone: for a similar expression, cf. Apul. met. 8, 2: sermonibus assiduis et conversatione frequenti. Cf. T. L. L. VI 1300, 22.

3. digessimus: in this sense of "to discourse", the verb is cited for Val. Maximus, Columella, Pliny, Quintilian, Frontinus, and then for Late writers. Cf. T. L. L. V 1119, 45-84; 1120, 1-33.

4. recurramus: very rare in this meaning "to have recourse to", being cited only for Quintilian and Tacitus. decurrere and confugere (the latter very frequent in Cicero) are ordinarily used in this sense.

5. ad supernorum . . . cognitionem: supernus in its subst. use, as here, is Late and chiefly Eccl. For the adjectival use of the word, cf. Sect. 3, n. 13.

6. materialis: Late Latin. Cf. B.-G. and Georges who cite: Tert. adv. Val. 17; Ambr. virg. 3, 1, 1; Rufin. Orig. in Rom. 7, 4; id. Orig. in Cant. pr. p. 300; Aug. bon. coniug. 20; Macr.; Chalc. comm. 219; Dionys. Exiq. Greg. Nyss. creat. 13; and the present passage. Adams (102) notes the word for Ambr. epist. 7, 4; 22, 4; 64, 92; Barry (95) lists it also for Ambr. virginit. 110, 115.

7. cibus mentis: for the same phrase, cf. Sect. 4.

8. epulantur animae: for a similar thought, cf. Sidon. epist. 4, 9, 3: per lectionem inter edendum saepius sumit animae cibum.

9. Ioh. 4, 34. The Old Version and Vulgate read: Dicit eis Iesus: Meus cibus est, ut faciam voluntatem eius, qui misit me, ut perficiam opus eius.

10. cibus angelorum: a Scriptural echo. Cf. Psalm. 77, 25: panem angelorum. Cf. Bas. 180 C (8 D): εἰ δὲ καὶ ἀγγέλων ἐστὶ τις τροφή, ἄριστος ἐστίν.

11. divino famulentur imperio: for the phrase, divinum imperium, cf. Apul. met. 11, 22. famulor is cited once for Cicero, Catullus, Publil. Syrus, Val. Maximus, Lucan, Val. Flaccus, Silius; twice for Plin. nat.; 8 times for Statius. It becomes frequent only from Tertullian on. Cicero, Catullus, and Publilius employ the word absolutely, whereas its use with the Dat., as here, is the common construction. Cf. T. L. L. s. v.

12. repositae epulae: for the same expression, cf. Verg. georg. 3, 527: non illis epulae nocuere repostae. For a full discussion of the use and meaning of this phrase, cf. Conington's note on Vergil's Georgics 3, 527.

13. sicerae: == σίκερα, from the Hebrew sekar, is Eccl. Latin. B.-G. cites it from Tertullian on. It appears in Scripture in: Deut. 14, 26; 29, 6; Judges 13, 4, 7, 14; Prov. 31, 6. Cf. also Sect. 54, n. 8.

14. distentio corporis: distentio is Late and very rare. For a similar thought, cf. Paul. Nol. epist. 50, 13 extr. (= Aug. epist. 121, 13): distentio corporis animae sobrietatem necat. Concerning the history of distentio and the distinction between the use of distentus and distentio, cf. T. L. L. V 1516, 69-74.

SECTION 6.

1. quando lux clara resplenduit: for the allusion, cf. Gen. 1, 3. resplenduit is Poetic, Silver, and Late. The word occurs five times in Scripture, and is used in this passage under Biblical influence.

2. secundus dies . . . quando caeli factum est firmamentum: for the thought, cf. Gen. 1, 3. firmamentum translates the Greek στερέωμα of the Septuagint Gen. 1, 6; Ezech. 1, 22. With this meaning of "firmament", i. e., the sky, the heaven above, the word is Eccl. Cf. T. L. L. VI 805, 76-84; 806, 1-36.

3. tertio die terra pabulum germinavit: cf. Gen. 1, 11: germinet terra herbam viventem et facientem semen. germinare is cited by For. for Hor. epod. 16, 45; Columella, Pliny, and Late Latin. McGuire (181) notes that the word occurs 48 times in the Vulgate; and for Silver Latin, Quicherat notes further that it occurs in Statius, Silius, and Martial. Georges, B.-G., and Harper do not cite Columella.

4. caelestis disciplina: for the phrase, cf. Sol. 32, 37; 56, 3; caelestis disciplina. Cf. T. L. L. V 1320, 22. disciplina with the epithet divina appears in Apul. met. 3, 19; and Tert. idol. 20.

5. quarto die luminaria facta sunt solis et lunae: for the thought, cf. Gen. 1, 16. luminaria: Georges, For., and B.-G. cite the word for Cato, r. r. 14; Cic. Att. 15, 26, 4; and then for Eccl. Latin.

6. Gen. 1. 20. Ambrose follows the Old Version here with the exception of repentia for reptilia. The Greek is the same as the Old Version, but the Vulgate differs considerably: producant aquae reptile animae viventis, et volatile super terram sub firmamento caeli. Cf. Ambr. hex. 5, 1, 2: producant aquae reptilia animarum viventium secundum genus, et volatilia volantia super terram secundum firmamentum caeli.

7. Gen. 1, 21. Ambrose follows the Old Version. The Vulgate reads: et vidit Deus quod esset bonum.

8. Gen. 1, 22. The Old Version has: et replete aquas in maris, for et replete aquas, quae sunt in mari. The Vulgate reads: benedixitque eis, dicens: crescite, et multiplicamini, et replete aquas maris: avesque multiplicentur super terram.

9. manducate: Early, Silver, and Late Latin; frequent in Eccl. writers. Cf. Rönisch, Itala, 214. The word occurs 175 times in the Vulgate.

10. sexto die bestiae sunt creatae: for the allusion, cf. Gen. 1, 25, 28 ff. When meaning "to create" by the power of God, creare is confined for the most part to Eccl. Latin. Cf. T. L. L. IV 1161, 21-74.

11. divina . . . opera: for the phrase, cf. Cic. nat. deor. 2, 138: artificiosi operis divinique testantur; Val. Max. 5, 1, 11: divinorum Caesaris operum; and in its Christian sense, as here, Ambr. in psalm 118, serm. 17, 8: divinorum operum potestate; ibid. serm. 3, 46: divina . . . opera laudando; id. hex. 2, 3, 9: quis enim potest facile esse divini operis aestimator.

12. circa: in this sense of "in respect to" "regarding", Late Latin. Cf. T. L. L. III 1093-95.

13. feriari: in this sense of cessare ab opere, or quiescere, feriari is found first in Ambrose. Cf. T. L. L. VI 518, 61-82. Cf. also McGuire 223.

14. quod per cibos mundus haberet imminui: note the use of the quod clause for the Inf. with Subj. Acc. Cf. Introduction,

p. 41. per is employed here as an equivalent of the Abl. of means. This usage occurs even in Classical Latin, but its frequency is confined to the Vulgar and later writers. Cf. Linderbauer 117; St.-Schm. 438; K.-Steg. II 1, 584. It should be noted, however, that here perhaps the idea of agency is stronger than that of means or instrument. habeo with the passive infinitive is Eccl. Latin. This usage does not appear before Tertullian. Cf. St.-Schm. 558; Salonijs, 284 ff., especially pp. 286-7; Georges I 2996, 5 B.

15. nemo delictum sciebat . . . nemo noverat mortem: note that Ambrose uses scire and novisse in exactly the same sense.

SECTION 7.

1. plantavit dominus paradisum ad gratiam beatorum: the words plantavit dominus paradisum should have been italicized by Schenkl, as they are taken from Gen. 2, 8. The Old Version has: Et plantavit Deus paradisum in Eden ad Orientem; the Vulgate: Plantaverat autem Dominus Deus paradisum voluptatis a principio; the Greek: καὶ ἐφίτευσεν Κύριος ὁ θεὸς παράδεισον ἐν Ἑδεμ κατὰ ἀνατολὰς.

2. posuit ibi hominem operari et custodiri eum: these words should have been italicized by Schenkl, for Ambrose in his use of the infinitive after posuit is giving an exact rendering of the Greek, Gen. 2, 15: ἐργάζεσθαι αὐτὸν καὶ φυλάσσειν. The Old Version reads: Et posuit eum in paradiso, ut operaretur et custodiret; Vulgate: et posuit eum in paradiso voluptatis, ut operaretur et custodiret illum.

3. illic: cited for Caesar and Sallust; otherwise Early, Poetic, and Late.

4. legem constituit: the phrase legem constituere is common in Cicero, being cited nine times by Merguet I 658.

5. sciebat enim quod per escam culpa haberet intrare: note the use of scire with a quod clause for the Inf. with Subj. Acc. Cf. Introduction, p. 41. On the use of per, cf. Sect. 6, n. 14. The present active infinitive with habeo occurs in Cicero's early Orations and letters, but the construction only becomes common in Eccl. Latin, being so employed, e. g., in the Old Version and Tertullian under the influence of a similar construction in Greek with ἐχ^ω. Cf. St.-Schm. 558.

6. praevaricatione: in this sense of "transgression" or "deviation from the Law of God," praevaricatio is Eccl. Latin. Cf. Kaulen 25.

7. mandato dei: the phrase is Scriptural; cf., e. g., Lev. 4, 13: Fecerit quod contra mandatum Domini est.

8. Gen. 2, 17. This reading differs from the Old Version, Greek and Vulgate. Ambrose quotes this verse in the same way in his parad. 5, 26, but adds autem after ligno. The Old Version reads: De ligno autem cognoscendi bonum et malum, non manducabitis de illo: qua die autem ederitis ab eo, morte moriemini. Cf. also Bas. 168 A (3 A).

9. nemo praevaricari noverat: in the sense of "to transgress" "to fail in duty toward God", praevaricari is Eccl. Latin. Cf. Kaulen 156; Linderbauer, 317. The word occurs 51 times in the Vulgate. On the use of novisse = "to know how", with the Inf., cf. Introduction, p. 36.

10. indictum: = mandatum. This use of the p. p. p. of indicare as a strict subst. with the Gen. is not cited in any of the lexica. For a further apparent subst. use of the word in Ambrose, cf. in psalm 118, serm. 8, 48: indictum est ieiunium, cave ne negligas.

11. praevaricatio legis a diabolo: for the allusion, cf. Gen. 3, 1, 8. On the use of praevaricatio, cf. n. 6.

12. latebra: the word is usually in the plural in Classical Latin.

13. cognitio infirmitatis: a Scriptural echo; e. g., cf. Rom. 3, 20: per legem enim cognitio peccati; 2. Par. 6, 29: cognoscens plagam et infirmitatem suam.

14. interdictis abstinuerunt: abstinere + ab with the Abl. is the ordinary Classical construction, though the simple Abl. is found in Cicero, Caesar, and Sallust. Cf. T. L. L. I. s. v.

15. nudatos se esse cognoverunt: for the allusion, cf. Gen. 3, 11.

16. culpae agnovit auctorem: for similar phrases, cf. Liv. 1. 4, 2: quia deus auctor culpae honestior erat; id. 21, 11, 6: auctorem culpae et reum criminis. For further instances in Ambrose, cf. Cain et Ab. 2, 19, 10: qui non agnovit auctorem; fug. saec. 7, 44: auctor culpae.

17. Gen. 3, 13. The Old Version reads: Serpens seduxit me, et manducavi; the Greek: ὁ ὄφις ἠπάτησέν με, καὶ ἔφαγον; the Vulgate: Serpens decepit me, et comedi.

18. Matth. 26, 41. The Old Version and Vulgate have vigilate for ieiunate, and ut non for ne = ἵνα μή of the Septuagint.

19. gula de paradiso regnantem expulit: for a similar thought, cf. Ps. Ambr. serm. 27, 5: Adam enim per escam paradisum perdidit. Esau per lentem honorem primatus amisit, Iudas per bucellam sumsit. expellere with de is rare, being noted only for: Cic. Att. 4, 3, 2 and Liv. 41, 3. Ordinarily expellere takes the simple Abl. or ex; sometimes ab. paradiso, designating both "the Garden of Eden" and "the abode of the blessed," is Eccl. Latin. In its literal sense of "a park" the word is cited for Gellius and Augustine. Cf. Georges s. v., B.-G. s. v., etc. On the present passage, cf. also Bas. 168 B (3 C).

SECTION 8.

1. Gen. 3, 22. The Old Version has Dominus Deus, otherwise the same as the present passage. The Vulgate reads: Ecce Adam quasi unus ex nobis factus est.

2. hoc est: on the use of this expression, cf. Introduction, p. 20.

3. denique vestivit eum tunica pellicia: for the allusion, cf. Gen. 3, 21: Fecit quoque Dominus Deus Adae et uxori eius tunicas pelliceas eos. The expression tunica pellicia is used under the Scriptural influence of the verse quoted. pellicia, equivalent to the Greek σπάτειος is Late Latin occurring, e. g., 6 times in the Vulgate.

4. indumentum: cited for Seneca, Gellius, and later writers.

5. divina: as a subst. pertaining to the gods and things celestial, divinum is frequent in Classical and Silver Latin. Its usage among Eccl. writers refers strictly to God, what concerns Him, Heaven, and Heavenly things. Cf. T. L. L. V 1625, 38 ff.

6. aperuisti oculos: in Classical Latin this phrase is found only once, in Cicero, Mil. 85: aliquando ad cum puniendum oculos aperuisti; and rarely in Silver Latin, being cited only for Celsus and Curtius. The expression, however, is frequent in Late Latin, being especially common in the Vulgate and Eccl. writers. Cf. T. L. L. II 216, 73 ff.

SECTION 9.

1. Psalm. 68, 11.

2. operimentum: cited only for Cato, Cicero, Sallust, and Pliny before Late Latin. When used figuratively, as here, it is noted only for Ambr. Noe 29, 112. Add the present passage to the one cited in Georges, B.-G., For. and H.

3. temptatore: cf. Sect. 1, n. 16.

4. velamen: Poetic, and Silver Prose.

5. Psalm 31, 1.

6. remittit: as used here in the sense of "to remit sin", remittere is Late Latin.

7. abolet: appears first in Vergil, and then in later poetry and prose; being especially frequent in Eccl. Latin in the sense of "effacing the baseness of sin".

8. obumbrat: Poetic, Silver, and Late Latin. Throughout this Section note the absolute use of the transitive verbs.

9. maesto: McGuire (125) states that maestus, though Classical, is mostly Poetic, noting e. g., that Merguet cites but ten instances from Cicero, and that Wetmore notes its occurrence forty-five times in Vergil.

10. affectu: this word is found once in Cicero (Tusc. 5, 47); otherwise it is Poetic, Silver, and Late Latin. Ambrose uses it frequently. Cf. T. L. L. I 1185 ff.; K.-Schm. s. v.

11. elemosyna a peccato liberant: for the allusion, cf. Tob. 4, 11: quoniam eleemosyna ab omni peccato et a morte liberat; Dan. 4, 24: et peccata tua eleemosynis redime; cf. also Aug. civ. 21, 27:

per eleemosynas dimitti posse peccata. elemosyna = ἐλεημοσύνη is Eccl. Latin. peccatum is Eccl. Latin as used here in the sense of "sin". Cf. Kaulen 21.

12. vidit esse se nudum: for the allusion, cf. Gen. 3, 7; cumque cognovissent se esse nudos.

13. in diebus . . . ieiuniorum vestrorum: Scriptural; cf., e. g., Is. 58, 3: in die ieiunii vestri; Jerem. 36, 6: audiente populo in domo Domini in die ieiunii. For the use of the Abl. of time with in, cf. Sect. 1, n. 6.

14. Is. 58, 8. Ambrose follows the Greek: τότε ῥαγήσεται προίμον τὸ φῶς σου, καὶ τὰ ἱμάτιά σου ταχὺ ἀνατελεῖ, καὶ προπορεύσεται ἔμπροσθέν σου ἡ δικαιοσύνη σου, καὶ ἡ δόξα τοῦ θεοῦ περιστελεῖ σε. The Old Version and Vulgate differ slightly.

15. Psalm. 103, 2. Ambrose differs from the Old Version, Greek, and Vulgate, which in turn vary slightly. The Old Version reads: amiciens te lumine sicut vestimentum; the Greek: ἀναβαλλόμενος φῶς ὡς ἱμάτιον; the Vulgate has amictus for circumdatus, otherwise the same as Ambrose.

16. bonum vestimentum, quando circumdat dominus: a Scriptural allusion. Cf. Act. 12, 8: Circumdat tibi vestimentum tuum. circumdare as a synonym of induere, vestire, is almost entirely Poetical, Silver, and Late. Cf. T. L. L. III 1130, 78-84; 1131, 1-30.

SECTION 10.

1. nudatus erat Noe, quando inebriatus est: for the thought, cf. Gen. 9, 21 ff. St. Ambrose follows St. Basil here. Cf. Bas. 169 B (4 C). For another instance of the development of the same verse, cf. Ambr. Noe 31, 118. The verb inebriare is Late Latin.

2. per ignorantiam: this phrase, cited in Georges and Harper as Late, no doubt is used by Ambrose through the influence of Scripture, where it appears 13 times. ignorantia is rare in Classical Latin, being cited first for Cicero (2 times), Caesar (once). The word becomes frequent in Silver and Late writers. Cf. K. Schm. s. v., Georges s. v.

3. in principio generis humani: for a similar expression, cf. Cic. off. 1, 11: principio generi animantium omni est a natura tributum, ut se tueatur. The phrase in principio is used apparently for the first time by Cicero.

4. ebrietas: cited once for Cicero, otherwise Poetic, Silver, and Late. It is particularly common in Eccl. writers.

5. vineam ipse plantavit: the words vineam and plantavit should have been italicized by Schenkl as they are quoted exactly from Gen. 9, 20: Coepitque Noe vir agricola exercere terram, et plantavit vineam.

6. dedit naturam, ignoravit potentiam . . .: for a similar development of this thought, cf. Ps. Ambr. apol. Dav. II 3, 18: Noe ebriatus est, et qui non inebriatus est diluvio inebriatus est vino. Sed ille naturam vini ignorabat, non enim ante potaverat.

7. nec== ne . . . quidem. Cf. Introduction, p. 22.

8. pepercit: in this sense of "to forbear to injure", "have mercy upon", Eccl. Latin.

9. quid mirum: for this phrase, cf. Cic. Cato 35: quid mirum igitur in senibus, si infirmi sunt aliquando, cum id ne adolescentes quidem effugere possint? Cf. also Hor. carm. 2, 13, 33; Ov. ars. 3, 110.

10. creaturas: Late Latin.

11. iste== is or ille. Cf. Introduction, p. 19.

12. insuetos senis artus: for a similar expression, cf. Tib. 1, 4, 48: opera insuetas . . . manus.

13. Psalm. 75, 7. The Old Version has dormierunt and ascendebant for dormitaverunt and ascenderunt, otherwise the same as the Greek and Vulgate, which are identical with Ambrose. Cf. also Ambr. in psalm. 118, 4, 29; id. patr. 7, 33; id. Nab. 15, 64.

14. ascendit corporis voluptates: note the metaphorical use of ascendere. For the phrase corporis voluptates, cf. Cic. fin. 1, 55: animi voluptates et dolores nasci fatemur e corporis voluptatibus. This same expression occurs in Ambr. Nab. 15, 64, noted by McGuire 215. On the use of ascendere, cf. Sect. 4, n. 19.

15. iustus: this subst. use of iustus equivalent to iustus vir is found only in Nep. Arist. 1, 5; Hor. sat. 2, 1, 16; and in Ov. fast. 1, 252, before Silver and Late Latin; particularly Eccl. Latin, where the usage increases in frequency. Cf. Georges and B.-G. s. v. For further references to Noe as a "just man", cf. Gen. 6, 9: Noe vir iustus atque perfectus fuit in generationibus suis; Eccl. 44, 17: Noe inventus est perfectus, iustus.

16. obdormivit: cited for Plautus (twice), Cic. (once), then for Pliny, Celsus, Suetonius, and Late Latin. Cf. Georges s. v.

17. inventum: the subst. inventum is cited for Cic. Mur. 61 in the plural; otherwise, for Terence, Nepos, Vergil, Ovid, Livy, and Quintilian, before Late Latin.

18. Tim. 5, 23. The Old Version reads: sed vino modico utere propter stomachum, et frequentes tuas infirmitates. The Greek and Vulgate are practically the same.

SECTION 11.

1. inconcussa: Silver and Late Latin, being cited for Seneca, Pliny, Tacitus, Lactantius, and Cyprian.

2. consorte naturae: for the same phrase, cf., e. g., Tract c. Arrian. p. 14, 25, and Paul. Nol. carm. 31, 511, cited in T. L. L. IV 486. 72 ff. McGuire (106) notes the following instances of the phrase in Ambrose: Nab. 1, 2; Tob. 1, 5; ib. 14, 48; in psalm 1, 14; in psalm 118, 13, 5; and Baxter (103) cites it for Ambr. incarn. 8, 82.

3. obsequia: cited only for Cicero (rarely) in Classical Prose; otherwise Poetic, Silver, and Late.

4. oprepserat quidem fraternae praelationis invidia: for the allusion, cf. Gen. 4, 4. praelatio is cited only for Val. Max. 7, 8, before Late writers. For further instances of the word in Ambrose, cf. Cain et Ab. 1, 3, 11; and for the phrase praelationis invidia, Ambr. Iac. 2, 2, 5: qui praelationis iniustae oneratur invidia.

5. non illis . . . nocent vina quos temptant: for a similar thought, cf. Plin. 23, 1, 20, 35: vina temptant caput.

6. sed et: = sed etiam. Cf. Introduction, pp. 39-40.
7. temulenta: cited for Cicero, otherwise Early, Silver, and Late.
8. irreverens: Silver and Late Latin.
9. flammat: used figuratively as here, the word is Silver and Late. For a similar use of flammare in Ambrose, cf. Noe 29, 112: plerique iuvenali accensi calore aut luxuria . . . flammati aut avaritiae rapti cupiditate. Cf. T. L. L. VI 874, 5-41.
10. temulentia: Silver and Late Latin; the word is rare. Cf. McGuire (212) for a collection of instances of its use.

SECTION 12.

1. legimus etiam quod patrem Loth inebriaverint filiae: for the allusion, cf. Gen. 19, 33 ff. Note the use of legimus quod for the Inf. with Subj. Acc. Cf. Introduction, p. 41.
2. sexus: cited only for Cicero before Silver and Late writers.
3. locus ferarum magis latibulis quam humanis aptior domiciis: for a similar expression, cf. Cic. Rab. Post. 42: cum etiam ferae latibulis se tegant. Note the use of magis for potius. Cf. Introduction, p. 22. latibulum in its literal sense, as here, is cited only for Cicero and Catullus before Late Latin.
4. generatricis: this word is noted only for Mela 1, 49; Aug. c. litt. Petil. 2, 81; Ambr. Noe 28, 106. Cf. Georges.

SECTION 13.

1. Abraham vinum in suo convivio ministrabat: for the allusion, cf. Gen. 18, 2, 8.
2. exhibebat: in this sense of "furnish" "to put before" of food, etc., exhibere is cited for Ovid and Late Latin. Cf. Georges I, p. 2553, 3.
3. mundi . . . auctorem: for the phrase, cf. Sedul. op. pasch. 5, 20, p. 291, 4: (auctor) mundi. Cf. T. L. L. II 1206, 4.

4. agnoscebat auctorem: for further instances of this phrase, cf. Sect. 7, n. 16.

5. materia peccati: for similar expressions, cf. Ov. trist. 4, 1, 34; materiam culpae persequiturque suae; Sall. Catil. 10, 4: materies omnium malorum.

6. remissio peccatorum: Scriptural. Cf. e. g., Matth. 26, 28: in remissionem peccatorum; Eph. 1, 17: in quo habemus . . . remissionem peccatorum; Col. 1, 14.

SECTION 14.

1. denique adnuntiavit eum: for the allusion, cf. Matth. 3, 4. On the use of denique, cf. Sect. 1, n. 16. adnuntiare with a personal object, as here, is Eccl. Latin; cf., e. g., Judith 10, 16: duxeruntque illam ad tabernaculum Holofernus annuntiantes eam; Lact. inst. 4, 15, 31: illum (Christum) prophetae adnuntiaverunt. Cf. T. L. L. I 788, 30-73. Cf. also Sect. 1, n. 12.

2. Iohannes neque manducans panem neque bibens vinum: Scriptural. Cf. Matth. 11, 18: venit enim Ioannes, neque manducans, neque bibens. Cf. Bas. 177 C (7 E): Ἰωάννου δὲ ὁ βίος μία νηστεία ἦν· ὃς οὐ κλίην εἶχεν, οὐ τράπεζαν, οὐ γῆν ἀροσίμην, οὐκ ἀροτήρα βούν, οὐ σῖτον, οὐ σιτοποιόν, οὐκ ἄλλο τι τῶν κατὰ τὸν βίον.

3. incentivo: cf. Sect. 1, n. 5.

4. vel: = et. Cf. Introduction, p. 39.

5. nepotem: with this meaning "nephew", cited in the lexica only for Suetonius, Eutropius, Jerome, and Ven. Fortunatus.

6. diluvio superstes: for the same phrase, cf. Heges. 5, 41 l. 30: diluvii superstites. Cf. T. L. L. V 1192, 8. diluvio is cited for Varro; otherwise Poetic, Silver, and Late.

SECTION 15.

1. Moysen quoque cognovimus: for the allusion, cf. Exod. 15, 25.

2. aquarum amaritudines temperasse: for a similar thought, cf. Hil. myst. p. 18, 24: quid . . . in se momenti lignum habebat

. . . ut amaritudinem aquae aboleret; Ambr. off. 3, 1, 6: ciborum temperat amaritudines Eliseus; ib. Hel. 6, 18. amaritudo is cited in the lexica for Varro, and then for Silver and Late writers.

3. petra: Silver and Late. It is used here under Scriptural influence. Cf. Exod. 17, 6, below.

4. vini abundantia: abundantia appears in Cicero (7 times) and Sallust; otherwise, in Silver and Late writers. For the phrase, cf. Cels. 1 pr: cibi vinique abundantia; Val. Max. 2, 5, 6: nimiae vini abundantiae; for further examples, cf. T. L. L. I 227, 15 ff.

5. Exod. 17, 6. The Old Version has ex ea after aqua; the Greek has ὁ λαός μου for populus; otherwise the same as Ambrose. The Vulgate reads: percutiesque petram, et exhibit ex ea aqua, ut bibat populus. Cf. also, Num. 20, 11.

6. periculosum enim erat vinum ministrare: the use of periculosum est with the Inf. is cited first for Livy and Curtius. Cf. Georges s. v. periculosus.

SECTION 16.

1. legem dedit: dare legem is a technical legal expression. Cf. T. L. L. V 1677, 83-84; 1678, 1-8.

2. ipsum quoque ieiunantem: for the allusion, cf. Exod. 19, 16. Ambrose is obviously following Basil here: Ἀλλὰ καὶ Μωσέα διὰ νηστείας ἔγνωμεν προσβαλόντα τῷ ὄρει. Οὐ γὰρ ἂν κατετόλμησε καπνιζομένης τῆς κορυφῆς, οὐδ' ἂν ἐθάρσυνεν εἰσελθεῖν εἰς τὸν γνώφον, εἰ μὴ νηστεία καθώπλιστο. Cf. Bas. 169 C (4 C).

3. nimbosa: Poetic and Silver Latin.

4. fumigans: fumigare is cited for Varro and Columella; otherwise, for Late Latin. The adjectival use of the Pres. Part., as here, is noted first for Gellius, and then for later writers. Cf. T. L. L. 1537, 32-84. The present passage is cited.

5. neque vero introisset in nubem: for the expression, cf. Exod. 24, 18: Et intravit Moyses in mediam nubem.

6. sine periculo salutis: for a similar phrase, cf. Cic. leg. agr. 1, 21: de periculo salutis et libertatis loquor.

7. munitus armis ieiunii: for similar expressions, cf. Sall. Iug. 89, 4: muniti advorsum hostis non moenibus modo et armis atque viris; Bell. Afr. 42, 2: ieiuni sub armis stetissent; Hier. epist. 130, 10: ieiunorum tibi arma sumenda sunt. For the allegorical use of military terms by Eccl. writers, cf. Sect. 1, n. 13. Ambrose is following Basil here, 169 C (4 C) (quoted in n. 2 above).

8. quadraginta enim diebus ieiunavit in monte: cf. the Old Version, Exod. 24, 18: fuit in monte quadraginta diebus, et quadraginta noctibus. Note the use of the Abl. to express duration of time, undoubtedly due here to Scriptural influence. On this usage cf. Sect. 2, n. 10.

9. a domino deo nostro: Scriptural; cf., e. g., Deut. 29, 18: cuius cor aversum est hodie a Domino Deo nostro.

10. et in superioribus quidem montis lex dabatur Moysi: for the allusion, cf. Exod. 32, 1 and 6. Ambrose follows Bas. 169 D (4 D) closely in the development of this thought: καὶ ἄνω μὲν ἡ νηστεία νομοθεσίας πρόξενος ἦν, κάτω δὲ ἡ γαστριμαργία εἰς εἰδωλολατρίαν ἐξέμηνεν. Ἐκάθισε γὰρ ὁ λαὸς φαγεῖν καὶ πιεῖν, καὶ ἀνέστησαν παίζειν . . . Τεσσαράκοντα ἡμερῶν προσεδρίαν νηστεύοντος καὶ δεομένου τοῦ θεράποντος ἄχρηστον ἀπέδειξεν οἰνοφλυγία μία. Ὡς γὰρ ἡ νηστεία ἔλαβε πλάκας δακτύλῳ θεοῦ γεγραμμένας, ταύτας ἡ μέθη συνέτριψεν, οὐκ ἄξιον κρίναντος τοῦ προφήτου μεθύοντα λαὸν νομοθετεῖσθαι παρὰ τοῦ θεοῦ.

11. luxu . . . epulantium: with the use of luxu here, cf. Verg. Aen. 6, 604: epulaeque ante ora paratae Regifico luxu.

12. spectaculo motus fregit tabulas: for the allusion, cf. Exod. 32, 19.

13. indignum . . . ut: the use of a subst. clause introduced by ut after indignum est (esse) is not cited in the lexica or grammars except Draeger. The construction, dignum est ut, which seems parallel with this, is employed by Vit. 2, 7, 4, and Late writers. Cf. St.-Schm. 763; K.-Steg. II, 2, 242; T. L. L. 1143, 52-60. Draeger Vol. II (258) cites the following three instances of the use of indignum est ut: Aug. civ. 2, 12: indignum fuit ut malediceret; 3, 12: indignum erat ut latitaret; 7, 11: indignum ut . . . alter ad curam geniculi . . . pertineret.

14. tabulas legis: tabulas here refers to the two tables of the Ten Commandments; and lex, as often in Eccl. writers, to the Old Law, the Law of Moses.

15. conteri fecit ebrietas: Cicero (epist. 9, 25, 1) uses conterere once; otherwise it is Early, Poetic, Silver, and Late, being particularly common in the Old Version, Vulgate, and Eccl. writers. Cf. T. L. L. IV s. v. On the use of facio with the Acc. and the Inf. in the sense of "make to" "cause to," cf. Introduction, p. 37.

SECTION 17.

1. sterilitatem matris Sampso vini abstinentia fecundavit: for the whole allusion, cf. Judges 13, 4 and 14. Cf. Bas. 172 A (4 E, 5 A). sterilatas is cited for Cicero, four times (Merguet); otherwise it is Silver and Late Latin. abstinentia with the Gen., as here, is Silver and Late Latin. Cf. K.-Schm. s. v.; T. L. L. I 191 ff. For the phrase vini abstinentia, cf. Plin. nat. 28, 224: praecedente vini abstinentia. fecundare is Poetical, Silver, and Late. Cf. T. L. L. VI 417, 30-46.

2. iuxta praeceptum domini: Scriptural. Cf. Exod. 40, 23: locatis . . . lucernis, iuxta praeceptum Domini; Num. 3, 39; Ios. 18, 50. iuxta = secundum, is found in Livy and Vitruvius, but is confined for the most part to Late Latin, being especially frequent in the Vulgate. Cf. St.-Schm. 502-503; Linderbauer 226 ff.

3. Annam non manducantem exaudivit dominus: an echo of the Old Version reading of 1 Kings 1, 13: et vox eius non audiebatur: et exaudivit eam Deus. Cf. also for the allusion, 1 Kings 1, 15 and 20. On the use of manducare, cf. Sect. 6, n. 10. exaudire signifying "to hear" or "perceive clearly" is used in Classical Prose; but as equivalent to preces audire, as here, it appears first in Livy, and then in Seneca, Pliny, and especially in Eccl. writers. Cf. K.-Schm. s. v. It is used here under Scriptural influence.

4. infecunditatem: rare, being cited only for Sallust, Columella, Pliny, Tacitus, and Ambrose. Cf. K.-Schm. s. v. infecundus. For further instances in Ambr., cf. in psalm. 118, serm. 6, 26; off. 2, 16, 83.

5. ex quibus . . . generati sunt: the regular preposition with generare in Classical Latin to express origin is a. Cf. K.-Steg. II 1, 376.

6. gremio . . . foti: for the phrase fovere gremio, cf. Verg. Aen. 1, 692: fotum (Ascanius) gremio dea tollit in altos Idaliae lucos; ibid. 1, 718: haec interdum gremio fovet.

7. Sampso, qui matris sobrietate generatus est: for the complete allusion, cf. Judges 16, 23 and 29 ff.

8. allophylorum: Eccl. Latin. Five instances, including the present passage from Ambrose, are cited. Cf. T. L. L. I 1692, 18-56.

SECTION 18.

1. Helisaeus vates, qui de magistro didicerat parsimoniam: for the Scriptural allusions in the remainder of this Section, cf. 4 Kings 4, 38-41. Bas. 172 C D (5 C). Cf. also Hier. epist. 22, 9. This use of vates for the Christian propheta is apparently a rare usage. Watson in his Early Latin Hymns notes the following instances: Hymn 13, 24 (Ambrose; and in his note here he cites further Ambr. in Luc. 11, 29), Hymn 14, 6 (Ambrose), Hymn 23, 21 (Prudentius). Add further Ambr. Nab. 2, 7 (McGuire); Paul. Nol. carm. 5, 315 (Quicherat).

2. grumulis: Georges and B.-G. cite only the present passage for the use of this word. Harper does not note grumula, and cites the present passage under grumulus; the word is not cited in either form for Ambrose in For.

3. mensas onerabat: the phrase, mensas onerare, is noted in the lexica only for Virgil. Cf. Verg. Aen. I, 706: qui dapibus mensas onerent; id. georg. 4, 378: pars epulis onerant mensas; ibid. 4, 133: dapibus mensas onerabat inemptis.

4. ineptis silvestribus hospitalis humanitatis implebat officium: cf. Bas. 173 A (5 C): Οὐχὶ λάχανα ἄγρια καὶ ἀλείρειν βραχὺ τὴν φιλοξενίαν ἐπλήρου. In several good Mss. the word (h)oleribus is found after silvestribus, and as we find the words λάχανα ἄγρια in the passage of Basil so obviously taken over here, it seems very probable as Schenkl suggests in his apparatus (recte puto) that the true reading should be silvestribus oleribus. Weyman in discussing this passage argues for the inclusion of oleribus into the text, and makes the further most interesting suggestion that we should probably read inemptis for ineptis on the basis of a passage in the Georgics (quoted under note 3 above), a work which Ambrose knew thoroughly as is evidenced by numerous reminiscences in his works. As Weyman says, "It must be conceded that the parsimonia of Eliseus could not be better illustrated than by pointing out the inexpensiveness of the meal which he prepared." Cf. C. Weyman, Zu Ambrosius, Rheinisches Museum 64 (1909), pp. 328-329. With the expression humanitatis implebat officium, cf. Cic. Lael. 19, 67: ut amicitiae munus expletum sit. In this sense of "fulfill," implere is practically Silver and Late Latin, being especially frequent in Eccl. writers who undoubtedly use the word in this meaning under Scriptural influence. Cf., e. g., Rom. 13, 18: qui enim diligit proximum, legem implevit. Cf. K.-Schm. s. v. implere. For instances of this usage in Ambrose, cf. McGuire 202.

5. aspersione: cited once for Cic. (div. 1, 23), otherwise Late Latin, being especially frequent in Eccl. writers. Cf. T. L. L. II 827, 69-84; 828, 1-22.

6. amaritudinem temperavit: for this phrase, and the use of amaritudo, cf. Sect. 15, n. 2.

7. propheticæ . . . abstinentiæ: for the same phrase, cf. Sect. 20. propheticus is Late Latin. Note the use of the adjective for the noun. Cf. Introduction, pp. 21-22.

8. veneni vires: for the phrase, cf. Tac. ann. 15, 64: clauso corpore adversum vim veneni.

9. evacuans: cited only for Pliny before Late writers.

SECTION 19.

1. est quaedam creaturae natura, quam amiantum vocant:

Ambrose is obviously following Bas. 173 A (5 D): "Ἐστὶ τις φύσις σωματος, ἣν καλοῦσιν ἀμίαντον, ἀνάλωτος πυρί, ἥτις ἐν μὲν τῇ φλογὶ κειμένη, ἀπὸν θρακῶσθαι δοκεῖ, ἐξαιρεθεῖσα δὲ τοῦ πυρός, ὡς ὕδατι λαμπρυν-θείσα καθαρωτέρα γίνεται. Τοιαῦτα ἦν τὰ τῶν τριῶν παίδων ἐκείνων σώματα ἐπὶ τῆς βαβυλωνίας ἐκ τῆς νηστείας ἔχοντα τὸ ἀμίαντον. amiantum = ἀμίαντος is rare, being cited only for Plin. nat. 36, 139; Rufin. Adamant, 5, 8; the present passage from Ambrose; and the following citation from Isid. orig. 16, 4, 19 which is very similar to Ambrose: amiantos appellatus a veteribus eo quod si ex ipso vestis fuerit contexta, contra ignem resistit. Cf. T. L. L. s. v.

2. facilis . . . consumi: facilis with the passive infinitive is cited first in Poetry for Prop. 4, 8, 40: facilis spargi . . . rosa; and in Prose, from Seneca Phil. on. Cf. St.-Schm. 579; T. L. L. VI 60, 50-71.

3. infusione: cited only for Pliny before Late writers.

4. talía erant Hebraeorum puerorum corpora: for the thought in the remainder of this Section, cf. Dan. 3, 46 ff. (47 ff.).

5. transformata: Poetical, Silver, and Late Latin.

6. dispendium sui: for the same phrase, cf. Ps. Quint. decl. 6, 2: pietas utrique subvenit dispendio sui; Cod. Iust.: pactum non debere ad sui dispendium operari. dispendium is Early, Poetic, Silver, and Late Latin. Cf. T. L. L. V 1396, 3 ff.

7. mutuabantur: the lexicæ cite only Apuleius for this usage of mutuare = "receive".

8. flamma per circuitum funderetur: for the phrase, flamma funditur, cf. Verg. Aen. 10, 270: cristis a vertice flamma funditur; cf. also Liv. 10, 43, 11: flamma lata fusa.

9. naptha: Silver and Late.

10. alimenta: for similar instances of alimenta used of fuel, cf. Ov. met. 14, 532: picem et ceras alimentaue cetera flammæ Mulciber urebat perque altum ad carbasa malum ibat; ibid. 15, 352: ubi terra cibos alimentaue pinguis flammæ Non dabit. For further examples, cf. T. L. L. I 1586, 70-84.

11. roris spiritu refrigerantis umescere: a Scriptural echo; cf., e. g., Eccli. 18, 16: nonne ardorem refrigerabit ros? umescere is Poetic, Silver, and Late, being cited only for Vergil, Pliny, Palladius, and Claudianus.

12. capillus: in the sense of a "single hair" of the head, as here, the word is Silver and Late Latin. Cf. T. L. L. III 317, 12-29.

SECTION 20.

1. Daniel, vir desideriorum, trium ebdomadam: Scriptural. Cf. Dan. 10, 11: Daniel, vir desideriorum, intellige verba; Dan. 10, 3: donec complerentur trium hebdomadarum dies. Cf. also Dan. 6, 16. Ambrose's development of this thought follows that of Bas. 173 BC (6 A): Δανιὴλ δὲ ὁ ἀνὴρ τῶν ἐπιθυμιῶν, ὁ τρεῖς ἑβδομάδας ἄρτον μὴ φαγὼν, καὶ ὕδωρ μὴ πίων, καὶ τοὺς λέοντας νηστεύειν ἐδίδαξε, κατελθὼν εἰς τὸν λάκκον . . .

2. missus in lacum: the whole expression is an echo of Scripture. Cf. Dan. 10, 2: et miserunt eum in lacum leonum. In this sense of "pit" or "den," as here, lacus is Eccl. For a valuable collection of instances of lacus in this sense, cf. Rönisch 315-316.

3. in adamantis rigorem abstinentiae soliditate membra duratus: adamas, cited first for Vergil, is Poetic, Silver, and Late Latin. Cf. T. L. L. s. v. For phrases similar to adamantis rigorem, cf. Verg. georg. 1, 143: rigor ferri; Plin. 36, 16, 25: quid lapidis rigore pigrius?; Lucr. 1, 492: labefactatus rigor auri solvitur aestu. rigor is Poetic and Silver Latin. With, abstinentiae soliditate, cf. Hier. epist. 130, 10: ieiuniorum rigore. soliditas in this sense of "firmness" is cited first for Vitruvius. Cf. Georges and B.-G. s. v. duratus with in and the Acc. is Poetic, Silver, and Late. Cf. Georges, s. v.

4. patuit vulneri: patere, "to stand open to", "be exposed to" is cited first for Livy. The use of patere with such a Dat. construction is noted in the lexis only for Livy, Pliny, and Celsus. Cf. Georges, s. v.

5. clausa tenebant: the phrase, clausum tenere, appears first in Cicero, and then throughout the whole period of Latinity. Cf. T. L. L. III 1313, 69-72.

6. abstinentiae propheticae: for the same phrase, and for the use of propheticae, cf. Sect. 18, n. 7.

7. meriti quibusdam vinculis alligata: for a similar thought, cf. Cic. Planc. 30, 72: maximis beneficii vinculis obstrictus.

SECTION 21.

1. ieiunium itaque virtutem ignis extinxit, ieiunium ora obstruxit leonum: a literal rendering of Bas. 173 C (6 B): νηστεία ἔσβεσε δύναμιν πυρός· ἔφραξε στόματα λεόντων. For a similar thought in Ambrose, cf. epist. 63, 15: Daniel quoque ieiunii merito ora clausit leonum.

2. solidavit: cited for Vergil; otherwise, Silver and Late.

3. solvit: solvere, in this sense of “to dissolve”, is Poetic, Silver, and Late. Cf. Harper, p. 1725, A. 3.

SECTION 22.

1. quid vetustis utar exemplis: for the phrase exemplo uti, cf. Cic. Cluent. 172: cur non Habiti exemplo usus es. . . .

2. abundet ieiunium etiam praesentium muneribus: for the phrase abundare muneribus, cf. Rhet. Her. 4, 60: si quis . . . muneribus et naturae commodis omnibus abundabit.

3. quis deterioravit: this whole section is largely based upon Bas. 173 C (6 B): νηστεία προσευχὴν εἰς οὐρανὸν ἀναπέμπει, οἷονεὶ περὸν αὐτῇ γινομένη πρὸς τὴν ἄνω πορείαν. νηστεία οἴκων αὔξησης, ὑγείας μήτηρ, νεότητος παιδαγωγός, κόσμος πρεσβύταις, ἀγαθὴ συνέμπορος ὁδοιπόροις, ἀσφαλὴς ὁμόσκημος τοῖς συνοῖκοις . . . deteriorare is Late Latin. Cf. T. L. L. V 801, 10-38.

4. venerabilis abstinentia: for the thought here, cf. Bas. 177 B (7 D): νηστεύοντος σεμνὸν τὸ χρῶμα. venerabilis is Silver, Poetic, and Late Latin.

5. torum appetivit parsimonia, cuius pudorem non laesit ebrietas: note the continued paraphrasing of Bas. 173 C (6 B). torus is Poetic and Silver Latin.

6. magisterium: in this sense of “teaching office” or “teaching”, as here, magisterium is cited for Plautus, Tibullus, Celsus, and Late Latin.

7. pudicitiae disciplina: for a similar expression, cf. Cic. rep. 4, 6: disciplina verecundiae.

8. humilitas mentis: for a similar phrase, cf. Lact. 5, 15: animi humilitas; Tert. cult. fem. 2, 9: humilitatem animae suae. In the sense of "humility", as here, humilitas is Eccl. Latin.

9. castigatio carnis: for the same phrase, cf. Tert. resurr. 9: carnis castigationes probat deus. In this sense of "the body", "the flesh", as opposed to the spirit, caro is found only in Eccl. Latin. However, for a very similar use, cf. Sen. dial. 6, 24, 5: omne illi (animo) cum hac gravi carne certamen est. Cf. T. L. L. III 484, 50 ff. castigatio appears first in Cicero. Cf. T. L. L. III s. v.

10. forma sobrietatis: for a similar phrase, cf. Aug. epist. 2, 8, 7: puclitiae forma servetur. On the use of sobrietas, cf. Sect. 4, n. 8.

11. purificatio: Silver and Late Latin.

12. expensa: this is a Late Latin word; it was probably used for the first time by the Jurist Scaevola. Cf. K.-Schm. s. v.

13. lenitatis institutio: for a similar phrase, cf. Cic. top. 90: institutio aequitatis tripartita est.

14. senilis gratia: note the use of the adjective for the noun; cf. custodia iuventutis below.

15. iuventutis: in its literal sense of "age of youth," as here, Poetic in Classical Latin, being cited for Lucretius, Vergil, Horace and Tibullus. Cicero employs the word only as a proper name to designate the "goddess of youth". Cf. Georges s. v.

16. infirmutis adlevamentum: evidently a close rendering of Basil. Cf. Bas. 448 A (123 D): εις παραμυθίαν τῆς ἀσθενείας. For a somewhat similar thought in Ambrose, cf. Noe 29, 111: sicut enim isto bibendi moderamine vinum non infirmitati est, sed salutis, atque omnem infirmitatem allevat corporis. allevamentum is rare, being cited only for: Cic. Sull. 66; Heges. 2, 1, 2; and Ambr. virg. 1, 9, 55; id. Iob 4, 5, 19; id. bon. mort. 2, 5. Cf. T. L. L. I 1673, 42-47.

17. alimentum salutis: for the medicinal value of fasting, cf. Cels. 2, 16.

18. nemo cruditatem ieiunando incidit: for the harmful effects of excess in eating, cf. Cels. 1, 9: cruditas enim id maxime laedit, et quoties offensum corpus est, vitiosa pars maxime sentit. Cf. also Ambr. Hel. Sect. 59. The transitive use of incidere in the sense of "fall into" is cited only for Late Latin. Georges cites the following instances: Ambr. de Tob.: caecitatem; Plin. Val. 3, 7: repente hunc morbum; CIL VIII 2728, 84: infirmittatem contractam; Auson. sept. sap. 7 (Pittac.), 10. p. 116, 6 Schenkl: offensam; Lact. Plac. narr. fab. 1, 1: iram; ibid. 14, 1: amorem.

19. ictum sanguinis: is equivalent to the Greek ἀπόπληξιν; cf. Ps. Aur. Vict. epit. 16, 5: ictus sanguinis, quem morbum Graeci ἀπόπληξιν vocant. Cf. Georges, s. v. ictus.

20. itineris viaticum: viaticum is used here in its Classical sense of "provision for a journey." Early Christian writers frequently employ this word — equivalent to the Greek ἐφοδίον — to designate the Eucharist administered to a sick person in danger of death. For a complete history of viaticum, cf. Dictionary of Christian Antiquities, Vol. II 2014 ff.

SECTION 23.

1. e ieiunio defecerit: as here in the sense of "die", deficere is cited only for Caes. civ. 3, 2, 3 and Ov. Pont. 1, 3, 9, ibid. 2, 7, 80, before Silver and Late writers. Cf. T. L. L. V 329, 32-84; 330, 1-45. The only instances noted of deficere with e are: Amm. 19, 6, 2; Mart. Cap. 9, 958; Cic. nat. deor. 1, 105; Cic. Tim. 34; Aug. civ. 12, 8, p. 522; Cod. Iust. 6, 27, 6; 6, 51, 1, 11; Consent. gramm. V 382, 31; in none of these instances, however, is deficere used in the meaning of "die".

2. fudere animam: cf. Lucr. 3, 1033: lumine adempto animam moribundo corpore fudit; Verg. Aen. 1, 98: animam hanc effundere dextra; ibid. 10, 908: animam diffundit in arma cruore; Ambr. Cain et Ab. 1, 5, 18: plerique inter epulas fudere animas. Cf. T. L. L. VI 1566, 27-44.

3. quod postremo animal ieiunium sibi causam fuisse mortis ingemuit: a close paraphrase of Bas. 176 A (6 C): οὐδὲν ζῶον ὁδύρεται θάνατον. . .

4. per escam laqueus non cavetur: note the use of per in the sense of propter. Cf. Introduction, p. 34. laqueus is found here in its literal meaning. It is far more common in Eccl. writers in its metaphorical sense of "snare of sin". Cf. Sect. 1, n. 19.

5. in esca hamus latet: for a similar thought, cf. Tib. 2, 6, 24: cum tenues hamos abdidit ante cibus.

6. cibus visco etiam aves inligat: for a similar thought, cf. Hil. trin. 6, 2: a cibo mortis, quo in laqueum aves solent illici. The practice of snaring small birds is still common in modern Italy.

7. deponit ad mortem: with the exception of a citation from Varro, and a few instances of its use in Silver writers, deponere ad is Late Latin. Cf. T. L. L. V s. v. depono, especially pp. 581, 53-58; 583, 18-22.

8. sobrietas mentis: for the same phrase, cf. Ambr. epist. 7, 19: deo enim iustitia solvitur, quae est mentis sobrietas; id. hex. 1, 8, 31. On the use of sobrietas, cf. Sect. 4, n. 8.

9. Tob. 4, 13. Cf. the Greek: ἡ γὰρ ἀχρεότης μήτηρ ἐστὶν τοῦ λιμοῦ.

10. secundum propheticum dictum: probably a Scriptural echo. Cf. Bar. 1, 21: secundum omnia verba prophetarum; Old Version, 4 Kings 4, 43: manducabunt . . . secundum dictum domini. Cf. also, Hil. in Matth. 7, 7: secundum prophetarum dicta; Aug. civ. 17, 3: quocirca sicut oracula illa divina ad Abraham Isaac et Iacob et quaecumque alia signa vel dicta prophetica in sacris litteris dictum praecedentibus facta sunt. The expression secundum dictum itself, however, is not confined to Eccl. Latin, but already occurs in Livy. Cf. Liv. 4, 49, 13: secundum tam saevum atque inhumanum dictum; id. 23, 12, 6: secundum haec dicta Magonis. For the use of propheticus, cf. Sect. 18, n. 7.

11. inquietudinem: Late Latin. Cf. K.-Schm. s. v. inquietare.

SECTION 24.

1. ferietur aliquando coquorum mastigiarum machaera: throughout this section Ambrose is paraphrasing Bas. 176 A (6 C): πεπάνται μαγείρων ἡ μάχαιρα· ἡ τράπεζα ἀρκεῖται τοῖς αὐτομάτοις. Τὸ σάββατον ἐδόθη τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις, ἵνα ἀναπαύσῃται, φησί, τὸ ὑποζύγιον σου καὶ ὁ παῖς σου . . . Ἀνάπανσόν σου τὸν μάγειρον, δὸς ἄδειαν τῷ τραπέζοις· στήσον τὴν χεῖρα τῷ οἰνοχόῳ . . . Ἦσυχασάτω ποτὲ καὶ ὁ οἶκος ἀπὸ τῶν μυρίων θορύβων, καὶ τοῦ καπνοῦ καὶ τῆς κνίσσης, καὶ τῶν ἄνω καὶ κάτω διατρεχόντων, καὶ οἷονεὶ ἀπαραιτήτῃ δεσποίνῃ τῇ γαστρὶ λειτουργούντων. The form ferietur is not cited in Neue-Wagener or the lexica. In its literal sense, as here, mastigia is cited for Plautus, Terence, and Lucilius. machaera is Early, Poetic, and Silver Latin. It is used here obviously under the influence of the Greek μάχαιρα employed by St. Basil.

2. obsonator: is cited in the lexica only for Plautus, Martial, Seneca, and the Inscriptions.

3. fores pulsat alienas: for the phrase fores pulsare, cf. Ov. met. 5, 448: parvasque fores pulsavit; id. epist. 20, 46: Persephone nostras pulsat . . . fores. Cf. T. L. L. VI 1060, 3 ff.

4. anhelantem: as an intransitive verb in the sense of "panting" or "puffing", as here, Poetic and Silver Latin.

5. advertis = animum advertere. The use of advertere except in the combination animum advertere is mostly Silver and Late Latin. Cf. K.-Schm. s. v.

6. pascit, inquit, dominus meus, ubi vinum melius veneat quaerit . . . : with this passage cf. Ambr. Tob. 14, 50: si quis instaurandum convivium putat, ad negotiatorem mittit, ut absentiat cupellam sibi gratis deferat: ad cauponem dirigit, ut Picenum vinum aut Tyriacum requirat, ad lanium, ut vulvam sibi procuret, ad alium, ut pomā adornet, etc. For a vivid description of such luxury in Classical times, cf. Suet. Vit. 13.

7. ubi piscis recentior: for a similar thought, cf. Plaut. Asin. 178: (piscis) nequam est, nisi recens. For a complete account of food and its preparation among the Romans, cf. the article in Blümner, pp. 160-204. For a catalogue of delicacies at banquets, cf. Friedländer, Roman Life and Manners under the Early Empire, Vol. II, pp. 276-277.

8. cursitat per diversa: for a similar expression, cf. Pallad. hist. mon. 1, p. 254^d: equites . . . per diversa discurrentes. The phrase per diversa is noted first for Sall. hist. frag. 4, 77, and then for Silver and Late writers. Cf. T. L. L. V 1586, 26-33. cursitare is Early, Poetic, Silver, and Late Latin. Cf. T. L. L. IV 1526, 52-84; 1527, 1-14.

9. summo cursu properat: cf. Verg. Aen. 5, 291: rapido contendere cursu; Amm. 23, 3, 1: cursu proporo.

10. inquietat: Silver and Late Latin.

11. somnolentum: Late Latin, being noted first for Apuleius. Cf. K.-Schm. s. v. Goelzer (Jérôme) 200.

12. auctionatur: in Classical Latin auctionari is cited only for Cicero and Caesar, who use it absolutely; its transitive use, as here, is confined to Quintilian and Late writers. Cf. T. L. L. II 1193, 77-84; 1194, 1-16.

13. adserit: as found here in the sense of affirmare, explicare, adserere, is cited for Silver writers, but the usage becomes extensive only in Late Latin. Cf. T. L. L. II 865, 33 ff.

14. heri, inquit, tempestas, hodie procella: cf. Plaut. Rud. 940: turbida tempestas heri fuit.

15. natalis: this substantival use of natalis = "birthday", governing a Gen., is mostly Poetic, Silver, and Late.

16. ostrea: For the risks that were taken in securing oysters, choice fish, and other delicacies for the table, cf. Ambr. Nab. 5, 20. Cf. also McGuire's note (128) on the passage and the literature there cited.

17. talis fit de singulis licitatio: licitatio seems to be rare in Classical and Silver Latin, being cited only for Cicero (twice) and for Suetonius (3 times). For Late Latin the lexica cite only the Jurists.

18. hasta quaedam agitur inter obsonatorem et pastorem: On the custom in Classical times of driving a spear in the ground at public auctions, cf. Pauly Wissowa s. v. Auction, Vol. II (1896), pp. 2270-2272; Daremberg-Saglio I, p. 543, s. v. auctio, especially 5.

19. addicit patrimonium: for the same phrase, cf. Val. Max. 7, 7, 4: neque erubescis ei totum patrimonium addicere. Cf. T. L. L. I 575, 20.

SECTION 25.

1. coquinam: Late Latin. Cf. T. L. L. IV 924, 72-84; 925, 1-14.
2. nulla his requies detur: note the close imitation of Bas. 176 A (6 C), quoted in Sect. 24, n. 1.
3. pincernae: Late Latin. Cf. Georges, s. v.
4. riget: cited for Cicero; otherwise Poetic, Silver, and Late.
5. frigida: = frigida aqua; this usage is cited for Plautus, and then for Silver and Late writers.
6. mundant pavimenta vino madida: for a similar reference to this kind of luxury, cf. Cic. Phil. 2, 105: personabant omnia vocibus ebriorum, natabant pavimenta vino.
7. spinis cooperta piscium: cf. Cic. frg. apud Quint. 8, 3, 66: humus lutulenta vino spinis cooperta piscium. The only other instances of spina in this sense of "fish bones" cited in the lexica are from Ovid and Pliny. Cf. Georges and B.-G. s. v. For the same expression in Ambrose, cf. Cain et Ab. 1, 4, 14: flagrabat unguento humus, spinis cooperta piscium, et marcentibus iam floribus lubrica.
8. vapulantium: in this literal sense of "being flogged", Poetic, Silver, and Late Latin.
9. sileat aliquando domus: Ambrose follows Basil very closely in the development of the thought here. (Cf. Bas. 176 A (6 C), quoted in Sect. 24, n. 1.
10. discurrentium: discurrere is cited for Caes. civ. 3, 105, 3; otherwise it is Poetic, Silver, and Late Latin.
11. immolatorum: notice that Ambrose uses immolatorum here for the sake of gaining a heightened effect. The word properly belongs to the language of religion, both pagan and Christian.
12. nidore: cited in Prose first for Cicero (Piso 13) and then from Livy on.
13. carnificinam: in this sense of "slaughter house", the

T. L. L. (III 479, 70-73) cites only Liv. 2, 23, 6, and the present passage.

14. ita sanguine omnia natant: cf. Lucan 9, 770: membra natant sanie; 7, 728: vidit satis arva natare sanguine. Cf. also Ambr. Cain et Ab. 1, 4, 14: et humida natabant pavimenta vino, and the passage from Cicero cited in note 7 above.

SECTION 26.

1. dominae servitur gulae, quae semper expetit, numquam expletur: Ambrose takes this idea from Basil. In Greek it had become a common place through the influence of the Cyno-Stoics. On its use in Basil, cf. Dirking, pp. 22-23. For a further reference in Ambrose to the insatiability of the appetite, cf. parad. 15, 74: qui sunt qui in utero suo ambulabant, nisi qui ventri et gulae vivunt, quorum deus venter est, et gloria in pudendis eorum, qui terrena sapiunt, et cibo onerati ad terrena curvantur. . . . Cf. also Hor. sat. 2, 7, 111: qui praedia vendit, nil servile gulae parens habet?

2. cum impletus fuerit . . .: Ambrose is following Bas. 176 B (6 D). Note especially: ὅταν ἐμπλησθῇ, περὶ ἐγκρατείας φιλοσοφεῖ· ὅταν διαπνευσθῇ, ἐπιλανθάνεται τῶν δογμάτων.

3. digesserit: as used here in the sense of "digest", Silver and Late Latin. Cf. T. L. L. V 1116, 79-84; 1117, 1-19.

4. Eccli. 31, 23. The Old Version and Vulgate read: Vigilia, cholera, et tortura viro infrunito; the Greek has: πόνος ἀγρυπνίας καὶ χολέρας καὶ στρόφος μετὰ ἀνδρὸς ἀπλήστου.

SECTION 27.

1. non illum diutius sua intemperantia delectavit divitem . . .: for the allusion, cf. Luc. 16, 19. The words induebatur purpura et bysso et epulabatur cottidie splendide, should have been italicized by Schenkl as they are quoted exactly from Luc. 16, 19. The substantival use of the adjective dives in the singular, as here, is cited in the lexis only for Plautus and Late writers. This usage here, however, is due to Scriptural influence; cf. Luc. 16, 21, quoted below. Cf. also Bas. 168 B, 177 A (3 C, 7 B).

2. Luc. 16, 20. Cf. the Old Version which reads: Et erat quidam mendicus, nomine Lazarus, qui iacebat ad ianuam eius, ulceribus plenus. In the present passage the words ad ianuam Lazarus mendicus iacebat plenus ulceribus should have been italicized by Schenkl as they are taken directly from Scripture.

3. Cf. Luc. 16, 21 (Old Version reading). The passage cupiens saturari ex his quae de mensa cadebant divitis, corresponds to the Old Version reading, except in word order, and hence should have been italicized by Schenkl.

4. positus: = ov is Late Latin and chiefly Eccl. Cf. Sulp. Sev. epist. 3, 3: ego Tolosae positus, tu Treveris constituta. For further instances in Ambrose, cf. Nab. 16, 19, noted by McGuire (231); id. Noe 4, 9: scivit quia homo positus in terrae regione; id. ib. 30, 115: denique nec Adam in paradiso positus nudum se putabat; id. Joseph 5, 27: visitat Christus in carcere positus. Cf. B.-G., s. v. and especially Souter, Ambrosiaster (125-126) for further instances of this usage. Kaniecka (185) notes the occurrence of this construction ten times in the Vita Sancti Ambrosii by Paulinus. For a parallel use of constitutus = ov, cf. Svennung, Orosiana, 141; T. L. L. IV 523, 45 ff. Cf. also Sect. 81.

5. ut extremum . . . ardebat incendio: a close paraphrase of Luc. 16, 24 (Old Version): ut intingat extremum digiti sui in aqua, et refrigeret linguam meam, quia crucior in hac flamma. The Vulgate is practically the same.

6. ebrietates: cf. Sect. 10, n. 4. As here, in the sense of "carouses", the word appears first in Sen. epist. 24, 6: ipsae voluptates in tormenta vertuntur, epulae cruditatem adferunt, ebrietates nervorum torporem tremoremque.

7. abundat: abundare is used absolutely already in Cic. parad. 6, 49: uter igitur est divitior . . . qui eget an qui abundat? This usage, however, becomes common only in Eccl. writers, who employ the construction under Scriptural influence. Cf. T. L. L. I 234, 76 ff.; Stöcklein, in Archiv VII 230-231; McGuire 200.

8. mendicabat: as an intransitive verb in the active, mendicare is cited for Plautus, Juvenal, Seneca, and Lactantius. Cf. Georges and For. s. v.

9. cum inebriati fuerint . . . bibunt: on the type of condition here, cf. Introduction, p. 42. On the use of inebriare, cf. Sect. 10, n. 1.

10. libatur: in this sense of "to sip" "to taste", libare is Poetic and Silver. Cf. Verg. Aen. 3, 354-355: aulai medio libabant pocula Bacchi Impositis auro dapibus, paterasque tenebant; id. georg. 4, 54-55: flumina libant Summa leves.

SECTION 28.

1. Prov. 26, 9. The Vulgate and Greek differ considerably from Ambrose and the Old Version, which are identical.

2. spinis: with this meaning of "thorn", spina is Poetic and Silver.

3. vestimentum fidei: for a similar phrase, cf. Ambr. inst. virg. 17, 109: quae sunt indumenta virtutum; id. Iac. 2, 5, 22: quae acceptae gratiae vestimenta custodit? vestimentum animae ac mentis eripiant. In this passage fides is used in its Christian meaning of "Faith." Cf. T. L. L. VI 689, 43 ff.

4. omnis enim ebriosus et fornicator egebit: for the same thought, cf. Ps. Ambr. Dav. II 3, 18: omnis enim ebriosus et fornicator, pauper fiet. fornicator is Eccl. Latin. Cf. T. L. L. VI 1122, 78-84; 1123, 1-21.

5. induet se scissa vestimenta insipientiae: se induere with an Acc. of the thing is Late Latin. Cf. Salonijs 135 ff., especially pp. 135-136; Hofmann: Syntaktische Gliederungsverschiebungen im Lateinischen infolge Erstarrung ursprünglich appositioneller Verhältnisse in: Indogermanische Forschungen, Vol. 42, pp. 75-89, particularly p. 83; St.-Schm. 383. insipientiae is cited in the lexis only for Plautus and Cicero. It is strange that no instances are cited from Eccl. Latin, as the word occurs, e. g., 13 times in the Vulgate.

6. potentes: this subst. use of potens is found to some extent in Silver Latin, but becomes particularly frequent in the Old Version, Vulgate, and Eccl. writers. Cf. B.-G. s. v. As a substantive in the plural, potens is cited for Cic. epist. 9, 16, 5; Sall. hist. frag. 4, 61, 17. The word is used here under Scriptural influence; cf. the Old Version reading of Prov. 31, 4: potentes qui iracundi sunt, vinum non bibant.

1. Prov. 31, 5. The Old Version has sapientiae for sapientiam, otherwise the same as Ambrose. The Greek and Vulgate differ considerably.

SECTION 29.

1. Olopherni principi militiae regis Assyriorum: the phrase is obviously used here under Scriptural influence. Cf. Judith 13, 19: ecce caput Holofernus principis militiae Assyriorum; id. 5, 1: nuntiaturque est Holofernus principi militiae Assyriorum.

2. ieiunans omnibus diebus viduitatis suae: for the allusion, cf. Judith 7, 22; 8, 6; 12, 9 and 20. The words omnibus diebus viduitatis suae should have been italicised by Schenkl as they are quoted exactly from Judith 8, 6. On the use of the Abl. of duration of time, cf. Sect. 2, n. 10.

3. festorum: festus, used in Classical Latin in connection with public and private festivals, is used here of the festive days of the Jews and Christians. Cf. T. L. L. VI 627, 59-84; 628, 1-28.

4. sollemnitates: cf. Sect. 1, n. 10.

5. his armis munita processit: for the same thought and expression, cf. Sect. 16, n. 7.

6. vigore: cited only for Vergil before Livy and later writers. Cf. K. Schm. s. v.; Georges s. v.; Watson 275.

7. servavit pudicitiam: for the same phrase, cf. Verg. georg. 2, 524: casta pudicitiam servat domus.

8. succincta ieiunio: for a similar metaphorical use of succinctus, cf. Quint. 12, 5, 1: horum scientia debet esse succinctus; Ambr. Iac. 1, 8, 38: succinctus potentia.

9. praetendebat: in this sense of "watch", praetendere is Late Latin. Cf. K. Schm., Georges, and B.-G. s. v.

10. vino sepultus: for the phrase, cf. Verg. Aen. 2, 265: invadunt urbem somno vinoque sepultam; Prop. 3, 11, 56: assiduo lingua sepulta mero. In this sense of "buried in wine" or "sleep", sepultus is cited in the lexica only for the Classical Poets and then for Late Latin.

11. innumeros: innumeros is practically Poetic in Class. Latin, not being found in Cicero, Caesar, Sallust, and Livy. It appears in Prose in Pliny the Elder, Tacitus, and Suetonius, before Late writers. Cf. K.-Schm. s. v.

12. stravit: in this sense of "to overthrow", almost entirely Poetic, Silver, and Late Latin.

SECTION 30.

1. dominus enim gratiam sobriae mentis augebat: for the allusion, cf. Esth. 4, 16; 5, 9; 7, 1 ff. For the phrase sobriae mentis, cf. Ambr. Noe, 11, 38: mens enim sobria passiones omnes cohibet; id. in psalm. 118 serm. 2, 1: sobria mente respiscet.

2. populum Iudaeorum: cf. Sect. 2, n. 5 for this Scriptural phrase.

3. persecutionis: in this sense of "persecution", Eccl. Latin.

4. ita ut regem sibi faceret esse subiectum: on this use of facio with the Acc. and Inf. in the sense of "make to" "cause to", cf. Introduction, p. 57.

5. altaribus: on the use of this word, cf. Sect. 2, n. 7.

6. triduo: on the use of the Abl. of duration of time cf. Sect. 2, n. 10.

7. vindictam: in Early and Classical Latin before Livy, this word signifies "the staff or rod with which a slave was touched in the ceremony of manumission." From Livy on it acquires further the meaning of "protection", "defence" and also "vengeance." It has the last connotation in the present passage. Cf. Georges s. v., B.-G. s. v.

8. poenam . . . exsolvit: for the phrase, cf. Liv. 26, 40: civilitatem principibus pro cuiusque merito praemia poenasque exsolvere;

Tac. ann. 1, 10: poenas morte exsolvisse. id. ib. 14, 12. In similar phrases in Classical Latin, solvere is more common.

SECTION 31.

1. reconciliationis sacrificium: for the same phrase, cf. Ambr. in psalm. 118 serm. 14, 22: cum sacrificium reconciliationis Domino esset oblatum. The phrase was undoubtedly formed after the analogy of similar scriptural combinations. Cf. 2 Mac. 13, 23: et reconciliatus obtulit sacrificium.

2. virtutis incrementum: the same expression appears in Ambr. epist. 63, 40: gradus singularum sunt et incrementum virtutum; id. Noe. 23, 83: incrementa virtutis exerceat; id. exc. Sat. 1, 80: incrementa virtutis.

3. augmento gratiae: for similar expressions cf. Ambr. in psalm. 118 serm. 1, 9: observatio mandatorum Dei, naturae ipsius auget gratiam; id. in psalm 118 serm. 6, 6: gratiarum . . . augmenta; incrementa gratiae.

4. ieiunium nescit faeneratorem: taken almost literally from Bas. 176 B (6 E): νηστεία δανείον φύσιν οὐκ οἶδεν· οὐκ ὀζει τόκων τράπεζα τοῦ νηστεύοντος· οὐκ ἄγχουσιν ὀρφανὸν νηστευτοῦ παῖδα τόκοι πατρῶι ὥσπερ, ὅφεις περιπλεκόμενοι.

5. sortem faenoris novit: the Fathers throughout their works vehemently condemn usury which was a widespread evil in their time, and for the most part they frown upon the taking of interest. Though the legal rate of 12% was high, frequently more was demanded. For a systematic presentation of the view of the Fathers on the subject, cf. Seipel, Die Wirtschaftsethischen Lehren der Kirchenväter, 1907, pp. 162-189; Pauly Wissowa, Vol. VI, pp. 2195-2199. s. v. fenus. For a violent invective against interest taking, cf. Ambrose, Tob. 4, 14: bene faenus appellatur, quod datis: ita vile ac faeneum est. sortem dicitis quod debetur. etenim velut urna ferali misera sors volvitur perituri debitoris luenda supplicio. stant pallentes rei ad sortis eventum. non sic trepidant de quorum damnatione sors ducitur, non sic deiecti ac suspensi pavitant de quorum captivitate expectatur sortis eventus. illic enim unius captivitatis, hic plurimorum addicitur. et fortasse ideo sors, quia in eventu sunt patrimonia, quae sub hac sorte volvuntur.

6. oppignorata: cited in the lexica only for Terence, Cicero (once), Martial and Seneca.

7. defuncti: this adjectival use of defunctus as equivalent to mortuus is confined to Silver and Late Latin. Cf. K.-Schm. s. v. defungi. T. L. L. V 379, 3-20.

8. defaenerata: the p. p. p. of defaenerare is cited for Apuleius (once); Schol. Cic. Bob. (three times); Heges. (once); the Inf. for Plautus; the Gerundive for Cicero; the Perfect Active, 3rd sing. for Ambrose and Augustine. These are the only instances cited of the use of this word. Cf. T. L. L. V 305, 48-58.

9. aula: as here in the sense of "palace", Poetic, Silver, and Late. For a similar use of the word, cf. Ambr. Cain et Ab. 1, 4, 14: aula voluptatis.

SECTION 32.

1. dulciores post famem epulae fiunt: Ambrose is paraphrasing Bas. 176 C (6 E, 7 A): ὡς γὰρ ἡ δάψα ἡδὺν τὸ ποτὸν εὐτρεπίζει, καὶ λιμὸς ἡγγραμένας ἡδείαν παρασκευάζει τὴν τράπεζαν, οὕτω καὶ τὴν τῶν βρωμάτων ἀπόλαυσιν ιηστεία φαιδρύνει. . . .

2. viliscunt: Late Latin. Cf. Georges and B.-G. s. v.

3. condimentum cibi ieiunium est: for the same thought, cf. Cic. fin. 2, 90: idque Socratem, qui voluptatem nullo loco numerat, audio dicentem, cibi condimentum esse famem, potionis sitim.

4. adpetentia: cf. Sect. 1, n. 21.

5. venustates: Neue-Wagener cites the plural only for: Plaut. Poen. 1178; Gel. 17, 20, 6. Georges adds: Plaut. Pseud. 1257; id. Stich. 278.

6. transmittit ad satietatem: for similar expressions, cf. Plaut. Cist. 68: amarum ad satietatem usque oggerit; Suet. Dom. 21: prandebatque ad satietatem. The phrase ad satietatem is cited further for Plin. nat. 18, 148; id. ib. 34, 165; Liv. 24, 38.

7. non ad iudicium nare suspendit: for a somewhat similar thought, cf. Hor. sat. 1, 6, 5: naso adunco aliquem suspendere; ibid. 2, 8, 64: Balatro suspendens omnia naso. naris in the singular in the sense of "nose", is used in Classical Latin only in the poets. Cf. Neue-Wagener I 667; K.-Schm. s. v.; Georges. s. v.

8. degenerant: degenerare with the simple Abl. is cited once for Cicero, and then for Seneca and Pliny before Late writers. Cf. T. L. L. V 383, 5-33.

9. perfunctio: cited only for Cic. de orat. 3, 7; id. fin. 1, 15, 49; and for Ambr. hex. 4, 5, 24. Add the present instance; Ambr. hex. 4, 3, 10; id. epist. 43, 11.

10. ipse sol post noctem gratior: cf. Bas. 176 D (7 B): οὐχ ὁρῆς ὅτι καὶ ἥλιος φαιδρότερος μετὰ τὴν νύκτα; καὶ ἐγρήγορσις ἡδίων μετὰ τὸν ὕπνον; καὶ ἰγεία ποθεινότερα μετὰ τὴν πείραν τῶν ἐναντίων; καὶ τράπεζα τοίουν χαριεστέρα μετὰ τὴν νηστείαν.

11. aegritudinis: in this sense of "illness" of the body, aegritudo is Silver and Late Latin. In writers from Plautus to Columella the word signifies "mental illness". Cf. T. L. L. I 951, 65 ff.

12. temptamenta: Poetic, Silver, and Late Latin.

13. mundi conditore: the use of conditor = creator is Silver and Late Latin. For the phrase, mundi conditor, cf. Manil. 2, 701; Sen. Phoen. 655; id. epist. 119, 15; Tert. praeser. 13; id. virg. vel. 1; and for further instances, T. L. L. IV 146, 83-84; 147, 1-22. Cf. also Ambr. Hymn. 1, 1, 1: aeternum rerum conditor, and Walpole's notes on the same.

14. diversitatibus: diversitas in the plural is cited first for Flor. epit. 3, 10, 6 and Apul. mund. 9, and then for later writers. Cf. T. L. L. V 1572, 18-21; Georges s. v.

15. patrocinator: used first by Terence, then by Quintilian, Tacitus, and Pliny, before Late writers. Cf. K.-Schm. s. v.

SECTION 33.

1. mystica . . . mensa: for this use of mystica mensa in the sense of Eucharist, cf. St. John Chrysostom's Homily on Heresies, particularly Sect. 4: εἶτα ἐπὶ τὴν μυστικὴν τράπεζαν ἐξάγει τὸν λόγον, μεζόνως αὐτοὺς φοβῆσαι βουλόμενος. ἐγὼ γάρ, φησί, παρέλαβον ἀπὸ τοῦ Κυρίου, ὃ καὶ παρέδωκα ὑμῖν. ποία ἀκολουθία αὕτη; περὶ ἀρίστου διαλέγῃ κοινοῦ, καὶ μυστηρίων φρικτῶν μέμνησαι; . . . The adjective mysticus = μυστικός, appearing in the present passage in a Christian sense, is Poetic and Late Latin. To the instances of the word in this sense in Ambrose listed by Barry (196) add: Ambr. vid. 3, 18; ibid. 4, 25; id. in Luc. 4, 15; id. in psalm. 118 serm. 11, 7; id. in psalm. 118 serm. 6, 30.

2. Psalm 22, 5.

3. poculum illud inebrians: for the allusion, cf. Psalm 22, 5 (Old Version reading): et poculum tuum inebrians quam praeclarum est!

4. caelestium sacramentorum: as a pure Latin word, sacramentum could not figure in Eccl. usage during the Apostolic and Sub-apostolic times, for the language of the Church was "exclusively Greek". The word, however, gradually came into use through the influence of the current Latin versions of the New Testament, in which it frequently served to render the Greek μυστήριον, mystery. Cf. the Dictionary of Christian Antiquities Vol. II (1880), p. 1831. St. Ambrose often uses the term sacramentum, particularly with the epithet caeleste; cf. e. g., epist. 25, 2; in psalm 118 serm. 18, 26. For a good summary of the teaching of St. Ambrose on the Sacraments, cf. Bibliothek der Kirchenväter (Ambrosius) Vol. I, pp. lxxviii-lxxxiv.

5. Is. 55, 1. Ambrose quotes this verse in the same manner in his Ioseph 7, 42. The Old Version reads: Qui sititis, ite ad aquam: et quotquot non habetis pecuniam euntes emite et comedite; the Vulgate: Omnes sitientes venite ad aquas et qui non habetis argentum, propate, emite, et comedite.

6. Is. 65, 13. Ambrose follows the Greek closely. The Old Version and Vulgate, which are practically alike, differ considerably from St. Ambrose and the Septuagint.

7. Is. 65, 11. Ambrose is following the Greek. The Old Version has: qui ponitis Fortunae mensam, et libatis super eam; the Vulgate: et paratis Fortunae mensam, et impletis daemoni potionem.

8. ad mensam illam venerabilem ieiunia nos sancta perducunt: on the custom of fasting before Holy Communion in the Ancient Church, which had become a recognized practice in the fourth century, cf. Cabrol, Dictionnaire d'archéologie Chrétienne, Vol. 7, part 2, pp. 2486-2487; Dictionary of Christian Antiquities, Vol. I, pp. 284-285. For the use of venerabilis, cf. Sect. 22, n. 4.

9. aeterna: as often in the Christian writers, aeterna is used here of the eternal life and rewards of the soul in its union with God after death.

SECTION 34.

1. acceptabile ieiunium facit: this phrase is probably due to Scriptural influence. Cf. Is. 58, 5: ieiunium et diem acceptabilem domino; cf. also Bas. 196 D (15 D): νηστεύσωμεν νηστείαν δεκτὴν, εὐάρεστον τῷ θεῷ. acceptabile is Late Latin, being cited for the Jurists and Eccl. writers. Cf. T. L. L. V 281, 33-77; Georges s. v., K.-Schm. s. γ.

2. dei timore: a Scriptural echo; cf. 2 Kings 23, 3: iustus dominator in timore Dei; Esdr. 2, 5, 9: quare non timore Dei nostri ambulatis.

3. considera: for the same absolute use of considerare, cf. Cic. div. in Caec. 46: vide modo, etiam atque etiam considera; id. Verr. 2, 145: sic 'considerate; id. leg. agr. 2, 77: vere et diligenter considerate.

4. quadragesima totis praeter sabbatum et dominicam ieiunatur diebus: quadragesima, equivalent to the Greek τεσσαρακοστή, signifies Lent, the Christian Fast of forty days. For a full account of the history of the observance of Lent in the Early Church, cf. Dictionary of Christian Antiquities, Vol. II (1880), pp. 972-977; and especially, the excellent article Carême by E. Vacandard in Cabrol, Dictionnaire d'archéologie chrétienne, Vol. 2, Part 2, pp. 2139-2158; particularly p. 2143, where the present passage is cited and discussed. On the use of ieiunare, cf. Sect. 1, n. 16; for the Abl. of duration of time totis diebus, cf. Sect. 2, n. 10. sabbatum: a Hebrew word, already appearing in Classical Latin in Hor. sat. 1, 9, 69. dominica signifying Sunday, the Lord's Day, is Eccl. Latin. Cf. T. L. L. V 1057, 65-74.

5. hoc ieiunium domini pascha concludit: for a similar thought, cf. Cassian. conl. 21, 50: totum anni spatium aequali ieiunio concludebant; Paul. Nol. epist. 28, 3: quia breve spatium videbatur, quoad ilico sollemnitatis paschalis concluderet.

6. dies resurrectionis: a Scriptural phrase; cf. Soph. 3, 8: in die resurrectionis meae in futurum. resurrectio is a Late Latin subst. coined by Tertullian. Cf. K.-Schm. s. v. resurgere.

7. baptizantur electi: as here, in the sense of "the chosen ones" or "elect of God", electi is a technical term used especially in Rome and Italy in the fourth century to designate the second or higher grade in the catechumenate. The common term employed elsewhere at the time for this class was competentes. The electi were "actually inscribed in the Church list" as qualified for Baptism during the approaching Eastertide. On the Catechumenate, cf. the admirable article Catéchuménat by P. de Puniet in Cabrol, Dictionnaire d'Archéologie Chrétienne, Vol. 2, part 2, pp. 2579-2621; particularly Sect. V Le catéchuménat à Rome et en Italie, p. 2602, where the present passage is cited. It should be noted that the old view that there were four grades in the catechumenate is erroneous. It has now been definitely established that there were only two classes. Cf. the article in Cabrol, p. 2584.

8. altare: cf. Sect. 2, n. 7.

9. sacramentum: i. e., the Holy Eucharist. Cf. Sect. 33, n. 4.

10. refecti spiritali cibo et spiritali potu: a Scriptural echo, cf. 1 Cor. 10, 3, 4: et omnes eandem escam spiritalem manducaverunt; et omnes eundem potum spiritalem biberunt. Cf. also Hier. epist. 96, 1: saturati spiritali cibo. spiritalis in this sense of "spiritual" is Eccl. Latin. Cf. Kaulen s. v. potus is cited once for Cicero, otherwise for Silver and Late Latin, where it is used as an equivalent of the Classical potio. Cf. K.-Schm. s. v. potio.

11. Psalm 22, 5. The Old Version has est after praeclarum, otherwise the same as Ambrose. Cf. Sect. 33, n. 3. The Vulgate has: et calix meus inebrians quam praeclarus est!

12. disciplina ieiunii: for similar phrases, cf. Tert. ieiun. 13: disciplina abstinentiae; Ambr. epist. 27, 8: disciplina continentiae.

13. Is. 58, 3-6. Ambrose follows the Greek closely. The Old Version reading differs considerably. Verse 5 is quoted in almost the same words in Ambr. Nab. 10, 44.

14. Is. 58, 6 ff. Ambrose is following the Greek, whereas the Old Version and Vulgate are considerably different. Ambrose's development here shows the influence of Bas. 164 A (2 A).

15. mentis habitus: for this use of habitus, cf. Cic. inv. 25, 36: habitu[m] appellamus animi aut corporis constantem et absolutam aliqua in re perfectionem; ibid. 53, 160: iustitia est habitus animi communi utilitate conservata.

16. orationi: in the sense of "prayer", as here, the word is used from Tertullian on. Cf. K.-Schm. s. v.

17. in lege dei die et nocte meditare: a Scriptural echo; cf. Ios. 1, 8: non recedat volumen legis huius ab ore tuo; sed meditaberis in eo diebus ac noctibus; Psalm 1, 2: et in lege eius meditabitur die ac nocte.

SECTION 35.

1. figura corporis plena gravitatis: for a somewhat similar expression, cf. Cic. Q. Rosc. 20: si quam coniecturam de natura viri affert hominibus tacita corporis figura; id. Dom. 87: omnia vita plena gravitatis.

2. nullus rubor ebrietatis circumfusus genas: the middle of circumfundere with the Acc. is cited only for: Bell. Afr. 78, 4; Liv. 22, 30, 2; Apul. met. 3, 8. Cf. T. L. L. III 1149, 21-25. None of the examples cited, however, correspond at all closely to the present passage. It would be possible also to consider the Acc. here an Acc. of specification, a usage which is relatively common in Ambrose. Cf. Introduction, pp. 26-27.

3. qui intuentium offendat aspectus: for a similar expression, cf. Cic. leg. agr. 2, 56; quorum oculos (L. Sulla) offendebat. The plural of aspectus does not seem to be used in Class. Latin except by Vergil.

4. pallore: cited twice for Cicero (Merguet); otherwise Poetic, Silver, and Late.

5. reverendus: Poetic, Silver, and Late.
6. gressus: Poetic, Silver, and Late. Cf. K.-Schm., and Georges s. v.
7. motus animorum: for the same phrase, cf. Cic. off. 1, 36, 130: motus animorum duplices sunt; id. ib. 1, 38, 136: motus animi nimii; id. Att. 3, 8, 4: animi motus; id. Arch. 17: nos animorum incredibilis motus . . . neglegemus.
8. cogitationis . . . arbiter: cf. Ambr. in psalm 118 serm. 1, 10: quia Deus cogitationum arbiter.
9. (vultus) tacitus cordis interpres: for a similar expression, cf. Cic. leg. 1, 30: interpres mentis oratio verbis discrepat sententiis congruens.
10. praetextat: in this sense of "disguise" cited only for Vergil by Georges and B.-G. Harper adds, Claud. 1, 99: fraudem blando risu praetexit.
11. solvatur risu: for the same phrase, cf. Hor. sat. 2, 1, 86: solventur risu tabulae; Quint. inst. 5, 10, 67: quia si aliquid amiserimus, cum risu quoque tota res solvitur; Val. Max. 4, 3, 5: multum risu solvit.
12. incontinenti: as here, in the sense of "immoderate", cited for Plautus, Horace, Seneca, and Ambrose. Cf. Georges and B.-G. s. v.
13. superfluum: Georges, B.-G., and K.-Schm., cite the word only for Late Latin.
14. commonitionis: noted only for Quintilian before Late writers. Cf. T. L. L. III 1933, 34-84; 1934, 1-7.
15. sapientia: used here by antonomasia for God.
16. Matth. 6, 16.
17. ideo dixit hypocritas: this whole passage is an imitation of Bas. 165 AB (2 CD): ὑποκριτής ἐστὶν ὁ ἐν θεάτρῳ ἀλλότριον πρόσωπον ὑπελθών· δούλος ὢν, πολλάκις τὸ τοῦ δεσπότου, καὶ ιδιώτης, τὸ τοῦ βασιλέως. οὕτω καὶ ἐν τῷ βίῳ τούτῳ, ὥσπερ ἐπὶ ὀρχήστρας, τῆς ἐαυτῶν ζωῆς, οἱ πολλοὶ θεατρίζουσιν, ἄλλα μὲν ἐν τῇ καρδίᾳ φέροντες, ἄλλα δὲ ἐν τῇ ἐπιφανείᾳ τοῖς ἀνθρώποις δεικνύντες. hypocrita in this sense of "hypocrite" is Eccl. Latin, being confined for the most part to the Vulgate.

18. alienam personam induant: for similar expressions, cf. Cic. off. 3, 10, 43: ponit enim personam amici, cum induit iudicis; Lact. 2, 16, 3: et illorum sibi nomina quasi personas aliquas induerunt; Macr.: personam induere (B.-G.).

19. personas gerunt: for the phrase, cf. Cic. off. 1, 32, 115; ibid. 1, 34, 132: est igitur proprium munus magistratus, intelligere, se gerere personam civitatis debereque eius dignitatem et decus sustinere.

20. adfectant: in this sense of "feign", Silver and Late Latin. Cf. T. L. L. I 1184, 6-30.

SECTION 36.

1. et ideo: cf. Sect. 4, n. 13.

2. Matth. 6, 17 ff. The Old Version has ieiunantes for quia ieiunatis, and adds in palam after reddet vobis; otherwise the same. The only variation in the Greek from the Old Version is the use of the pronoun in the singular with corresponding agreements. The Vulgate follows the Greek more closely. Ambrose is following Basil here. Cf. Bas. 165 A (2 C).

3. sed et: = sed etiam. Cf. Introduction, pp. 39-40.

4. sobrietatis: cf. Sect. 4, n. 8.

5. Cant. 1, 3. Sabatier takes this reading for the Old Version from Ambr. inst. virg. 1, 13, 83.

6. artus animae et quaedam membra: for a similar transferred use of artus, cf. Q. Cic. pet. 10: nervi atque artus sapientiae. Cf. also, Iuvenc. 4, 371: membra . . . animae volucris spoliata calore.

7. Psalm. 22, 5.

8. oleum laetitiae . . . prae . . . consortibus: for the allusion, cf. Psalm 44. 8: dilexisti iustitiam, et odisti iniquitatem: propterea unxit te Deus, Deus tuus oleo laetitiae prae consortibus tuis.

9. ne videaris contristari in animae salute: cf. Bas. 164 B (2 A): ἀποπον μὴ χαίρειν ἐπὶ ὑγείᾳ ψυχῆς. contristari in this sense of "to be sad", is cited in Classical Prose in Cael. (Cic. epist. 8, 9, 5); and in Silver Prose for Pliny, Columella, Seneca, and Rut. Lupus. Its usage is common in Eccl. Latin, being especially frequent in the Vulgate. Cf. K.-Schm., and T. L. L. s. v. The use of in with the verb, as here, is Eccl. Latin. Cf. T. L. L. IV 778, 82-83; 779, 39-41.

10. nemo enim tristis coronatur, nemo maestus triumphat: taken literally from Bas. 164 B (2 A): Οὐδείς ἀθυμῶν στεφανοῦται· οὐδείς στυγνάζων τρόπαιον ἵσται. For maestus, cf. Sect. 9, n. 9.

11. Eccles. 2, 14.

12. ad mysteria vocaris et nescis: mysteria refers to the Sacraments of the Christian Faith. The Benedictine editors aptly state: hic innuitur cautissimum illud silentium quo sancti patres mysteria quaedam, ac praecipue eucharistiae cognitionem catechumenos celare consueverant. Cf. also Sect. 33, n. 4. For the phrase, cf. Bas. 165 A (2 C): ἐπὶ μυστήριά σε καλεῖ ὁ λόγος.

13. Psalm 152, 2.

SECTION 37.

1. est et aliud caput mysticum: for the thought here, cf. Ambr., in psalm 118 serm. 20, 2: mysticum caput Christus est; quia Omnia in ipso constant, et ipse est caput corporis Ecclesiae. On the use of mysticus cf. Sect. 33, n. 1.

2. 1 Cor. 11, 3. This reading varies slightly from the Old Version and Vulgate which have: caput autem mulieris, vir: caput vero Christi, Deus.

3. caput eius deus est . . . : for the allusion, cf. 1 Cor. 11, 3, n. 2 above, and Matth. 26, 7.

4. typum: in Eccl. writers typus is a term applied to the prefigurations in the Old Testament that were to be fulfilled in the New. Cf. Catholic Encyclopedia s. v. Types. For further instances of this usage of the word in Ambrose, cf. Ambr. fid. 3, 11, 89: ergo illum Melchisedech in Christi typo sacerdotem Dei accepimus; sed illum in typo, hunc in veritate: typus autem umbra est veritatis; ibid. 4, 1, 4; id. epist. 2, 22: humiliabatur in typo eius, qui se erat humiliaturus usque ad mortem.

5. quae in caput eius misit unguentum . . . quae in pedes misit confessa est eius passionem: for the allusions cf. Matth. 26, 7 ff., and Luc. 7, 37 ff. The use of mittere in the sense of "pour", as here, is Eccl. Latin. Cf., e. g., Matth. 26, 12: mittens . . . unguentum hoc in corpus meum.

6. passionem: Late Latin. Cf. K.-Schm. s. v.; Goelzer (Jérôme) 73; especially, Teeuwen, 44-46.

7. remissionem accipias peccatorum: Scriptural. Cf. Act. 26, 18: ut accipiant remissionem peccatorum. For further instances of the phrase, remissio peccatorum, cf. Sect. 13, n. 6.

8. lava faciem tuam: these words should have been italicized by Schenkl as they are quoted directly from Matth. 6, 17.

9. emunda animam tuam peccatricem: taken almost literally from Bas. 165 A (2 C): ἀπόπλυνε τὴν ψυχὴν ἀμαρτημάτων. emundare is cited only for Columella and Seneca before Late Latin. Cf. Georges s. v. The adjective peccatrix is Eccl. For the phrase peccatrix anima, cf. also Prud. cath. proem. 35.

10. index enim facies plerumque est conscientiae: for similar expressions, cf. Cic. orat. 60: imago animi vultus, indices oculi; Curt. 8, 6, 22: et tempus, quo venerant, et vultus haud sane securi animi index.

11. tacitus sermo mentis: for the same thought, cf. Cic. Pis. 1: oculi, supercilia, frons, vultus, denique totus, qui sermo quidam tacitus mentis est, hic in fraudem homines impulit.

12. compungimur: in this sense of "to feel remorse", Late Latin. Cf. T. L. L. III 2173, 74 ff.

13. noli hanc exterminare faciem: Scriptural. Cf. Matth. 6, 16: exterminant enim facies suas. Cf. Bas. 165 A (2 C): μὴ ἀφανίσῃς τὸ πρόσωπόν σου. exterminare in this sense of "disfigure", "distort", as applied to one's features, is Eccl. Latin. Cf. Georges and B.-G. s. v. For copious citations of the use of the verb in Eccl. Latin, cf. Rönisch, pp. 365-366.

14. qui aliud corde gerit, aliud foris praetendit: for this thought, cf. Bas. 165 A (2 D) quoted in Sect. 35, n. 17.

15. peripetasmate: from the Greek, περιπέτασμα. The word is cited only for Cic. Verr. 4, 27 and 28; Ambr. hex. 3, 1, 5; and the present instance. Cf. Georges s. v.

16. operetur: Poetic, Silver, and Late.

17. interfectorium: the word is Late and rare. As an adjective it is cited only for Aug. lib. arb. 3, 25; Isid. orig. 17, 7, 7; and as a substantive it is noted only for the present passage. Cf. Georges and B.-G. s. v.

SECTION 38.

1. nemo amarioribus praeoptet dulcia: Ambrose is influenced by Basil in the development of this passage. Cf. Bas. 165 A (2 B). The use of praeoptare in the sense of "prefer", "like better" with the Acc. and Dat. of the thing is cited first for Livy. Cf. Georges s. v.

2. amaro: as a subst. in its literal sense, as here, cited for Cic. fin. 2, 36. Other examples of the substantival use of this adjective in the singular are confined to Late Latin. Cf. T. L. L. I 1821, 42-52.

3. dulce: the substantival use of dulcis in the singular is cited only for Plautus, Ovid, and Pliny. Cf. Georges and B.-G. s. v.

4. sicut enim cum in intimis puerorum visceribus vermes . . . : Ambrose is paraphrasing Bas. 165 A (2 B): ὡς περ γὰρ οἱ ἐν τοῖς ἐγκάτοις τῶν παίδων ζωογονούμενοι σκόληκες φαρμάκοις τισὶ δριμυτάτοις ἐξαφανίζονται, οὕτως ἁμαρτίαν, ὑποικονοροῦσαν τῷ βάθει, ἐναποκτείνει τῇ ψυχῇ ἐπεισελθοῦσα νηστεία, ἥγε ὡς ἀληθῶς τῆς προσηγορίας ταύτης ἀξία.

5. indigestione: Late Latin.

6. vis: in this sense of the "potency" of herbs, drugs, etc., cited in the lexica only for: Cato, Ovid, and Juvenal.

7. inolescit: this verb is cited for Vergil, Silius, Columella before Gellius and later writers.

SECTION 39.

1. quid Esau servum fratri suo fecit: for the allusion, cf. Gen. 25, 29 ff. Ambrose takes this expression almost literally from Bas. 172 A (4 E): τί τὸν Ἑσαῦ ἐβεβήλωσε, καὶ δοῦλον ἐποίησε τοῦ ἀδελφοῦ.

2. ad horam: this phrase, analogous to ad tempus, and equivalent to the French tout à l'heure, is Late Latin. Cf. K.-Schm. s. v. hora, and Goelzer (Jérôme), 426.

3. contemptus: cited only for Cicero (once), Lucretius (3 times), and Ovid (twice), before Silver and Late writers.

4. Judges 14, 14. Except for the use of processit before dulce, the Old Version reading is the same as Ambrose. Cf. the Septuagint: καὶ ἀπὸ ἰσχυροῦ γλυκύ. The Vulgate has: De comedente exivit cibus, et de forti egressa est dulcedo.

5. forte: this subst. use of fortis is cited for Cicero (twice), and then for Silver and Late writers. Cf. T. L. L. VI 1160, 14-44. Note that the substantival usage here is in imitation of the Scriptural passage above.

6. dulce: cf. Sect. 38, n. 3.

SECTION 40.

1. noli ergo te iactare: Ambrose is following Basil. Cf. Bas. 165 A (2 D).

2. quae enim ad ostentationem fiunt . . . : cf. Bas. 165 A (2 E): τὰ γὰρ ἐπιδεικτικῶς γινόμενα οὐ πρὸς τὸν αἰῶνα τὸν μέλλοντα τὸν καρπὸν ἐκτείνει, ἀλλ' εἰς τὸν τῶν ἀνθρώπων ἔπαινον καταστρέφει. For the phrase, ad ostentationem, cf. Nep. Att. 25, 17: praeceptis philosophorum ad vitam agendam, non ad ostentationem utebatur; Sall. hist. frg. 2, 29, 2: scaenis ad ostentationem histrionum fabricatis.

3. Helias in deserto erat: for the allusion, cf. 3 Kings 17, 6. The employment of desertum in the singular = "desert" is Eccl. Latin.

4. Helisaeus in deserto erat: for the allusion, cf. 4 Kings, 4, 39.

5. Iohannes in deserto erat, ubi solas locustas aut mel silvestre inveniret: cf. Matth. 3, 4: ipse autem Iohannes habebat vestimentum de pilis camelorum, et zonam pelliceam circa lumbos suos; esca autem eius erat locustae et mel silvestre. Cf. also Sections 4 and 14 for the same allusion.

6. ministerio: Early, Poetic, Silver, and Late Latin.

7. prandebat Daniel inter ieiunantes leones: for the allusion, cf. Dan. 14, 32. Schenkl incorrectly refers to Dan. 6, 22.

8. ille prandebat alienum prandium: Ambrose employs the same expression in his allusion to Daniel in his Iac. 2, 9, 42.

9. ieiunantibus epulae volant . . . : for the allusion, cf. Exod. 16, 13.

10. ieiunantibus de caelo manna descendit: for the allusion, cf. Exod. 16, 15; 32, 6.

SECTION 41.

1. impatientiae: Silver and Late Latin.

2. etenim qui ieiunantem . . . non passus est populus: for the allusion, cf. Exod. 32, 1 ff.

3. Legis: i.e. the Ten Commandments. On this use of Lex, cf. Sect. 16, n. 14.

4. populus . . . sedit manducare et bibere et surrexerunt ludere: these words should have been italicized by Schenkl as they are taken directly from Exod. 32, 6. Cf. also Bas. 461 D (130 B): ὅτε ἐκάθισεν ὁ λαὸς φαγεῖν καὶ πίνειν, καὶ ἀνέστησαν παίζειν· ἡ δὲ παῖδιὰ αὐτῶν εἰδωλολατρεία ἦν.

5. mater fidei continentia ita perfidiae mater ebrietas est: for a similar expression, cf. Cic. ac. 10, 59: immoderta intemperantia, omnium perturbationum mater. Cf. also Sect. 69 below. Note that perfidia is used as the exact opposite of fides, which here = "Faith", the "True Religion". On this use of perfidia, which is rather common in Ambrose and other Eccl. writers, cf. Goelzer (St. Avit) 423.

SECTION 42.

1. homines tunicam non habentes . . . : throughout this Section, Ambrose is paraphrasing Bas. 449 B (124 D) : οἱ γὰρ ἱμάτιον οὐκ ἔχοντες, οὐδὲ τί φάγωσιν εἰς τὴν αὔριον, βασιλεύουσι καὶ στρατοπέδων ἄρχουσιν ἐν τῇ μέθῃ, καὶ πόλεις οἰκοδομοῦσι, καὶ χρήματα διανέμονται . . .

2. sequentis diei: this phrase, equivalent to the Class. post-ridie, proximo die, is cited for Bell. Hisp. and Livy, and then more frequently for the Silver and Late writers. Cf. K.-Schm. s. v. sequens; B.-G. s. v. sequor.

3. potestatibus: in the sense of "high officials", as here, cited first for Pliny the Elder and Suetonius. Cf. Georges s. v.

4. dispensant: though cited for Cicero and other writers of the Classical period, the word first becomes common in Eccl. Latin. Cf. T. L. L. V 1401, 76 ff.

5. civitates: as equivalent to urbes, mostly Silver and Late Latin. Cf. K.-Schm. s. v. civitas.

6. fervet enim vinum in his: a Scriptural echo. Cf. Is. 5, 11: vinum enim eos comburet.

7. mox ubi: like deinde ubi, this combination is principally Poetic. Cf. St.-Schm. 767; K.-Steg. II 2, 365.

8. digesserint: cf. Sect. 26, n. 3. On the tense here, cf. Introduction, p. 42.

SECTION 43.

1. ad arma consurgitur: for a similar phrase, cf. Verg. Aen. 10, 90: consurgere in arma Europam.

2. quam fortes sibi homines videntur in vino . . . : on the thought here, cf. Hor. epist. 1, 5, 19: Quid non ebrietas designat? Operta recludit, Spes iubet esse ratas, Ad proelia trudit inertem, Sollicitis animis onus eximit, addocet artis. Fecundi calices quem non fecere disertum? Contracta quem non in paupertate solutum?

3. mens necesse est titubet . . . : Ambrose is paraphrasing Bas. 449 B (125 C) : τούτων πελιδνοὶ οἱ ὀφθαλμοί· ὑπώχρος δὲ ἡ ἐπιφάνεια· πνεῦμα προσεσσηγός· γλῶσσα παρειμένη, καὶ κραυγὴ ἄσημος· ἀκροσφαλεῖς οἱ πόδες καθάπερ οἱ τῶν παίδων· ἐκκρίσεις δὲ τῶν περιτωμάτων αὐτόματοι ὥσπερ ἀπὸ ἀψύχων ῥέονσαι. For the phrase mens titubet, cf. also Ambr. paenit. 1, 14, 76: ubi enim caro inebriatur, mens titubet, animus vacillat, cor fluctuat. For a similar expression, cf. Sen. Med. 937: quid, anime, titubas. Baxter lists titubare as a favorite word in Ambrose noting 8 instances in his works.

4. lingua balbutiat: for the same phrase, cf. Hier. epist. 22, 29: balbutientem linguam; for further instances, cf. T. L. L. II 1696, 15-21. The present passage is cited.

5. pallor exsanguis: for the same phrase, cf. Curt. 8, 3, 13: confuderat oris exsanguis notas pallor.

6. factor: in its transferred sense, as here, cited for Suetonius and Late Latin. Cf. T. L. L. VI 1010, 16-37; in its literal meaning, of malus odor, it is cited for Cicero (once), Celsus, Columella, Pliny and Late Latin. The word in general is found chiefly among Eccl. writers. Cf. T. L. L. VI 1009, 40 ff.

7. barbari in ferrum ruunt, vulgus in rixas: fighting in the midst of banquets was a custom noted by Classical writers as particularly common among the Thracians. Cf. Hor. carm. 1, 27, 1:

Notis in usum laetitiae scyphis

Pugnare Thracum est: tollite barbarum

Morem.

Cf. also Page's note on Hor. Ode 1, 27, 2; 1, 36, 14; Kiessling's and Heinze's note on Hor. Ode 1, 27, 2.

8. si quis eorum pugno fuerit percussus: a Scriptural echo. Cf. Exod. 21, 18. On the mood and tense of fuerit, cf. Introduction, p. 42.

9. ora saucium: on the use of the Greek Acc., cf. Introduction, pp. 26-27.

10. miserabiles epilogos decantare: for a very similar expression, cf. Hor. carm. 1, 33, 2-3: miserabiles Decantes elegos.

11. emolliat: in this sense of "soften", Poetic, Silver and Late.

12. temulentorum: this substantival use of temulentus in the plural is cited for: Sen. epist. 47, 5; Tac. ann. 1, 50, id. hist. 1, 80; Vulg. Prov. 26, 9. Cf. Georges and For. s. v.

13. sicut ignis enim probat ferrum durum, ita et vini incendio etiam superborum hominum cor liquescit: Scriptural. Cf. Eccli. 31, 31: ignis probat ferrum durum; sic vinum corda superborum arguet in ebrietate potatum. In this sense of "to melt" liquescere is Poetic, Silver, and Late.

SECTION 44.

1. pauper: as a subst. in the singular, pauper, like dives, appears for the most part in Plautus and Silver writers. Cf. K.-Schm. s. v. pauper. Cf. Sect. 27, n. 1.

2. Eccli. 31, 32. The Old Version and Vulgate have aequa for aequalis; sobrietate for ebrietate, otherwise the same as Ambrose. The Greek reads: ἐφισον ζωῆς οἶνος ἀνθρώπων.

3. Eccli. 31, 32. The Old Version and Vulgate read: si bibas illud moderate, eris sobrius.

4. Eccli. 31, 35, 36, 38. The Old Version and Vulgate have: Vinum in iucunditatem creatum est, et non in ebrietatem, ab initio. Exsultatio animae et cordis vinum moderate potatum. Vinum multum potatum irritationem, et iram, et ruinas multas facit. The Greek reads: τίς ζωῇ ἐλασσονμένῳ οἴνῳ; καὶ αὐτὸς ἐκτισται εἰς εὐφροσύνην ἀνθρώποις. ἀγαλλίαμα καρδίας καὶ εὐφροσύνη ψυχῆς οἶνος πινόμενος ἐν καιρῷ αὐτάρκης· πικρία ψυχῆς οἶνος πινόμενος πολλὸς ἐν ἐρεθισμῷ καὶ ἀντιπτόματι.

SECTION 45.

1. potationes: the plural form of this word is cited only for Plaut. Capt. 771; id. Stich. 211; Apul. met. 8, 1; Treb. Gall. 17, 8; Vulg. 1 Petr. 4, 3; Salv. gub. 6, 13, 78. Cf. Georges and Harper s. v.

2. unguentatos: the lexicæ cite unguentare only for Plautus, Catullus, and Seneca, before Late Latin.

3. qualem ferunt fuisse illum . . . : the story is related of Polemon the Athenian, son of Philostratus, head of the Academy from 314 to c. 276 B. C., in Diog. Laert. IV, 3, 16.

4. delibutus unguentis: the phrase seems to have been first used by Cic. rep. 4, 5: Homerum redimitum coronis et delibutum unguentis. It is common in subsequent writers. Cf. T. L. L. V 442, 47-53.

5. redimitus floribus: for the same phrase, cf. Curt. 9, 10, 26: ibant amici et cohors regia variis redimita floribus coronisque. The use of redimere in this sense occurs in Cicero (cf. n. 4), but it is mostly confined to Poetry and Silver and Late Prose.

6. subnixus meretricibus: the lexicæ cite no instances of subnixus used of persons, as here, in its literal sense of "supported by", "upheld by".

7. antelucano potu: for a similar phrase, cf. Cic. Cat. 2, 22: in antelucanis cenis expromitur. Cf. T. L. L. II 151, 10 ff. The present passage is cited. On the use of potus, cf. Sect. 34, n. 10.

8. diurno . . . lumine: "by the light of candles in daylight". From the context this certainly seems to be the meaning of the words.

9. philosophi . . . disputantis: i. e., Xenocrates. For the same reference, cf. Porph. Hor. sat. 2, 3, 254: audisse fertur Polemon e proximo Xenocratis vocem disputantis.

10. auditorium: Silver and Late. Cf. T. L. L. II 1295, 72 ff.

11. coronas . . . sensim detraxit: for the same phrase, cf., e. g., Hor. sat. 1, 10, 48: ego illi detrahere ausim haerentem capiti cum multa laude coronam; Liv. 38, 47, 4: coronam . . . capite detrahunt. Cf. T. L. L. V 824, 28-30.

12. unguenta detererit: in its literal sense of "wash off", "remove" with the Acc. of the thing removed detergere is Poetic, Silver, and especially Late Latin. Cf. T. L. L. V 796, 53 ff.

13. philosophus postea tantus evaserit: for the use of evadere here, cf. Cic. orat. 131: fuit autem Athenis adulescens, perfectus Epicurius evaserat, minime aptum ad dicendum genus.

SECTION 46.

1. apage: with the Acc., as here, cited once for Varro Men.

133 and Cic. epist. 5, 10^a, 1; otherwise Early and Late Latin. Cf. T. L. L. II 205, 45-69.

2. proeliatorum: cited only for Val. Max. 3, 2, 24, Tac. ann. 2, 73, id. dial. 37, before Late Latin. The word is relatively rare. Cf. Georges s. v.

3. inter arma prandendum est: cf. Sect. 43, n. 7.

4. Babyloniciis . . . balteis: for a similar reference to Babylonian baltei, cf. Apul. flor. 9, p. 33: balteum quod genus pictura Babylonica miris coloribus variegatur.

5. lumbos suffulti: on the use of the Acc., cf. Introduction, pp. 26-27. In the sense of "loins", as here, lumbus is cited for Plautus, Cic. Arat. 82, and Horace, before Silver and Late Latin. The verb suffulcio is cited in the lexica only for Plautus, Lucretius, Curtius, Martial, Apuleius, Fulgentius, and Fortunatus.

6. bullis: in this meaning of "studs" in a girdle, Poetic, Silver, and Late. Cf. T. L. L. II 2241, 70-78. Cf. also Pauly-Wissowa, s. v. bullā.

7. thecis: as here, in the sense of a "sheath", theca is cited only for Varro; Cic. Att. 4, 7, 2, id. Verr. 4, 52, Iul. Valerius, and Ambrose (the present passage). Cf. Georges s. v.

8. coma nitentes: for a similar phrase, cf. Stat. Ach. 1, 162: fulvoque nitet coma gratior auro; id. Theb. 9, 702. Ambrose is following Basil here. Cf. Bas. 456 B (127 C). The participial adj. nitens is Poetic and Silver Latin.

9. per singularum distantes aetatum vices: for similar expressions, cf. Hier. epist. 21, 2: per singulas adoleret aetates; Plin. nat. 29, 6: per aetatum gradum.

10. ordinatam: the purely adjectival use of this participle is cited only for Cicero, Nepos, and Seneca, before Late Latin.

11. vasa exposita argentea, pompam arbitreris: cf. Bas. 456 B (127 C): ψυκτῆρας καὶ κρατῆρας καὶ φιάλας. ὥσπερ ἐν πομπῇ τι καὶ πανηγύρει. . .

12. cornu: for this use of cornu in the sense of "drinking horn", cf. Daremberg Saglio, s. v. cornu.

13. proeliaris: Early and Late Latin.

14. epularis: cited in the lexica for Cicero (5 times), Suetonius, Cyprian, Ammianus, and Paul. Diac.

15. quod discumbentes in certamen accendat: for a similar expression, cf. Sil. 4, 169: stimulas cornu atque in proelia mentes accendis. accendere with in and the Acc. in the sense of inflammare, incitare, aliquem ad aliquid, is found first in Liv. 29, 9, 6. Cf. T. L. L. I 276, 75-84; 277, 1-2.

SECTION 47.

1. primo minoribus poculis velut ferentariis pugna praeluditur: for a similar thought, cf. Bas. 456 D (127 E). On the rules of drinking observed in the commissatio, cf. Blümner, pp. 401-405. As used here, ferentarius is cited for Cato, Sallust, Tacitus, Vegetius, Hegesippus, and the present passage from Ambrose. praeludere is Silver and Late Latin; the phrase, pugnam praeludere is cited in the lexica only for Rut. Nam. 1, 257: pugnam glebis praeludere.

2. donec udae vocis aperiant iter: cf. Verg. Aen. 7, 533: et udae vocis iter.

3. praelusoriis: the present passage is the only instance cited for the use of this word. Cf. Georges and B.-G. s. v. (not cited in Forcellini and Harper). Schenkl, on the basis of his best Mss., gives the reading prolusoriis. It seems better to follow the reading praelusoriis of Mss. BH' which Schenkl himself in his apparatus criticus is inclined to consider the true reading. The employment of praeluditur above, a reading which is reasonably certain, would seem to point to praelusoriis also. Hence, following the Benedictines, we have decided to take praelusoriis as our reading.

4. sitim, ne . . . restinguant eam: for the phrase, sitim restinguere, cf. Verg. ecl. 5, 47: quale per aestum dulcis aquae saliente sitim restinguere rivo; also Cic. fin. 2, 3, 9: Eademne quae restincta site? . . . restincta enim sitis stabilitatem voluptatis habet.

5. ubi res calere coeperit, poscunt maioribus poculis: for the thought here, cf. Philo, de ebrietate (II 213, 6 C): πρόντες γὰρ ἔτι διψῶσι καὶ ἄρχονται μὲν ἀπὸ τῶν βραχυτέρων κνάθων, προϊόντες δὲ ταῖς μείζουσιν οἰνοχόαις ἐγχεῖν παραγγέλλουσιν· ἐπειδὰν (δ') ἀκροθώρακες γενόμενοι χλιανθῶσιν, οὐκέτι κρατεῖν ἑαυτῶν δυνάμενοι. . . . On the mood of coeperit, cf. Introduction, p. 42. For the expression poscunt maioribus poculis, cf. Cic. Verr. 2, 66: hortatur hospes, poscunt maioribus poculis; Hor. sat. 2, 8, 35: et calices poscit maiores.

6. inardescit: Poetic, Silver, and Late.

7. martius: in this sense of "martial", cited for the Augustan Poets, Livy, Silver, and Late Latin.

8. exaestuatur: Poetic, Silver, and Late in this meaning of "glow", "boil up".

9. visa: there is an ellipsis of sit: Cf. the parallel clause ubi . . . coeperit above. Such an ellipsis is rather unusual.

10. meraciore: in this sense of "pure" with reference to liquor, cited only for Cic. nat. deor. 3, 31, 78, Prop. 2, 33, 27, and Celsus, before Late Latin. Cf. Georges and B.-G. s. v.

11. reparatur: mostly Poetic, Silver, and Late Latin.

12. pocula: in the sense of "drinks", as here, Early, Poetic, and Late.

13. ferculus: in this meaning of "a course of food", cited for Cato, Serv. Aen. 1, 726, Hor. sat. 2, 6, 104, Prop. 4, 4, 76, before Silver and Late writers. Cf. T. L. L. VI 490, 24-74.

14. deinde procedente potu longius . . . praecellat: for the thought, cf. Bas. 457 A (128 A): Εἶτα πόρρω προϊόντος τοῦ πότου. ἄμλλαι περὶ τοῦ πλείονος, φιλονεικίαι καὶ ἀγωνίσματα, ἀλλήλους ὑπερβάλλεσθαι φιλοτιμουμένων κατὰ τὴν μέθην. On potus, cf. Sect. 34, n. 10. praecellare is Poetic, Silver, and Late Latin.

15. contentius: this adv. is rare, being cited for Cicero (three times); Gellius (twice); and for Apuleius (once). To these citations in the T. L. L. (IV 670, 70-76), add the present instance.

16. ad mensas . . . secundas: for this phrase, meaning "the dessert", at which much wine was served, cf. Cic. Att. 14, 6, 2; ibid. 12, 21, 4; Verg. georg. 2, 101; Hor. sat. 2, 2, 121; Cels. 1, 2; Plin. nat. 9, 35, 58; ibid. 19, 8, 53; Lampr. Hel. 21, 1: ad secundam et tertiam mensam. Cf. also Blümner, 400.

SECTION 48.

1. ubi consummatae fuerint epulae, putes iam esse surgendum . . .: Ambrose is following Bas. 460 A (128 C): ὅταν δὲ νομισθῶσι διακορεῖς εἶναι τοῦ οἴνου, τότε τοῦ πίνειν ἄρχονται. On the mood and tense of fuerint, cf. Introduction, p. 42.

2. de integro potum instaurant: for a similar expression, cf. Verg. Aen. 7, 146: certatim instaurant epulas.

3. fialae: in this sense of "a broad, shallow drinking vessel", "saucer", cited in the lexica for Silver and Late Latin. On the use of fialae as drinking vessels, cf. Blümner 405. Cf. also Sect. 54.

4. tunc maximi crateres quasi instrumenta bellorum: crater is cited for Cicero but is mostly Poetic in Classical Latin. For instances of the phrase, instrumenta bellorum, cf. T. L. L. II 1844, 1-3. The present passage is the only one listed from Ambrose. To this last add Ambr. Nab. 14, 62 noted by McGuire (206).

5. certatur sub iudice, sub lege decernitur: with these expressions, cf. Hor. ars. 78: grammatici certant et adhuc sub iudice lis est.

6. agonithetes illis furor est, . . . victoriae praemium culpa: Ambrose is following Basil. Cf. Bas. 457 A (128 A): καὶ ὁ ἀγωνοθετῶν αὐτοῖς ὁ διάβολος, καὶ ἄθλον τῆς νίκης ἡ ἁμαρτία. For the history of the office and function of the agonithetes, cf. Pauly-Wissowa, Vol. I, pp. 870-881. The word agonithetes appears only in Late Latin. Cf. T. L. L. I 1414, 76-84; 1415, 1-31. It is used here obviously under the influence of the Greek.

7. anceps . . . dubius belli eventus: for a similar expression, cf. Cic. rep. 2, 13: proelii certamen varium atque anceps. The phrase, belli eventus is cited in Class. Latin for Caes. Gall. 6, 42, 1; id. civ. 1, 53; ibid. 2, 32, 10.

8. proeliaris: cf. Sect. 46, n. 13.
9. pincernarum: cf. Sect. 25, n. 3.
10. calida: as a subst. = aqua calida, cited once for Cato; otherwise Silver and Late. Cf. T. L. L. III 151, 75-82.
11. supereffluentes: Late Latin, being cited in the lexica for Ambrose, Claud.-Mam., Paul.-Nol., Inscriptions, and the Vulgate.
12. examine: as here, in the sense of "balance", cited only for Vergil, Pliny, Vitruvius, Suetonius, and Late Latin.

SECTION 49.

1. si quis . . . viderit, arma convertit: on the tense and mood of viderit, cf. Introduction, p. 42. For the phrase, arma convertere, cf. Cic. Deiot. 18: omnium in se gentium . . . arma convertisset; Veg. mil. 3, 21: cum hostes victi . . . arma converterint.
2. scammate: this word, borrowed from the Greek, is Late Latin.
3. manum levat: in this literal sense of "raise", levare seems to have been used first by Livy. Cf. K.-Schm. s. v. levare. The phrase, manum levare is frequent in Eccl. Latin, appearing about 30 times in the Vulgate.
4. exors . . . palmae: as here, in the sense of "deprived of" with the Gen., exors is cited first for Vergil. Cf. St. Schm. 405; K.-Steg. II 1, 440.
5. inmunis iniuriae: with the Gen., inmunis appears in Cicero Verr. 5, 58 and Vergil Aen. 12, 559, otherwise in Silver and Late writers. Cf. K.-Steg. II 1, 440.
6. ori eius infunditur: infundere with the Dat. for in or ad with the Acc. to express end of motion, is Silver and Late Latin, being cited first for Seneca. Cf. Georges s. v.
7. ebrii iacent plerique sopiti: for the force of sopiti here, cf. Liv. 8, 16, 10: ut vino epulisque sopitos hostes adgrederetur.
8. de omnibus se vindicatum: se vindicare with de is cited first for Pliny and Florus. Cf. Georges s. v.

9. dispendium: cf. Sect. 19, n. 6.

10. qui autem damna non sentit: for the same phrase, cf. Pompon. dig. 50, 17, 203: quod quis ex culpa sua damnum sentit.

11. ex ea vulnerati omnes ac saucii tamquam de harena exeant: for a somewhat similar thought, cf. Cic. Verr. 5, 28: ut alius inter manus e convivio tamquam e proelio auferretur, alius. . . .

SECTION 50.

1. spectaculum triste Christianorum oculis . . . : throughout this Section, Ambrose is following Bas. 457 B (128 B): ἐλεεινὸν θέαμα χριστιανῶν ὀφθαλμοῖς· ἀνὴρ ἀκμάζων καθ' ἡλικίαν, σφριγῶν τῷ σώματι, στρατιωτικοῖς καταλόγοις ἐμπρέπων, φοράδην οἴκαδε κομιζόμενος, μὴ δυνάμενος ὀρθοῦσθαι, μηδὲ τοῖς ἰδίοις ποσὶν ἀπιέναι· ἀνὴρ φοβερός εἶναι ὀφείλων τοῖς πολεμίοις, γέλωτός ἐστιν ἀφορμὴ τοῖς κατ' ἀγορὰν παιδίοις· ἄνευ σιδήρου καταβέβληται, ἄνευ πολεμίων πεφόνευνται

2. terribilis visu: for the same phrase, cf. Verg. Aen. 6, 277: terribilis visu formae.

3. si . . . fuerit: on the mood and tense of fuerit, cf. Introduction, p. 42.

4. ut erubescat surgere: the infinitive with erubescere is found first in Vergil and then in prose from Livy on. Cf. St.-Schm. 582.

5. anhelare . . . gemere, sudare, . . . prodere: note the historical infinitives and the effective use of asyndeton. On the use of anhelare, cf. Sect. 24, n. 4.

6. enarrat: cited for Cic. inv. 1, 28; id. div. 1, 55; id. Marcell. 4; otherwise Early and Silver Latin.

7. vino madidi: for the phrase, cf. Lucan 10, 396: plenum epulis madidumque mero; cf. also Sect. 25, n. 6.

8. somno soluti: for the same expression, cf. Cic. Tusc. 5, 26: ego somno solutus sum; Verg. Aen., 9, 236: somno vinoque solutos; Ov. met. 10, 369: curasque et corpora somnus solverat; Sen. Ag. 76: non solvit pectora somnus.

9. viri proeliatores: the noun proelior is Silver (rare), and Late Latin. In an adjectival sense, as here, it is cited as an attributive with miles for Apul. flor. 16 p. 20, 19; Amm. 19, 7, 8 and 23, 5, 24; with vir, for Vulg. Is. 42, 13: sicut vir proelior suscitabit zelum. Cf. Georges s. v.

10. servuli: = serri. this use of the diminutive as the equivalent of the normal form owes its frequency in many instances in Late Latin to the loss of the real diminutive meaning. servulus = servus is common in Ambrose.

11. militem bellatorem: the adjectival use of bellator, as here, is cited for Bell. Hisp. 25, 5; Verg. 9, 718; Stat. Theb. 4, 356, and Late Latin (chiefly Eccl.). Cf. T. L. L. II 1806, 71 ff. The present passage is cited. Cf. 1807, 9. Cf. also the phrase viri proeliores above.

12. itaque hac atque illac tamquam navigia sine gubernatore fluctuant: the comparison is taken from Bas. 460 C (129 B): ποῖον δὲ πλοῖον ἀκυβέρνητον, ὑπὸ τῶν κυμάτων, ὡς ἂν τύχη, φερόμενον, οὐκ ἀσφαλέστερόν ἐστι τοῦ μεθύοντος. For the phrase hac atque illac, cf. Ter. Eun. 1, 2, 25: plenus rimorum sum: hac atque illac perfluo; Tac. agr. 28: mox hac atque illac rapti.

13. in terram defluunt: for the phrase, cf. Verg. Aen. 11, 501: quam tota cohors imitata relictis ad terram defluxit equis; Curt. 7, 7, 36: corpus ex equo defluxit in terram.

14. nisi excipiantur: on the mood here, cf. Introduction, p. 42.

15. referuntur in scutis: for further allusions to this custom, cf. Verg. Aen. 10, 506: Impositum scuto referunt Pallanta frequentes; Auson. Epig. 44 (ed. Peiper, p. 329): Mater Lacaena clypeo obarmans filium, Cum hoc, inquit, aut in hoc redi.

16. vultu minaces: cf. Lucan 7, 290: quod si . . . conspicio faciesque truces oculosque minaces; Tac. hist. 4, 84: minax facies.

17. a puerulis impune rideri . . .: note that Ambrose continues to follow Bas. 457 B (128 B) quoted above under n. 1.

18. sine pugna interfectos, sine hoste turbatos, sine senectute tremulos: note the parallelism and asyndeton. Cf. Liv. 9, 5, 10; sine vulnere, sine ferro, sine acie victos. Cf. also Basil l. c.

19. in ipso iuventatis flore marcentes: this metaphorical use of flos, in the sense of "flower", "crown", "glory", is common in Classical writers. Cf. Cic. Phil. 2, 15, 57: flos nobilitatis ac iuventatis. For further instances, cf. T. L. L. VI 934, 60-84; 935, 1-74. marcentes is Poetic and Silver Latin.

SECTION 51.

1. quis tale miscuit furoris poculum: St. Ambrose is following St. Basil throughout this Section. Cf. Bas. 457 C (128 C): τίς ὁ τῶν κακῶν τούτων αἷτιος; τίς ὁ τὸ τῆς μανίας ἡμῖν φάρμακον ἐγκεράσας. Note that furoris poculum is a literal translation of the Greek. For this Latin phrase, itself, cf. Plaut. Truc. 43: poculum amoris; Hor. epod. 17, 80: desiderique temperare pocula.

2. infudit mentibus: on the use of infundere with the Dat., cf. Sect. 49, n. 6.

3. periclitatur homo lutum esse de corpore: cf. Bas. 456 A (127 A): κινδυνεύεις λοιπὸν βόρβορος εἶναι ἀντὶ ἀνθρώπου. periclitari with the Inf. is Silver Latin, being cited only for Quintilian and Pliny. Cf. Georges II 1600 B, a.

4. spontaneae: a Late Latin equivalent of the Classical voluntarius. Cf. K.-Schm. s. v. Georges notes that the citation of the word for Seneca is based on a false reading.

5. inebriat . . . reddit . . . si contigerit: on the tense and mood of contigerit, cf. Introduction, p. 42.

6. asperiores: as used here, in the sense of "savage" with reference to animals, asper is Early, Poetic, and Late. Cf. T. L. L. II 814, 24-45.

7. vindemiae: cited for Varro, but otherwise, Early, Poetic, Silver, and Late.

8. rogas . . . cogis . . . invitas . . . efferre: note the ellipsis of the object amicos to be supplied from above. This kind of ellipsis is very common in Ambrose.

9. invitas ad prandium: note here especially the similarity to

Bas. 460 A (128 C) : καὶ καλεῖς μὲν ὡς φίλον ἐπὶ τὸ δεῖπνον, ἐκβάλλεις δὲ νεκρόν, οὔτω τὴν ζωὴν αὐτοῦ κατασβέσας.

10. tollit sensus, viscera exurit, somnum infestat, caput vexat: for the thought here, cf. Bas. 455 B (126 D) : κερηβαροῦσι γὰρ ἐκ τῆς κραιπάλης, νυστάζουσι, χασμῶνται, ἀχλὺν βλέπονσι, ναυτιῶσι. infestare appears in Bell. Alex. 3, 1, and in Ov. met. 13, 730; otherwise, it is Silver and Late Latin in prose and poetry.

SECTION 52.

1. etiam maior vis vini quam veneni est: the expression vis veneni is already frequent in Class. Latin. Cf. e. g., Cic. Cael. 24, 58. Cf. also, Sect. 18, n. 8. On the power of wine, cf. Lucr. 3, 476:

Denique cur, hominem cum vini vis penetravit
Acris et in venas discessit diditus ardor, Consequitur gravitas membrorum, praepediuntur
Crura vacillanti, tardescit lingua, madet mens,
Nant oculi, clamor singultus iurgia gliscunt,
Et iam cetera de genere hoc quaecumque sequuntur,
Cur ea sunt, nisi quod vemens violentia vini
Conturbare animam consuevit corpore in ipso?

2. Deut. 32, 33. The Old Version has eorum for illorum, otherwise the same as Ambrose; the Greek is the same; the Vulgate reads: Fel draconum vinum eorum, et venenum aspidum insanabile.

3. et pulcre: the use of pulchre in the sense of "well", "splendidly", "finely", as applied to Scriptural utterances is very common in Ambrose. Cf. McGuire's note on Ambr. Nab. 14, 61 (p. 203). For this use of pulchre in Classical Latin, cf. K.-Schm. s. v.

4. mentis . . . crimen: cf. Cic. Att. 9, 2^a, 2: ingrati animi crimen horreo; Hor. sat. 2, 3, 278: an commotae crimine mentis absolves hominem et sceleris damnabis eum. Cf. T. L. L. IV 1191, 77; ibid. 1192, 20.

5. adverte . . . declaratum: the use of advertere with the

Acc. and Inf. is cited for Livy and Pliny, and then for Late writers. Cf. T. L. L. I 863, 49-66. Cf. also Sect. 24, n. 5.

6. perfidiae: cf. Sect. 41, n. 5.

7. alienigenis: frequent in Classical Latin, especially in Cicero in the sense of "foreigner", "stranger". As used here, in the sense of the "gentiles", the word is confined to Scripture and Eccl. writers; cf. T. L. L. II 1560, 40 ff.

8. nescirent deum: for the allusion, cf. Deut. 32, 28-29. The phrase nescire Deum is Scriptural. Cf. e. g., Judith 8, 19: deum nescimus.

9. Deut. 32, 32. Ambrose differs slightly from the Old Version which has: Ex vinea enim Sodomorum, vitis eorum, et propago eorum ex Gomorra: uva eorum uva fellis, botrus amaritudinis ipsis. The Greek has κληματίς for propago, otherwise the same; the Vulgate is somewhat different.

SECTION 53.

1. vino crapulatum: for the same phrase, cf. Ambr. fid. 1, 20, 156: vino tuo crapulatus; id. epist. 55, 2: crapulatus a vino; Cassian. inst. 8, 3: crapulatur vino; Vulg. Psalm. 77. 65: tamquam potens crapulatus a vino. For further citations, cf. T. L. L. IV 1098, 63-79. crapulatus is Eccl. Latin.

2. praedicationi . . . miscuisse: miscere with the Dat. appears as early as Ennius. Cf. St. Schm. 429. Livy however is the first to employ this construction in Prose. Cf. K.-Steg. II 1, 318. In the sense of "preaching", as here, praedicatio is confined to Eccl. Latin.

3. quid in libro sermonum Esaiæ scriptum est: the phraseology is Scriptural. Cf. Luc. 3, 4: sicut scriptum est in libro sermonum Isaiae prophetae.

4. Is. 5, 11 ff. Sabatier quotes this passage with a few variations as the source for the Old Versions reading: Vae iis, qui consurgunt mane, et sectantur siceram, qui ebrii sunt vesperi: nam vinum eos comburet. Cum cithara enim et psalterio, et tympanis vinum bibunt: opera autem Domini non respiciunt, et opera manuum eius non considerant. The Vulgate differs considerably. Ambrose's development of this text in part follows that of Bas. 456 A (127 B).

5. Prov. 23, 29. Sabatier cites this passage from Ambrose as the source for his Old Version reading. The Greek is practically the same, but the Vulgate is somewhat different.

6. vae . . . his qui ebrii sunt: these words should have been italicized by Schenkl as they are repeated from the quotation above.

7. quid . . . illis: there is an ellipsis of some form of sum here, e. g. est or futurum est. Hence illis is best taken as an instrumental ablative. On the history of this colloquial use of the instrumental ablative, cf. St. Schm. 434-435.

8. qui . . . frequenter in lucem madent: with the thought and form of expression here, cf. Plaut. Men. 175: usque ad diurnam stellam crastinam potabimus; Suet. Claud. 52: in primam lucem convivia protrahere.

9. vae: the use of vae as a substantive, as here, is confined to Eccl. Latin. Cf. Tert. adv. Marc. 4, 27: erga quem delinquentes vae essent habituri; Vulg. Apoc. 9, 12: vae unum abiit et ecce veniunt adhuc duo vae post haec. Cf. Georges s. v.

10. conserunt lites: for the phrase, cf. Quint. decl. 296, p. 169, 1: intra fines a fratre ad cenam vocatus cum parasito fratris litem, fratre iam dormiente, conseruit et a parasito clamante "exul tace" ex lege interfectus est.

11. in caedem prosiliunt: for similar phrases, cf. Liv. 5, 2, 2: in contionem prosiliunt; Iust. 24, 88: omnes certatim in proelium prosiliunt.

12. veniunt ad iudicia vel vocantur: venire ad iudicium, and vocare (ad iudicium) are technical phrases from the language of the law. Cicero employs them frequently—the second, however, only in the form vocare in iudicium, not ad iudicium. Cf. Merguet II pp. 631, 804.

13. 3 Esdr. 3, 21 ff. This quotation from Esdras follows rather closely the Old Version as given by Sabatier. The Old Version differs considerably from the Vulgate. For verses 21 ff. the Old Version has: et omnia corda facit honesta, et obliviscitur regem et principem, et omnem hominem sine litteris facit eloquentem. Cum autem bibunt, non meminerunt tenere amicitiam inter amicos et fratres; et continuo eiiciunt gladios. Et cum digesserint vinum, et surrexerint, nesciunt quid fecerint. It should be noted that the passage from sed to gesserint, with the exception of the words post tumultum, is Biblical, and should have been italicized by Schenkl.

SECTION 54.

1. praeterieram . . . citharam psalteria tympana, quae cognovimus conviviis huiuscemodi frequenter adhiberi: a Scriptural echo. Cf. Is. 5, 12: cithara, et lyra, et tympanum, et tibia, et vinum in conviviis vestris.

2. Persico more: on the licentious character of many features of the convivia, cf. Blümner, 410 ff.

3. temulentorum consortio: for temulentus, cf. Sect. 43, n. 12. consortium in this sense of "fellowship", "society", appears first in Livy and then with greater frequency in later writers. Cf. T. L. L. IV 488, 20 ff.

4. sacratae: as an adjective, Poetic, Silver, and Late.

5. observationis: as used here in the sense of "divine observance", cited in Georges only for Val. Max., and Cod. Theod.

6. ministerium: cited for Plautus; otherwise Poetic, Silver, and Late.

7. nec solum . . . sed et: the use of et in such combinations begins with Liv. 27, 4, 7: non modo . . . sed et. Cf. St.-Schm. 661 and 685. The present combination non solum . . . sed et seems to have been used first by Colum. 1, 9, 4. Cf. K.-Steg. II 2, 59.

8. Hebraei omnem potum qui inebriat sicerae nomine vocant: Ambrose has taken over Basil almost literally. Cf. Bas. 456 B (127 B): σίκερα πᾶν τὸ δυνάμενον μέθην ἐμποιῆσαι πόμα τοῖς Ἑβραίοις ἀνομάζειν σίγητες. Cf. Lev. 10, 9 (Old Version): vinum, et siceram non bibetis. The Vulgate reads, however: vinum, et omne quod inebriare potest. For a full discussion of the word sicera, cf. Hier. epist. 52, n. 1: sicera Hebraeo sermone omnis potio nuncupatur, quae inebriare potest, sive illa, quae e frumento conficitur, sive a pomorum succo, aut cum favi decoquuntur in dulcem et barbaram potionem, aut palmarum fructus exprimuntur in liquorum, coctisque frugibus aqua pinguior colatur.

SECTION 55.

1. non inmerito: the adverb inmerito is cited once for Cicero, but otherwise is Poetic and especially Silver Latin. It is particularly common, as here, with a negative.

2. qui mane ebrietatis potum requirunt: here Ambrose is following Bas. 460 B (129 A) where the latter develops Is. 5, 11. Cf. also Sect. 53, n. 4 above. potum ebrietatis: for a similar expression, cf. Sect. 51, n. 1.

3. praevenire: with an Acc., as here, cited for Sall. Jug. 71, 5; otherwise, for Livy and later writers. Cf. K.-Schm. s. v.

4. oratione: in this sense of "prayer", Eccl. Latin.

5. sol iustitiae: a form of autonomasia for God borrowed from the Bible. Cf. Vulg. Mal. 4, 2: oriatur vobis timentibus nomen meum sol iustitiae.

6. vino et sicerae surgamus: on the use of the Dat. here, cf. Introduction, p. 28. surgamus is an echo of Is. 5, 11 quoted in Sect. 53.

7. piis hymni dicuntur: cf. Bas. 460 D (129 C). For a similar expression, cf. Psalm 64, 14: etenim hymnum dicent. On the use of the Dat. here, cf. Introduction, p. 29. hymnus, from the Greek ῥυμος, is Eccl. Latin. For a full discussion of the word, cf. McGuire 203. The allusion to singing hymns in the Church of Milan is of great importance for establishing the date of the De Helia. Cf. Introduction, pp. 3-4.

8. vix diluculum, et iam cursatur per tabernas: in the development of this thought, Ambrose is following Basil very closely. Cf. Bas. 456 BC (127 BC): οἱ οὖν ἀρχομένης ἡμέρας περισ- κοποῦντες, ποῦ πότοι γίνονται . . . ἀλλ' εὐθὺς ἀρχομένης ἡμέρας, κοσμοῦσιν ἑαυτῶν τὰ συμπόσια τάπησι ποικίλοις καὶ ἀνθίνοις παραπετάσμασι, σπουδῇ τε καὶ ἐπιμέλειαν εἰς τὴν τῶν ἐκπομάτων παρασκευὴν ἐπιδείκνυνται. diluculum is cited for Cicero (twice); otherwise for Early, Silver, and Late Latin, being especially frequent in the Vulgate. Cf. T. L. L. V 1187, 47-84; 1188, 1-14. The form cursatur is not given in the T. L. L. or Neue-Wagener. Georges cites such an impersonal use of the verb in the passive only for Ter. Hec. 315: trepidari sentio et cursari rursum.

9. tapetes: Early, Poetic, Silver, and Late. Cf. the Gk. τάπησι above.

10. accubitus festinant sternere, lagynas argenteas auratos calices exponunt: cf. Cic. Mur. 36, 75: stravit pelliculis haedinis lectulos et exposuit vasa Samia. accubitus is cited in the T. L. L. only for Isid. orig. 20, 1, 2; Schol. Iuv. 5, 17; Hier. comm. Ezech. 14, 26 (Migne 25, 464); Lampr. Hel. 19, 9; 25, 2; Itin. Theod. 10; Anton. 17. Cf. T. L. L. I 338, 64-73.

SECTION 56.

1. Jerem. 51, 7-8. The Vulgate has, de vino for a vino, et before ideo, no et before subito, otherwise the same. Throughout this and the two following sections Ambrose, as Klostermann has indicated, in all probability is indebted to one of the Homilies of Origen on Jeremias for the development of his thought. Cf. the Introduction, p. 8, for full bibliographical references. In indicating the parallels here I shall follow Klostermann closely.

2. calix ergo aureus contritus est, quia Babylon contrita est, quae est calix aureus: cf. Orig. Hom. in Jer. 21, 7: Videamus et cetera: Calix aureus Babylon in manu Dei inebrians omnem terram. De vino eius biberunt gentes, propter hoc commotae sunt gentes, et subito cecidit Babylon, et contrita est. (Jer. 51, 7, 8.)

3. pretio: in this sense of "wealth", Poetic in Classical Latin.

4. in . . . potestate: note the striking hyperbaton.

5. qua ratione calix aureus . . . ut species saltem pretiosa ad bibendum aliquos possit inlicere: cf. Origen: Nabuchodonosor volens decipere homines, per calicem Babylonis dolosum, non mis- cuit in vase fictili . . . verum eligens vas aureum, in eo poculum temperavit, ut quis videns decorem auri, dum radiantis metalli pulchritudine delectatur, et totus oculis haeret in specie, non consideret quid intrinsecus latitet, et accipiens calicem, bibat nesciens calicem Nabuchodonosor. . . .

SECTION 57.

1. constitue ante oculos . . . vas apostolicum fictile est, sed in eo thesaurus est Christi: cf. Origen: sed meus Iesus . . . praecavens ne aliquis ad fidem suam veniens suspicaretur etiam Christi talem esse calicem, . . . curavit, ut haberemus thesaurum istum in vasis fictilibus. saepe vidi aureum calicem in pulchro sermonis ornatu, et dogmatum venena considerans, deprendi calicem Babylonis. . . . For a similar employment of the phrase constituere oculos, cf. Quint decl. 305, p. 198, 22: constituit ante oculos spectaculum.

2. non te inducant aurea vasa et argentea: probably a Scriptural echo. Cf. 2 Tim. 2, 20: in magna autem domo non sunt tantum vasa aurea, et argentea, sed et lignea, et fictilia: et quaedam quidem in honorem. quaedam autem in contumeliam. For the thought here, cf. further, Bas. 476 C (127 C). On the use of non for ne in a prohibition, cf. Introduction, p. 22.

3. 2 Cor. 4, 7. This reading varies slightly from the Old Version which has: habemus autem thesaurum hunc in vasis fictilibus. The Vulgate has istum, otherwise the same. Ambrose quotes the same verse in his Abr. 1, 9, 90 thus: habemus thesaurum in vasis fictilibus; and then develops the text as follows: vasa fictilia corpora nostra sunt: fides nostra thesaurus est. et fortasse iam etiam ipsa corpora nostra quae thesaurum istum habent, aurea sunt, quia sunt plena prudentiae: et argentea vasa sunt, quae videntur mandati caelestis alloquiis refulgere.

4. vas apostolicum: this rather remarkable phrase is not cited in the T. L. L. s. v. apostolicus. For a somewhat similar expression, cf. Tert. pudic. 12: instrumento apostolico.

5. vae siceram mane sectantes: for the allusion, cf. Is. 5, 11 quoted in Sect. 53.

6. venenum mortis, venenum libidinis venenum, ebrietatis: for similar phrases, cf. Sil. 7, 260: fraudis veneno; id. 11, 550-551: atra veneno Invidiae nigroque undantia pectora felle; id. 3, 580: blandoque veneno Desidia virtus paullatim evicta senescit.

7. qui biberit, commovetur et cadit. commovetur . . . commoveri enim peccati est: cf. Origen: similiter est videre eos, qui de calice aureo biberint Babylonis, quomodo moveantur, quomodo instabiles gressu sint, quomodo debilitata mente et fluctuante cogitatu nihil firme teneant, sed semper in turbationibus agantur incerti. . . . Ambrose undoubtedly employs commovetur and cadit under the influence of the Biblical quotation in Sect. 56. On the mood and tense of biberit, cf. Introduction, p. 42.

SECTION 58.

1. Cain exiens a conspectu dei habitavit in terra Naid, quod interpretatione significat commotionem: cf. Origen: interponamus aliquid mysterii, quid de peccatore dicatur Cain. Cum egressus est a facie Dei, habitavit in terra Naid, contra Edem. Naid in Graeca lingua interpretatur commotio. The words habitavit in terra Naid should have been italicised by Schenkl, as they are taken directly from the Old Version (Gen. 4, 16). Philo gives the same interpretation of Naid also in his de Cherubim 4 (I 440, 44 Mangey; I 172, 25 Cohn-Wendland): ἐρμηνεύεται δὲ Ναὶδ μὲν σάλος. . . . However, as I have stated in the Introduction (p. 8), it seems certain that Ambrose is indebted directly to Origen for his interpretation in the present case at least.

2. ergo qui calice aureo inebriatur peccato movetur. quid te sub maledicto . . . ut tremas atque movearis: cf. Origen: qui enim derelinquit Deum, qui deserit sensum de eo iugiter cogitandi, iste in terra Naid hodieque habitat, id est, in tribulatione mali cordis, et mentis commotione consistit. For the Scriptural allusions here, cf. Gen. 4, 14. Cf. further Bas. 453 D, 456 A (127 A): τί τὴν κατάραν τοῦ Κάϊν ἐφ' ἑαυτὸν ἐπισπάσαι, τρέμων καὶ περιφερόμενος διὰ παντὸς τοῦ βιοῦ.

3. persecutores domini transeuntes movebant capita sua: for the allusion, cf. Marc. 15, 29: Et praetereuntes blasphemabant eum, moventes capita sua. . . . In the sense of "persecutor", as here, persecutor is Eccl. Latin.

4. spiritus nequam: in the sense of "a spirit", as here, spiritus is Eccl. Latin. With the present phrase, cf. Lact. 4, 27, 12: nocens ille spiritus; Sedul. carm. 3, 41: spiritus nigri. Cf. Georges and B.-G. s. v. On further names for Satan in Ambrose, cf. Sect. 1, n. 16.

5. cum defuerit . . . desinit: on the mood and tense of defuerit, cf. Introduction, p. 42.

6. sudant vinum corpora temulentorum: for the thought, cf. Bas. 422 A (125 D).

SECTION 59.

1. fomentum libidinis: this figurative use of fomentum in the sense of "kindling wood", is cited in Class. Prose only for Cic. Tusc. 2, 59, id. 2, 95: otherwise it is Poetic, Silver, and Late. Cf. T. L. L. VI 1019, 36-62.

2. incentivum: cf. Sect. 1, n. 5.

3. insipientiae: cf. Sect. 28, n. 5.

4. haec sensus hominum mutat et formas: for the development of the same thought, cf. Bas. 448 CD, 449 C, cf. 181 A (124 BC, 125 AB, cf. 9 A).

5. per hanc fiunt ex hominibus equi adhinnientes: for the allusion, cf. Jerem. 5, 8. adhinnientes is cited for Plautus, Cicero, Ovid, Pliny, Apuleius, Arnobius, Prudentius, Jerome, Augustine, and Ambrose. Cf. T. L. L. I 650, 76-84; 651, 1-14. For citations from Ambrose, cf. T. L. L. I 651, 5-6, and especially, McGuire 222.

6. naturali vapore corporis: for a similar expression, cf. Aug. civ. 9, 16, 1: vivorum corporum vapores humanorum.

7. bestiales: Late Latin. Cf. T. L. L. 1940, 47-70.

8. ut nullum tempus praescriptum . . . : Ambrose's development of this thought is somewhat similar to that of Bas. 448 C (124 B). Cf. also, Xen. Comm. 1, 4, 12 (cited by Schenkl): τὸ δὲ καὶ τὰς τῶν ἀφροδισίων ἡδονὰς τοῖς μὲν ἄλλοις ζῴας δοῦναι περιγράφαντας τοῦ ἐποὺς χρόνον, ἡμῖν δὲ συνεχῶς μέχρι γήρως ταῦτα παρέχειν.

Cf. also Ambr. hex. 5, 10, 30: omnes animantes praescripta habent pariendi tempora, homo solus indiscreta atque confusa. It seems reasonable to hold with Schenkl (cf. Introduction, p. 8) that Ambrose had a first-hand acquaintance with Xenophon.

9. sensu excidunt: for a similar use of excidere in this sense of "lose control of one's self through drink", cf. Sen. dial. 5, 14, 1: ut scias quemadmodum numquam excidam mihi.

10. frenesis: this word, borrowed from the Greek, appears in Latin first in Seneca.

11. calculi . . . poena: in this sense of "gall stones", calculus is cited for Cicero and Vitruvius; otherwise for Silver and Late writers. Cf. T. L. L. III 144, 3-29. poena in this sense of "affliction" (sickness), appears first in Silver Latin.

12. hinc exitialis cruditas: cf. Sect. 22, where Ambrose points out that through fasting all such mental and bodily ills are avoided. exitialis is cited for Cicero (once), and for Vergil (twice); otherwise for Silver and Late writers.

13. vomitus: Early, Silver, and Late Latin.

14. semesas epulas: for the phrase, cf. Verg. Aen. 3, 244: (harpyiae) semesas praedam et vestigia foeda relinquunt. semesus is cited in the lexica only for Pacuv. apud. Cic. Tusc. 1, 106, Vergil, Horace, Ovid, Seneca rhet., Juvenal, Petronius, Suetonius, and Florus.

15. internorum: this adjective is cited for, Sall. Hist. frg. 4, 61, 13, and Ovid; otherwise it is Silver and Late.

16. mentior, nisi: the employment of mentior nisi as a form of asseveration is cited for Ovid, Seneca, Tertullian, and Symmachus. On the other hand, the similar use of si mentior occurs in Cicero. Cf. Georges s. v. mentior. For a further instance of mentior nisi in Ambrose, cf. Cain et Ab. 1, 3, 10: mentior nisi hoc in universis comprobatur.

17. locutus esticens: Scriptural. Cf. Deut. 1, 6: Dominus Deus noster locutus est ad nos in Horeb, dicens.

18. Jerem. 25, 27. Ambrose follows the Old Version; the Greek and Vulgate are practically the same.

SECTION 60.

1. hinc etiam vanae imagines, incerti visus, instabilis gressus: this entire Section is a close imitation of Bas. 449 AB (124 CD): οὐ τὰς σκιὰς διαπηδῶσι πολλάκις ὡς ὀχετοὺς ἢ φάραγγας; ἤχων δὲ αὐτοῖς καὶ ψόφων, οἷονεὶ θαλάσσης κυμαίνουσας, τὰ ὦτα πεπλήρωται· ἡ δὲ γῆ πρὸς τὸ ὄρθιον διανίστασθαι δοκεῖ, καὶ τὰ ὄρη περιτρέχειν ἐν κύκλῳ. οὗτοι ποτὲ μὲν γελῶσιν ἅπαντα· ποτὲ δὲ ὀδυνῶνται καὶ κλαίουσιν ἀπαρηγόρητα. καὶ νῦν μὲν θρασεῖς εἰσι καὶ ἀπτόητοι· νῦν δὲ κατάφοβοι καὶ δειλοί. τοῦτοις ὕπνοι μὲν βαρεῖς καὶ δυσανάφοροι καὶ πιγώδεις, καὶ τῷ ὄντι θανάτου γείτονες· αἱ δὲ γρηγορήσεις τῶν ὕπνων ἀναισθητότεραι. ἐνύπνιον γὰρ αὐτοῖς ἐστὶν ὁ βίος. For the phrase, vanae imagines, cf. Liv. 3, 16, 5: non bellum sed vanam imaginem belli insedis; Hor. carm. 1, 24, 15: num vanae redeat sanguis imagini. In this sense of "apparition", imago is cited in prose only for Livy before Silver Latin. The use of visus in the sense of "sight", "vision", as here, is cited for Cic. frg. apud Plin. nat. 7, 18; Lucr. 5, 101; and then for Pliny, Quintilian and later writers. For the phrase, instabilis gressus, cf. Lucan 5, 556: instabili gressu. instabilis in its literal sense, of "tottering", as here, is Poetic, Silver, and Late Latin. On gressus, cf. Sect. 35, n. 6.

2. transiliunt: in its literal sense, as here, first used in prose in the Bell. Hisp. and Livy.

3. nutat his terra, subito erigi et inclinari videtur: for the mode of expression here, cf. Lucr. 6, 572: terra inclinatur retroque recellit; id. 5, 1236: sub pedibus tellus cum tota vacillat. In this sense of "to sway", nutare is Poetic before Silver Latin.

4. concurrentibus montibus: for the phrase, cf. Verg. Aen. 8, 692: montes concurrere montibus altos.

5. maris fluctuantis fragor et resonantia fluctu litora: in this sense of "crashing" fragor is cited in prose only for Cic. rep. 2, 6, before the Silver and Late Latin. Cf. T. L. L. VI 1233, 58-84; 1234, 1-69. For similar expressions, cf. Verg. Aen. 1, 154: fragor pelagi; id. georg. 3, 338: litoraue alcyonem resonant, id. ecl. 5, 83: percussa fluctu litora; Sil. 11, 491: resonantia litora.

6. si viderint . . . arbitrantur . . . : on this type of condition, cf. Introduction, p. 42.

7. risu solvuntur: on this phrase, cf. Sect. 35, n. 11.

8. inconsolabili: cited in the lexica only for Ov. met. 5, 426; Amm. 29, 2, 14; Heges. 2, 9, 213; Hier. in eccles. 4; and the present passage.

9. inrationabilis: Late Latin. The lexica cite no instances from Ambrose. For additional instances from his works, cf. Iac. 1, 7, 28; in psalm 118 serm. 6, 37; ibid. serm. 6, 12; Cain et Ab. 1, 7, 24; ibid. 1, 7, 27; ibid. 2, 1, 4; ibid. 2, 6, 20; ibid. 2, 10, 34; and the following noted by Barry (87): off. 1, 3, 11; virg. 3, 3, 14; virginit. 15, 95; inst. virg. 3, 20.

10. vigilantes somniant: for the same phrase, cf. Plaut. Capt. 848: hic vigilans somniat; id. Amph. 697: quaeene vigilans somniat?; id. Pseud. 386: non qui vigilans dormiat.

11. vita his somnium est: taken literally from Basil. Cf. n. 1 above.

12. quantolibet: cited first for Livy. Cf. Georges s. v.

13. nisi resipierint . . . possunt: on this type of condition, cf. Introduction, p. 42.

SECTION 61.

1. superfluam creaturam: on the use of superfluous, cf. Sect. 35, n. 14. For creatura, cf. Sect. 10, n. 10.

2. quid est enim homo ebrius nisi creatura superflua: for a somewhat similar thought, cf. Bas. 457 B (128 B): τί γὰρ ἄλλο εἶσιν οἱ μεθύοντες, ἢ τὰ εἶδωλα τῶν ἐθνῶν.

3. Jerem. 48, 32. Sabatier cites this passage as the source for the Old Version reading, but has vinea for vitis. The words quia deserta est civitas Iazer, should have been italicized by Schenkl as they are quoted directly. The Greek and Vulgate are somewhat different.

4. Jerem. 48, 33. Ambrose follows the Greek closely. The Old Version does not have erat, otherwise the same; the Vulgate reads: et vinum torcularibus sustuli: nequaquam calcator uvae solitum celeuma cantabit.

5. Iazer πόλεις περισσός: this is the ordinary interpretation of Iazer given in the Onomastica sacra. Cf. Lagarde, Onomastica sacra, p. 167. It seems very probable that Ambrose, apart from whatever interpretations he may have borrowed from Philo and Origen, also had at hand some Greek Onomasticon. This subject is thoroughly treated by Wilbrand who argues definitely in favor of the view that Ambrose actually used such a work. Cf. Wilbrand, S. Ambrosius quos auctores quaeque exemplaria in epistulis componendis secutus sit, pp. 38-41 (De Onomastico quo usus est Ambrosius); id. Die Deutungen der bibl. Eigennamen beim h. Ambrosius, in: Biblische Zeitschrift, Vol. X, 1912, pp. 337 ff.

6. factura: in this sense of "creature", "the thing made", Late Latin. Cf. T. L. L. VI 143, 14 ff.

7. moderatio: the word is chiefly Ciceronian.

8. quae fletu prophetico deploratur: cf. Bas. 456 B (127 B): οἱ τοὶ ὑπὸ τοῦ προφήτου καταθρηνοῦνται. On the use of propheticus, cf. Sect. 18, n. 7.

9. Eph. 5, 18. The Old Version and Vulgate have et before nolite, and the latter spiritu sancto; otherwise, the same.

10. est ergo ebrietas culpae, est et gratiae: for a further instance of the same thought, cf. Ambr. Noe 29, 111: ebrietatis itaque species gemina est, una quae titubationem corpori adferat, atque eius supplantet vestigia, sensumque perturbet: altera quae mentem virtutis vaporet gratia, et omnem infirmitatem videatur avertere.

11. quia ad imaginem et similitudinem dei facti: Scriptural. Cf. Gen. 1, 26: Faciamus hominem ad imaginem et similitudinem nostram.

12. spiritu sancto repleti esse: Scriptural. Cf., e. g., Luc. 1, 15: Spiritu sancto replebitur; id. 1, 41: repleta est Spiritu sancto, etc.

SECTION 62.

1. opto salutem imperatorum: it was customary to drink toasts at the banquets of the soldiers which Ambrose has just been describing. As many cyathi were required to be drunk in such toasts as there were letters in the name of the person toasted.

Cf. Marquardt-Mommsen, Handbuch der Römischen Altertümer, Vol. VII (Privatleben der Römer) 2ed. Leipzig 1886, pp. 336-337. In a footnote the present passage, among others, is cited as an example of the custom.

2. indevotionis: in this sense of "irreverence", Georges and B.-G. cite only the present passage.

3. O pia devotionis obsequium: on devotionis cf. Sect. 2, n. 17. On the Gen. here, cf. Introduction, p. 31.

4. illi qui calices ad sepulchra martyrum deferunt atque illic in vesperam bibunt: St. Ambrose is alluding here to an abuse that had arisen in connection with the cult of the martyrs. The feasts held at the tombs of the martyrs gradually lost much of their sacred significance and in many cases degenerated into scandalous orgies of drinking and revelry. St. Ambrose was most vigorous in suppressing this abuse in Italy. Thus St. Augustine tells us in his Confessions 6, 2, that when his Mother Monnica wished to carry out in a quite reverent manner this practice of feasting at the tombs of the martyrs in Milan (in 384 A. D.), she was informed that it was entirely forbidden by St. Ambrose. It seems, however, that the custom, in spite of ecclesiastical censure, died out very slowly in Italy. In Africa the abuse mentioned was far more flagrant and, as we know from St. Augustine's Letters, among other sources, it was only suppressed with the greatest difficulty. On this subject, cf. St. Augustine's Confessions, 6, 2, and Gibb Montgomery's notes on this chapter in their edition of the Confessions, pp. 138-146; and especially the excellent article entitled Origines du culte des martyrs et l'agape, in Cabrol-Leclercq, Dictionnaire d'Archéologie Chrétienne, Vol. I, pp. 816-820; particularly p. 819.

5. exaudire: exaudire applied to prayers, as here, is Poetic in Classical Latin. This use of the word becomes common in Eccl. Latin, and Ambrose uses it here undoubtedly under Scriptural influence. Cf. Psalm. 38, 13: exaudi orationem meam; Par. 32, 24: et oravit dominum; exaudivitque eum.

6. passionem: cf. Sect. 37, n. 6.

SECTION 63.

1. per ebrietatem de imperio suo certant et sibi regna promittunt: for a similar thought, cf. Sect. 50. On the use of per, cf. Introduction, p. 34.

2. unde plerique boni iudices ea quae per ebrietatem dicta essent tenenda ad crimen non putaverunt: this statement is extremely interesting, as it bears testimony to the recognition of mitigating circumstances by the later Roman Jurists—a principle so foreign to the earlier Roman Law. For a somewhat similar thought, cf. Dig. 48, 19, 11, 2.

3. patriae statum, salutem civium: for the phrases, cf. Cic. Cael. 29, 70: quae lex ad imperium, ad maiestatem, ad statum patriae, ad salutem omnium.

4. fidiculis: used by Seneca, Suetonius, Val. Max., and later writers, as here, in the transferred meaning of “cord”, “line”, as an instrument of torture. Cf. T. L. L. VI 694, 31-53.

5. exulceratos: as here, in its literal sense of “wound”, cited in the lexica only for Varro, Seneca, Pliny, Celsus, and Columella.

6. cymbia: cited for Varro frg. Non. p. 545, 21; Verg. Aen. 3, 66; Prop. 3, 8, 4; and then for Silver and Late writers. The present passage is noted. Cf. T. L. L. IV 1589, 42-65.

SECTION 64.

1. quid retexam auditum mihi non poculi: Ambrose is evidently following Basil here. Cf. Bas. 460 A (128 D): διελόμενοι γὰρ τὰς ὑδρορρόας, καὶ τὴν πρὸς ἑαυτὸν ἕκαστος τετραμμένην ὑποδεάμενοι, ὥσπερ ἀπὸ τινος δεξαμενῆς ἀπνευστὶ πίνουσιν ὡς οἱ βόες, τοσοῦτον ὑφέλκειν ἐπειγόμενοι τοῖς λαμοῖς, ὅσον αὐτοῖς ἄνωθεν ὁ ψυκτήρ διὰ τῶν ἀργυρέων ὀχετῶν ἐπαφίησι. In this sense of “drinking”, poculum is chiefly Poetic and Late. Ambrose seems to be referring here to a custom of drinking large quantities of wine without taking breath, similar to that mentioned, e. g., in Hor. carm. 1, 36, 13-14; and Ath. 10, 60. Cf. also Philo, de plantatione 39 (II 165, Cohn-Wendland); and Daremberg-Saglio s. v. amystis.

2. profluvii genus: profluvium is cited for Lucretius in the sense of "flow of blood"; in Silver and Late Prose, it is extended to other substances. The word is very common in Ambrose, especially in a transferred sense. Cf. McGuire 163.

3. canales: in the sense of "pipes", cited only for Verg. georg. 4, 265, before Silver and Late writers. Cf. T. L. L. III 225, 3-22.

4. transfusio: in its literal sense, as here, Silver and Late Latin.

5. cornu: cf. Sect. 46, n. 12.

6. in fauces . . . decurrunt: used of liquids, as here, decurrere is Poetic, Silver, and Late Latin; the employment of the verb in this sense with in and the Acc., is apparently confined to Silver and Late writers. Cf. T. L. L. V 227, 67-84; 228, 1-50.

7. si quis respiraverit . . . soluta acies: for the allusion to this custom, cf. Sect. 62, n. 1 and Sect. 47. On the mood and tense of respiraverit, cf. Introduction, p. 42.

8. loco motus habetur: for the phrase, cf. Ter. Phorm. prol. 32: quom per tumultum noster grex motus locost.

9. aqua decurrens a Libano cautes rupeas solvit: for the allusion, cf. Cant. 4, 15 (Old Version): Fons hortorum: puteus aquae vivae, et impetu descendens a Libano. cautes already occurs in Ennius but remains mostly Poetic throughout the period of Latinity. Cf. T. L. L. III 711, 13 ff. rupeus is not noted by Harper. Georges, B.-G., and For. cite its use only for Ambr. Luc. 2, 75. Add the present instance.

10. vinolentorum: chiefly a Ciceronian word. The lexica cite it otherwise only for Ter. Phorm. 1017; Nep. Alcib. 11, 4. For Ambrose add the present instance.

11. impetus fluentorum: for the same phrase, cf. Ennod. opusc. 1, 46, p. 273, 22: sistebatur impetus fluentorum.

SECTION 65.

1. elefantos quoque ferunt: I have sought in Aristotle, Plutarch, Pliny, Aelian, Philo, and other authors for the source of the narrative here, but I have not been able to find it.

2. promoscide: the form of this word in -moscis, as here, is cited for Late Latin; Varro and writers of Silver Latin employ the form in -boscis. Cf. Georges s. v. proboscis.

3. ad sedendam sitim: the phrase is cited first in Prose for Silver Latin. Cf. Lucr. 4, 850; Ov. met. 3, 415; Phaedr. 4, 4, 1; then Val. Max., Pliny, Suetonius, etc.

4. concavum: as a subst. in the singular, the word is cited for, Plin. nat. 2, 90; ibid. 17, 153; and then for later writers. The usage is relatively rare. Cf. T. L. L. IV 7, 32-44. No instance from Ambrose is cited.

5. non ut ebibant, sed effundant: note the absolute use of these transitive verbs. Cf. Introduction, p. 24. ebibere is Early, Poetic, Silver, and Late.

6. momentariis: cited first for Apuleius.

7. inundationibus: in its literal sense of "an overflowing", "inundation", as here, Silver and Late Latin.

8. inrigare: in the sense of "deluge", "overflow", as here, cited only for Vergil and Livy before Silver and Late Latin.

9. de quo se putaverant vindicandos: on se vindicare de, cf. Sect. 49, n. 8.

10. siccantur ad potum subito lacus . . . natant omnia: note the obvious hyperbole. On the use of ad here, cf. Introduction, p. 33.

SECTION 66.

1. usque ad ebrietatem: for the same phrase, cf. Lact. inst. 2, 13, 5: usque ad ebrietatem.

2. deinde surgentes: Ambrose is imitating Basil closely throughout this and the following Section. Cf. Bas. 445 B C (123 A C): γυναῖκες ἀκόλαστοι, ἐπιλαθόμεναι τοῦ φόβου τοῦ θεοῦ, τοῦ πυρὸς τοῦ αἰωνίου καταφρονήσασαι, ἐν ἡμέρᾳ τοιαύτῃ, ὅτε αὐτὰς ἐχρῆν διὰ τὴν ἀνάμνησιν τῆς ἀναστάσεως καθῆσθαι ἐν τοῖς οἴκοις, . . . ῥίψασαι ἀπὸ τῶν κεφαλῶν τὰ τῆς εὐσχημοσύνης καλύμματα, καταφρονήσασαι τοῦ θεοῦ, καταφρονήσασαι τῶν ἀγγέλων αὐτοῦ, καταναισχνυτήσασαι πάσης ἁρρῆνος ὥψεως, σοβοῦσαι τὰς κόμους, σύρουσαι τοὺς χιτῶνας, καὶ τοῖς ποσὶν ἅμα παίζουσαι, ὀφθαλῶ ἀσελγεί, γέλωτι ἐκκεχυμένῳ πρὸς ὄρχησιν ἐκμανεῖσαι, πᾶσαν νέων ἀκολασίαν ἐφ' ἑαυτὰς προσκαλούμεναι, ἐν τοῖς πρὸ τῆς πόλεως μαρτυρίοις χοροὺς συστησάμεναι, ἐργαστήριον τῆς οἰκείας αὐτῶν ἀσχημοσύνης τοὺς ἡγιασμένους τόπους πεποιήνται. ἐμίαναν μὲν τὸν ἀέρα τοῖς ἄσμασι τοῖς πορνικοῖς, ἐμίαναν δὲ τὴν γῆν τοῖς ἀκαθάρτοις ποσίν, ἣν ἐν ταῖς ὀρχήσεσι κατεκρότησαν, θέατρον ἑαυταῖς νεανίσκων ὄχλον περιιστησάμεναι, σοβάδες ὄντως καὶ παράφοροι παντελῶς, μανίας οὐδεμίαν ὑπερβολὴν ἀπολείπουσαι. ταῦτα πῶς μὲν σιωπήσω; πῶς δὲ κατ' ἀξίῳ δόδῳμαι;

3. secreta: in this sense of "privacy", "seclusion", etc., Poetic, Silver, and Late.

4. vultu procaci: for the same phrase, cf. Prov. 7, 13: et procaci vultu blanditur; cf. also, Tac. hist. 2, 23: procax ore.

5. apostolus mulieres tacere etiam in ecclesia iubet: for the allusion, cf. 1 Cor. 14, 34-35.

6. inverecundos: cited in the lexis only for: Plaut., Hor., Poet. apud Cornif. rhet., Sall. frg., Quint., Suet., Prud., Sen., Paul-dig., Val. Max., Ven. Fort. For Ambrose, add the present instance.

7. choros ducunt: for the phrase, cf. Hor. carm. 1, 4, 5: iam Cythera choros ducit Venus imminente luna; ibid. 4, 7, 6.

8. trahentes tunicas: cf. Ambr. in psalm 118 serm. 1, 5: et itinere pedum trahens tunicas.

9. scissae amictus, nuda lacertos: with the use of the accusatives here, cf. Verg. Aen. 9, 478: mater scissa comam; Ov. met. 8, 527: scissaeque capillos planguntur matres; Verg. Aen. 7, 503: Silvia . . . percussa lacertos; ibid. 8, 425: nudus membra Pyracmon. Cf. Introduction, pp. 26-27.

10. plaudentes manibus: in this sense of "clapping" with the hands (in dancing), plaudere is Poetic and Silver Latin. Cf. Plaut. Cas. 1017: verum qui non manibus clare quantum poterit plauserit.

11. motu histrionico: histrionicus is Late Latin. For the same phrase in Ambrose, cf. his poen. 2, 6, 42: putet nobis saltationis lubricae histrionicos motus, et scaenae deliramenta mandari.

12. dedecoroso: the word is not found before Late Latin, and then only rarely. Cf. T. L. L. V 251, 54-72. It is cited for Ambr. Hel. 21, 79; Tob. 8, 28; Ps. Ambr. mor. Brachm. p. 1145^a; and for the present passage.

13. corona adolescentium: corona, as here, designating "a circle" (of men) was used originally in Classical Latin chiefly in connection with the judicial assemblies, but its meaning became much extended later. Cf. T. L. L. IV 986, 20-77.

14. theatrum: the lexicæ do not cite any instances of the word being used, as here, in the sense of "show", "spectacle". The Greek θέατρον acquires this meaning and perhaps Ambrose uses the word here in this sense under the influence of the Greek. Cf., e. g., Bas. 445 BC (123 C), quoted in note 1 above. Cf. also 1 Cor. 4, 9: ὅτι θέατρον ἐγενήθημεν τῷ κόσμῳ.

15. perobscaenis: the word is not cited in any of the lexicæ. The variant readings are: perobsценis; pro obscenis (pro ex per); obsценis. However, it seems certain that perobscaenis is the correct reading. For similar compounds of per, cf. perobscurus, peroptatus, peropacus, perobrigescere (Rönsch Itala, p. 209).

16. saltatibus: cited in the lexicæ only for Liv. 1, 20; Sen. Tro. 786; Lact. 1, 21; Hier. in Zach. 8, 4; and in the plural, only for Ov. met. 14, 637; Acro Hor. carm. 3, 6, 22; and the present passage. Cf. Georges, Latein. Wortformen, s. v.; Neue-Wagener, Vol. 1, 560.

SECTION 67.

1. patienter loquar, pie praeteream, convenienter defleam: note the effect gained by asyndeton here.

2. vinum et mulieres discedere a deo faciunt: cf. Eccli. 19, 2: Vinum et mulieres apostatare faciunt sapientes. On the use of facere with the Inf., cf. Introduction, p. 37.

3. faciunt, unita: this is Schenkl's conjecture. The passage is evidently corrupt. The Benedictines read: haec faciunt quid faciunt unita.

4. Eccli. 26, 11.

SECTION 68.

1. quid . . . mirum: cf. Sect. 10, n. 9.
2. cum omnes illae tribus patrum: for the allusion, cf. Exod. 16, 13 ff. Throughout this Section, Ambrose is following Bas. 180 B (8 D).
3. ubi vero carnes desiderare coeperunt: for the allusion, cf. Exod. 16, 3. On the use of caro here, cf. Sect. 22, n. 9.
4. desideriis: the use of desideria = concupiscentia is almost entirely Late Latin. Cf. T. L. L. V 699, 1-32.
5. nequaquam ex tot milibus hominum . . . in terram repromissionis . . . : for the allusion, cf. Num. 26, 65. For a similar allusion in Ambrose, cf. in psalm. 118 serm. 21, 20: qui ideo de senioribus terram repromissionis introire meruerunt. The phrase in terram repromissionis is Scriptural. Cf. Hebr. 11, 9: Fide demoratus est in terra repromissionis.
6. colligere datur: the use of the Inf. after the passive forms of dare begins in Vergil, and then passes into Silver and Late Prose and Poetry. Cf. T. L. L. V 1689, 48 ff.
7. quando immurmurabant: the temporal use of quando is found from Plautus on, but seems to have been particularly common in the Vulgar language (cf. the Italian quando; French quand). Thus in Classical Latin, Caesar and Sallust do not use quando as a temporal particle at all, and instances of this use in Cicero are confined chiefly to his earliest writings. While quando is so employed in Vergil, Propertius, Horace, Val. Flaccus, and Quintilian (rarely), it becomes relatively common only in Late Latin. Cf. St.-Schm. 740. immurmurare is Poetic, Silver, and Late.
8. a serpentibus moriebantur: for the allusion, cf. Num. 21, 6.
9. per maris rubri transibant semitam: for the allusion, cf. Num. 14, 25: vertimini in solitudinem per viam maris rubri. Note the striking hyperbaton in per . . . semitam.
10. non igitur veremur exemplum: cf. Bas. 180 B (8 D): οὐ φοβῆν τὸ ὑπόδειγμα; οὐ φρίσσεις τὴν ἀδηφαγίαν, μή πον σε τῶν ἐπιζομένων ἀγαθῶν ἀποκλείσῃ;

11. bonorum adeptione: adeptio is cited for Cic. part. orat. 32, 113; id. dom. 36; id. fin. 4, 47; ibid. 2, 41; Quint. inst. 5, 10, 33; and then for Late writers. No instance from Ambrose is noted. For the phrase bonorum adeptione, cf. Cic. fin. 2, 41: adeptione boni; Quint. inst. 5, 10, 33: circa bonorum adeptione. Cf. T. L. L. I 632, 27-50.

12. defrudent: with the Acc. and the Abl., as here, defrudare is cited for Cic. epist. 7, 10, 2; and then for Fronto, Apuleius and later writers. For this use of the verb in Ambrose, the T. L. L. V 373, 2-18 cites hex. 4, 1, 2; ibid. 6, 7, 43; parad. 9, 44.

SECTION 69.

1. dicentes: cf. Sect. 1, n. 17.

2. Is. 22, 13. For manducemus the Old Version has edamus; the Vulgate, comedamus.

3. Is. 23, 1. The Old Version has et ultra non venient for et amplius non erunt; otherwise the same as Ambrose. The Vulgate is different.

4. ideoque: the use of ideoque as a conclusive particle is cited for Lucretius (4 times), Varro (once), Nepos (once) and then for Silver and Late Latin. Cf. K.-Steg. II, 2, 146.

5. legem custodiat: Scriptural. Cf. Lev. 19, 19: Leges meas custodite; 1 Par. 22, 12: et custodire legem Domini Dei tui.

6. sabbato legitimo ignes libidinis adolere sit vetitum, . . . octavus dies resurrectionis inluceat: for a possible allusion, cf. Exod. 35, 3: non succendetis ignem in omnibus habitaculis vestris per diem sabbati. Note the use of the adjective legitimo for the gen. of the noun legis. Cf. Introduction, pp. 21-22. adolere, in the sense of "kindle", as here, is Poetic, Silver, and Late; for the most part, the word belongs to the language of religious sacrifices. Cf. T. L. L. I 794, 8 ff. On the phrase, ignes adolere in Ambrose, cf. McGuire 146. Cf. also Ambr. hex. 1, 8, 31: adolere libidines, inflammare iracundiam. dies resurrectionis is Scriptural; cf. Sect. 34, n. 6. inluceat is cited for Plaut. Capt. 597; Ambr. in psalm 118 serm. 19, 39; Firm. math. 5, 3, 2, p. 127-31. Add the present instance.

7. idem autem dies primus atque octavus: for the allusion, cf. Matth. 28, 1: Vespere autem sabati, quae lucescit in prima sabbati.

8. dominica dies: cf. Sect. 34, n. 4.

9. luxuria ergo nec fidem habet nec observantiam disciplinae: for a somewhat similar thought, cf. Sect. 23.

10. seminarium et origo vitiorum: cf. Liv. perioch. 39: omnium scelerum seminarium; Apul. apol. 74: omnium malorum seminarium. Cf. Georges s. v. seminarius.

11. quia ille ait avaritiam radicem esse vitiorum omnium: for the thought, cf. 1 Tim. 6, 10: Radix enim omnium malorum est cupiditas: quam quidam appetentes, erraverunt a fide, et inseruerunt se doloribus multis. Contrast this passage with Sect. 4, where Ambrose points out that "fasting is the root of grace".

12. luxuria ipsius est mater avaritiae: cf. Cic. de orat. 2, 171: avaritiam si tollere vultis, mater eius est tollenda luxuries. In this passage Cicero cites luxuries as a topic for development.

13. etenim: cf. Sect. 2, n. 6.

14. luxuriando: Poetic and Silver Latin.

15. quaerit postea avara compendia: in this sense of lucrum, commodum, compendium occurs in Cicero, but the usage on the whole belongs to the Silver and, especially, the Late Latinity. Cf. T. L. L. III 2038, 3 ff.

SECTION 70.

1. audistis quid hodie lectum sit: for the same expression, cf. Sect. 77; cf. also Sect. 75. These expressions indicate clearly that the De Helia was presented originally in sermon form.

2. Is. 23, 2 ff. The Old Version and Vulgate are considerably different. The Greek has: μεταβόλοι φοινίκης, διαπερῶντες τὴν θάλασσαν ἐν ὕδατι πολλῷ, σπέρμα μεταβόλων; ὡς ἀμητοῦ εἰσφερομένου οἱ μεταβόλοι τῶν ἐθνῶν.

3. civitates: = urbes; cf. Sect. 42, n. 5.

4. transfretatione: cited for Gell. 10, 26, 5: transfretatio maris; Veg. mil. 3, 22; Aug. nat. bon. 44; and the present passage.

5. lucella: this word is cited in the lexia only for Hor. epist. 1, 18, 102; Catull. 28, 6; Cic. Verr. 3, 72; ibid. 3, 106; Aug. c. Cresc. 3, 47; Sen. epist. 5, 7; Hor. sat. 2, 5, 82; and the present passage.

6. sollicita vita: for the phrase, cf. Hor. sat. 2, 6, 62: ducere sollicitae iucunda obliviae vitae?

7. inquieta conversatio: inquieta is Poetic, Silver, and Late Latin. On conversatio, cf. Sect. 3, n. 13.

8. invidia opum: for the same thought, cf. Liv. 10, 3: invidia divitiarum.

9. intutas: cited only for Sall. frg. before Silver and Late writers.

10. elementi: elementum in the singular, in the sense of "element of matter", is cited first for Pliny. In all meanings the word is used in the plural in Classical Latin.

11. pelagi: mostly Poetic, and rare in Silver and Late Prose for the Classical mare. Cf. B.-G. s. v.

12. longius tu vagus et exul errares: for the form of expression here, cf. Cic. Cluent. 62, 175: cum vagus et exul erraret atque undique exclusus.

13. qui non navigat, nescit timere naufragium: this statement has all the characteristics of a proverb, but as no copy of Otto's Sprichwörter is available to me, I have not been able to discover any close parallels in other Latin writers.

14. Gen. 1, 28. The Old Version reads: principamini piscium maris; the Vulgate: dominamini piscibus maris.

15. enavigate: intransitive, as here, in its literal sense "sail out", "sail away", cited for Curtius, Apuleius, and the Jurists.

16. denique et propheta Iona, qui missus est in Ninevem: for the allusion, cf. Ion. 1, 1 ff.

17. paenitentiam praedicaret: Scriptural. Cf. Luc. 24, 47: praedicari in nomine eius poenitentiam.

18. fugeret a facie dei: Scriptural. Cf. 1 Kings 17, 24: fugerunt a facie eius; 1 Kings 19, 8; 2 Kings 10, 13.

19. sorte ductus: for the expression, cf. Cic. rep. 1, 34, 51: sorte ductus; Sall. frg. apud Serv. Verg. Aen. 2, 201: sorte ducti e primoribus civitatis unus et viginti.

SECTION 71.

1. circa hominem: circa = erga, is practically Late Latin, being cited only for Pliny and Celsus before Fronto and later writers. Cf. T. L. L. III 1091, 55 ff.; St.-Schm. 515; K.-Steg. II 1, 543-544.

2. Psalm. 8, 7-9.

3. dedit . . . perambulare: the use of the active of dare with the Inf. is cited first for Verg. Aen. 3, 77. Cf. T. L. L. V 1690, 1-32.

4. generas de voluptate: the lexica cite no instances of generare de. On generare ex, cf. Sect. 17, n. 5.

5. separatioris: the comparative of separatus is cited in the lexica only for: Tert. anim. 18 (fin.); Cael. Aur. chron. 5, 10, 101; and for Ambrose (the present passage). Cf. Georges and B.-G. s. v. Georges has Ambr. Hel. 17, 91, in place of the correct reference 19, 71.

6. inquietas: cf. Sect. 24, n. 10.

7. secreta: with this meaning of "solitudes", Poetic and Silver Latin.

8. sulcare atque exarare fluctus: for the phrase sulcare fluctus, cf. Ov. Pont. 2, 10, 33: rate caeruleas picta sulcavimus undas; id. met. 4, 707: sulcat aquas iuvenum sudantibus acta lacertis. The verb sulcare is almost entirely Poetic before Silver Latin. The use of exarare in the sense of "plough" is Classical, but the lexica cite no example of its use with mare in this meaning.

9. innoxia aequora: in this sense of "blameless", "innocent", innoxius is cited for Nepos; otherwise Poetic, Silver, and Late.

10. inexplebilis avaritia mercatorum: for the same thought on the nature of avarice, cf. Sen. dial. 10, 2, 1: alium insatiabilis tenet avaritia . . . , alius vino madet. inexplebilis is cited only for Cicero before Silver and Late writers.

11. inquietudinem: cf. Sect. 23, n. 11.

12. Is. 23, 4. The Vulgate has: ait enim mare, otherwise the same.

13. fatigati elementi: the use of the p. p. p. of fatigare as a pure adjective, is found only in the Poets before Silver and Late writers. On elementum, cf. Sect. 70, n. 10.

14. meos fluctus negotiator arguis: cf. Lucr. 6, 405: quid undas arguit et liquidam molem camposque natantis?

15. inquietior: cf. Sect. 70, n. 7. The comparative of this word is cited only for Ammianus.

16. feriantur: cf. Sect. 6, n. 13.

17. versatur unda sub remige: the use of versari in its literal sense of "whirl" or "turn about" is Poetic, Silver, and Late. The same is true of remex, as here, in the sense of "a bench of rowers", "the oarsmen".

18. flamine: the use of flamen in the sense of "breeze", "wind", equivalent to the Greek πνεῦμα, is almost entirely Poetic before Apuleius. Cf. T. L. L. VI 860, 23-66. Add the present instance.

SECTION 72.

1. Is. 23, 4.

2. inquietant: cf. Sect. 24, n. 10.

3. Is. 23, 6. The Old Version reads: Ite Carthaginem, ululate qui habitatis in insula hac. The Greek is like the Old Version.

4. Is. 23, 1.

5. et ideo: cf. Sect. 4, n. 13.

6. decolora: the adjective decolorus -a -um (= decolor) is cited in the T. L. L. only for Ambr. hex. 1, 8, 29; 3, 10, 44; id. Iac. 2, 4, 19; id. epist. 19, 32; and Prud. perist. 1, 113. Cf. T. L. L. V 201, 6-13. Georges adds the present passage.

7. successione nequitiae: for a similar phrase, cf. Cic. fin. 1, 37: successionem voluptatis; cf. also Cic. frg. apud. Aug. de vit. beat. 26. successio is mostly Silver, and Late.

8. circumsonant: in its literal sense, as here, cited for Cic. off. 3, 5; otherwise Poetic, Silver, and Late. Cf. T. L. L. 1161, 61-85; 1167, 1-6.

9. horum igitur mercatorum semen in aqua: for the allusion, cf. Is. 23, 3 quoted in Sect. 70.

10. labores . . . seminant: in its transferred sense, as here, seminare is not noted in the lexis before the Eccl. writers. The phrase labores seminare is formed undoubtedly after the analogy of similar Scriptural phrases. Cf. Prov. 11, 18; seminanti autem iustitiam merces fidelis; id. 22, 8: Qui seminat iniquitatem metet mala; 1 Cor. 9, 11: Si nos vobis spiritualia seminavimus, magnum est si nos carnalia vestra metamus.

11. pericula metant: this extended use of metere has no parallel in Classical Latin. The whole expression was undoubtedly formed after the analogy of Scripture. Cf. Vulg. Os. 8, 7: Quia ventum seminabunt, et turbinem metent; and Prov. 22, 8 quoted in note 9 above.

12. pullulat: cited in Vergil and Nepos before Silver Latin. For the use of the verb in Ambrose, cf. McGuire 181.

13. exuberat: Poetic, Silver, and Late.

14. non introivit in negotiationem: St. Ambrose alludes here to the censure of Ezechiel upon Tyre. Cf. Ezech. 28, 16 and 18: In multitudine negotiationis tuae repleta sunt interiora tua iniquitate, . . . In multitudine iniquitatum tuarum, et iniquitate negotiationis tuae, polluisti sanctificationem tuam. . . .

15. sed est et bona terra . . .: for the allusion here, cf. Matth. 13, 22: Qui vero in terram bonam seminatus est, hic est, qui audit verbum, et intelligit, et fructum affert.

SECTION 73.

1. Is. 23, 14. For perit munitio, the Old Version has periit fortitudo, and in die illa for in illa die; otherwise the same. The Greek is like the Old Version.

2. Is. 23, 15. The Old Version reading, which closely follows the Greek, is: et post septuaginta annos erit Tyrus quasi canticum meretricis.

3. vilitatem . . . verborum: in the sense of "baseness", as here, vilitas is used only by Silver and Late writers. For the expression, cf. Petron. 118: vilitas verborum.

4. non quo: Cf. Sect. 1, n. 14.

5. expressione: in this sense of "exposition", "clearness", cited for Schol. Hor. ars 320; Chalc. comm. 247; Ambr. Cain et Ab. 1, 2, 9; id. in Luc. 7, 188. Cf. Georges s. v. Add the present passage. The word itself in all meanings is cited only for Vitruvius before Late Latin.

6. sermonum: sermo in this sense of "a single word" is Late Latin. Cf. K.-Schm. s. v.

7. erubescunt erubescant: erubescere used transitively is cited for Ps. Cic. in Sall. 15, Verg. Aen. 2, 541, Prop. 3, 14, 20, id. 4, 11, 42, before Silver and Late Latin. Cf. Georges s. v.; K.-Steg. II, 1, 262.

8. choros . . . duci: for the phrase, cf. Sect. 66, n. 7.

9. oraculum prophetae adnuntiationis impletum: on oraculum, cf. Sect. 1, n. 2. Note the use of the adjective propheticae for the noun. Cf. Introduction, pp. 21-22. adnuntiatio is first found in Tertullian. It is cited for Ambr. off. 1, 2, 6; id. patr. 2, 7; ibid. 2, 6. Cf. T. L. L. I 787, 30-54. For the expression and thought here, cf. also Dan. 9, 24: et impleatur visio et prophetia.

SECTION 74.

1. Is. 23, 16-17. Ambrose follows the Greek. The Old Version has: Sume citharam, vagare civitas meretrix oblivioni tradita: bene cithariza, plurimum canta, ut fit tui memoria. Post septuaginta autem annos, visitationem faciet Deus Tyri.

2. in bono: the expression is Scriptural. Cf. e. g., Iob 36, 11: complebunt dies suos in bono.

3. canticum Raab illius meretricis accipere: for the allusion, cf. Ios. 2, 1.

4. fideli mente: fidelis is used here in the sense of "faithful to", "believing in" (God). Cf. T. L. L. VI 657, 73-84; 658, 1-78.

5. Luc. 7, 32. The Vulgate has tibiis after vobis, otherwise the same.

6. Psalm 95, 1. Schenkl incorrectly cites Psalm 95, 2.

7. populo nationum: the phrase is Scriptural. Cf. Gen. 34, 11: gentes et populi nationum ex te erunt.

8. dictum est a domino Iesu ad illum electum et seniore populum dei: for the phrase electum . . . populum Dei, cf. Is. 43, 20: ut darem potum populo meo, electo meo. On the use of ad with dicere, cf. Introduction, p. 33.

9. Matth. 21, 31. The Vulgate has praecedent for praecedunt, otherwise the same.

SECTION 75.

1. non recedamus a lege: a Scriptural phrase. Cf. Soph. 3, 18: qui a lege recesserant.

2. praeceptum domini: Scriptural. Cf. Sect. 13, n. 6; and Sect. 37, n. 7.

3. servuli sedulis studiis: sedulus is cited for Cic. Brut. 47, 176; otherwise Poetic, Silver, and Late. Georges notes the word for Ambr. off. 2, 7, 32. On servuli = servi, cf. Sect. 50, n. 10.

4. inpuritibus: the word is cited for Cicero and then for Late Latin (chiefly Eccl.). In the plural, it is noted for Cic. Phil. 2, 6; Ambr. off. 1, 28, 136; Salv. gub. 4, 14, 65; id. 6, 5 extr. Cf. Georges and B.-G. s. v. Add the present instance.

5. inpudicitii: cited in the lexica for: Plautus, Suetonius, Tacitus, Gellius, Tertullian, Jurists, and Salvianus; from Ambrose add: virg. 1, 4, 16 (Barry); and the present instance. The lexica cite the plural, only for Salv. adv. avar. 1, 1.

6. audistis hodie in lectione decursa: cf. Sections 70 and 77. lectio in the sense of "what is read", "a text", is Late Latin. On its technical sense of "lesson", cf. Catholic Encyclopedia s. v. Lessons. decurrere in this sense of pertractare is cited for Cic. de orat. 1, 148, and then for Late Latin, where it is found almost exclusively in the Eccl. writers. This use of the word is common in Ambrose. Cf. T. L. L. V 233, 52 ff.

7. legio: for this designation of the devil, cf. Luc. 8, 30 (Old Version): Quid tibi nomen est? At ille dixit: Legio nomen est mihi: multa enim fuerant daemonia.

8. Luc. 8, 28. The Old Version and Vulgate have, altissimi after Dei; the Greek, τοῦ ὑψίστου; otherwise the same.

9. temptamenta: in this sense of "temptation", Eccl. Latin.

10. Belial? ego servus Christi sum, illius redemptus sanguine: for the thought, cf. 2 Cor. 6, 15: Quae autem conventio Christi ad Belial? aut quae pars fidei cum infidei? and Eph. 1, 7: in quo habemus redemptionem per sanguinem eius. For the phrase servus Christi, cf. 3 Kings 18, 36: quia tu es Deus Israel, et ego servus tuus.

11. mancipavi: in its present sense of "give up", "surrender", cited only from Tacitus on.

12. opera tua: used of the devil, cf. 1 Ioh. 3, 8: ut dissolvat opera diaboli.

13. discernit: this reflexive use of discernere is cited in the T. L. L. V 1299, 3-8 only for Amm. 26, 6, 3; id. 29, 5, 54; Aug. civ. 16, 2; Vincent. Ler. 24, 34, 7.

14. confugimus ad medicum: for a number of similar instances of confugere ad aliquem = auxilii causa se recipere ad aliquem, cf. T. L. L. IV 257, 69-81. While the use is Classical, it becomes far more common in Silver and Late Latin.

15. medella: Late Latin.

16. qui semel donavit: this use of donare in the sense of "forgive", "pardon", is mostly Poetic, Silver, and Late Latin. Note that the word is used absolutely here. Cf. Introduction, p. 24. Cf. Col. 3, 13: et Dominus donavit vobis.

17. magnum medicum invenimus: for the thought here, cf. Ambr. Cain et Ab. 2, 3, 11: medicus aegrum insipientis animum fovet, et quaedam adspersit solidiora menti prudentiae medicamina, imitatus illum medicum qui de caelo venit, ut demonstraret hominibus prudentiae vias, et sapientiae semitas parvulis revelaret. videbat enim laborantes non posse sine remedio salvari, et ideo medicinam tribuebat aegris. Cf. also Milleloquium Ambrosianum, p. 1593 (the present passage is cited); and further Decretum Gratiani de Paenit. Dist. I, LXXVI-LXXVII, p. 2236 (the present passage and the beginning of Sect. 76 are cited among others).

18. tollit peccata: Scriptural. Cf. Ioh. 1, 29: qui tollit peccatum mundi.

SECTION 76.

1. subdita: this use of subdere in the sense of "furnish", "supply", is cited first for Lucr. 3, 303; and then from Livy on.

2. peccata nostra redimamus: a Scriptural phrase. Cf. Dan. 4, 24: et peccata tua eleemosynis redime.

3. operibus: as here, in the Christian sense of "good works" the plural opera is equivalent to the Greek καλὰ ἔργα, and is cited for, Cypr. epist. 18, 2; Ambr. off. 1, 31, 163; Lact. 3, 9, 15; Matth. 5, 16; etc. Cf. Georges s. v. vol. II 1382, II b.

4. Tob. 12, 9. The Old Version and Vulgate read: eleemosyna a morte liberat.

5. Prov. 13, 8. The Old Version reads: Redemptio animae viri, propriae divitiae; the Vulgate: Redemptio animae viri divitiae suae.

6. Luc. 16, 9.

7. antidoto: Silver and Late. Cf. T. L. L. II 168, 68-84; 169, 1-16. The T. L. L., for Ambrose, cites only poen. 1, 13, 65 (in a transferred sense).

8. venenum excluditur: for the same phrase, cf. Sect. 52.

9. quasi bonus dispensator: dispensator is very common in Eccl. writers. who employ it chiefly under the influence of Scripture. For the present expression, cf. 1 Petr. 4, 10: sicut boni dispensatores.

10. instrumento avaritiae: for the phrase, cf. Cic. Brut. 268; instrumenta naturae; id. Catil. 2, 9: instrumenta virtutis.

11. subsidium misericordiae: for the phrase, cf. Tac. ann. 2, 63: non aliud subsidium quam misericordia Caesaris fuit.

12. sinceritatis: Silver and Late Latin.

13. corruptionis: cited for Cic. Tusc. 4, 28; then for Tac. ann. 11, 2; ibid. 2, 55; otherwise Late Latin in all meanings. Cf. T. L. L. IV 1065 ff.

SECTION 77.

1. audistis quid hodie lectum sit: cf. Sections 70, and 75.

2. Is. 13, 5. The Old Version reads: Deus et bellatores eius, corruperunt universum orbem terrae; the Vulgate: Dominus, et vasa furoris eius, ut disperdat omnem terram.

3. iudicii diem: Scriptural. Cf. Judith 16, 20: in die iudicii.

4. in spiritu prophetis . . . revelantur: cf. Eph. 3, 5: sicuti nunc revelatum est . . . prophetis in Spiritu. In this sense of "reveal", revelare is cited first for Apuleius and then for later writers. The word is frequent in the Vulgate.

5. conversionem: in this specific sense of a "turning from error and sin to faith and penance", Eccl. Latin. Cf. T. L. L. IV 49 ff.

6. ab errore revocaret: for the expression, cf. Quint. 2, 6, 2: revocare ab errore; id. 4, 2, 71; id. 8, 6, 7.

SECTION 78.

1. audit quia disperdet dominus orbem terrarum: a paraphrase of Is. 13, 5 quoted in Sect. 77.

2. pulcher ornatus: for the use of ornatus here of the world, cf. Cic. ac. 2, 38, 119 (cf. J. S. Reid's note on the word in his edition of the Academica of Cicero London 1885, p. 317); id. nat. deor. 2, 44, 115; Vulg. Gen. 2, 1.

3. angusti . . . animi: for the phrase, cf. Cic. Piso 57: animi angusti est; id. off. 1, 68: tam angusti animi tanquam parvi.

4. altius species: cf. Cic. rep. 6, 23, 25: alte spectare.

5. inquietum: cf. Sect. 70, n. 7.

6. concretum pulvere: for the phrase, cf. Ambr. Iac. 2, 12, 56: filii eviscerati et concreti pariter pulvere; Ps. Quint. 3, 6: pulvere et cruore concretus. The use of concretus in the sense of conglobatus, as here, is cited for Vergil and Ovid; and then for Silver, and especially Late Latin. Cf. T. L. L. IV 96, 28-43.

7. luctator: in the sense of "wrestler", as here, cited by Georges for Ovid, Seneca, and Gellius.

8. scammate: cf. Sect. 49, n. 2.

9. evehit corona victorem: this passage is a reminiscence of Horace. Cf. Hor. carm. 1, 1, 4-6:

metaque fervidis
Evitata rotis palmaque nobilis
Terrarum dominos evehit ad deos.

In this sense of "raise aloft", "elevate", evehere is Poetic in Classical and Silver Latin.

10. angit iniuria: for a similar phrase, cf. Sidon. epist. 4, 11, 1: angit me . . . damnum.

11. ingrediatur stadium: the use of the Acc. without a preposition with ingredi is relatively much restricted in Classical Latin; cf., e. g., the following parallel where Cicero uses the preposition: de orat. 1, 147: in stadium ingrediuntur.

12. vacuum celebritatis: vacuus with the Gen. is cited only for Plautus, Terence, Sallust, Vergil, Horace, Ovid, Tacitus, before Apuleius and Late writers. Cf. St.-Schm. 404; K.-Steg. II 1, 441.

13. agonithetae: cf. Sect. 48, n. 6.

14. sollemnitas: cf. Sect. 1, n. 10.

15. ferietur: cf. Sect. 6, n. 13.

16. agoni: as used here, in its literal sense of "contest", Silver and Late Latin. The word is especially common in Eccl. writers who use it mostly in the transferred meaning of "a spiritual combat". Cf. T. L. L. I 1141.

17. oportet requiescere athletas, oportet requiescere spectatores: a good example of perfect parison.

18. qui enim laboris est fructus: for the expression, cf. Cic. Verr. 1, 32: mei laboris industriae diligentiaeque fructum capiam.

SECTION 79.

1. athletae sumus, in quodam stadio decernimus spiritali: for the thought, cf. 1 Cor. 9, 24. For a similar development of this thought, cf. Bas. 440 A (120 B).

2. 1 Cor. 4, 9. The Old Version reads: quoniam spectaculum facti sumus huic mundo. The Vulgate has quia for quoniam, and omits huic before mundo, otherwise the same as the Old Version. The Greek is like the Vulgate.

3. 1 Cor. 9, 26-27. The Old Version reads: Ego quidem sic curro, non quasi incertum: sic pugno, non quasi aera caedens: sed lividum facio corpus meum; the Vulgate: Ego igitur sic curro, non quasi in incertum: sic pugno, non quasi aerem verberans: sed castigo corpus meum.

4. Phil. 3, 13-14. Ambrose here is closer to the Greek and Vulgate than to the Old Version. The Vulgate reads: Unum autem, quae quidem retro sunt obliviscens, ad ea vero, quae sunt priora extendens meipsum. ad destinatum persequor, ad bravium; the Greek: ἐν δέ, τὰ μὲν ὀπίσω ἐπιλανθάνομενος, τοῖς δὲ ἔμπροσθεν ἐπεκτεινόμενος, κατὰ σκοπὸν διώκω ἐπὶ τὸ βραβεῖον.

5. athletae ergo sumus, legitime certandum est: for the allusion, cf. 2 Tim. 2, 5: Nam et qui certat in agone, non coronatur nisi legitime certaverit. For a similar thought, cf. Cassian. 12, 32: athleta Christi, qui spiritalem agonem legitime certans a domino desiderat coronari.

6. luctamina: cited only for Verg. Aen. 8, 89; Val. Flacc. 2, 234; Claud. apud. Get. 138; Capitol. Aur. 4, 9; Maxim. eleg. 6, 5; Lampr. Alex. 30, 4.

7. brabium: Eccl. Latin; cf. n. 4 above.

8. numquid: though used in Classical and Silver Latin as an interrogative particle, numquid is common only in Early and Late Latin, particularly the Ecclesiastical. Cf. Röscher, Italia and Vulg.

400 ff.; Saloniū 316; St.-Schm. 649 and 696. Cf. also McGuire 117 and the literature there cited.

9. dederit certamini nomen suum: for the thought here, cf. Bas. 440 A (120 B): ἐπίδος σεαυτοῦ τὴν ὀνομασίαν· καταγράφῃ μετὰ τῆς Ἑκκλησίας.

10. agonisticus: the word is rare being noted in the T. L. L. only for Tertullian, Cyprian, Schol. Hor., Augustine, Ps. Prosp., Cael.-Aur., Optatus and for the present passage. Cf. T. L. L. I 1413, 84; 1414, 1-16.

11. disciplina exigitur, castimonia custoditur: for the allusion, cf. 1 Cor. 9, 25.

12. agonem: cf. Sect. 78, n. 16.

13. competitione: as here, in the sense of "competition", "rivalry", cited only for Ambrose (the present passage); Itin. Alex. 18; Conc. Lugd. a. 567 (570), p. 140, 19. Cf. T. L. L. III 2064, 55-58.

14. oleo laetitiae: cf. Sect. 36, n. 8.

15. unguento exinanito: for the allusion and the phrase, cf. Cant. 1, 3 quoted in Sect. 36. On the use here of the second form of the imperative, cf. Introduction, p. 25.

16. cibus tuus cibus: for the allusion, cf. Cant. 1, 3.

17. habilis ad coronam: habilis with ad is cited only for Varro, and Cic. de orat. 1, 231, in Classical Latin. For a rather complete list of adjectives with ad in Ambrose, cf. McGuire 133; and Baxter 105 (for habilis ad he cites only Ambr. in psalm 118, 21, 38); cf. also Adams, p. 35.

18. affectum: cf. Sect. 9, n. 10.

19. archangeli et potestates et dominationes: cf. Col. 1, 16: quoniam in ipso condita sunt universa in caelis et in terra, visibilia et invisibilia, sive throni, sive dominationes, sive principatus, sive potestates.

20. dedecorosum: cf. Sect. 66, n. 12.

21. ingressus stadium: cf. Sect. 78, n. 11.

22. vigorem animae: on vigor, cf. Sect. 29, n. 6. For a discussion of this and the similar phrases vigor mentis and vigor animi in Ambrose, cf. McGuire 215.

23. lacertos excute: for the phrase, cf. Sen. Ben. 2, 6: excusso lacerto telum torquere.

24. scamma: cf. Sect. 49, n. 2.

25. aestivi solis: for the phrase, cf. Sall. hist. frg. 19: iuxta solis aestivi pulsum; Sen. Herc. f. 235: penetrare . . . solis aestivi plagas; id. epist. 90, 17: calorem solis aestivi; Curt. 7, 5, 3: vapor aestivi solis; Ambr. hex. 4, 5, 21. For further instances, cf. T. L. L. 1108, 59-75. The present passage is not cited.

26. flagrantiam: in this literal sense of "blazing", cited first for Gellius. In its transferred sense = "ardor", cited for Cic. Cael. 49 before Late Latin. Cf. T. L. L. VI 845, 65-77.

27. speciosa: cf. Sect. 2, n. 1.

28. tolerantia: cited only for Cicero, before Silver and Late Latin.

29. stadium . . . ingreditur: cf. Sect. 78, n. 11.

30. ibi colligitur pulvis, ubi palma proponitur: cf. Hor. carm. 1, 1, 3-4: sunt quos curriculo pulverem Olympicum collegisse iuvat.

31. nemo iterum nitidus coronatur, pulverulentum decet victoria: cf. Hor. epist. 1, 1, 50: Magna coronari contemnat Olympia, cui spes, Cui sit condicio dulcis sine pulvere palmae? On the use of pulverulentum, cf. Sect. 3, n. 9.

SECTION 80.

1. exeat corona tua: for a Scriptural echo of the use of corona here, cf. Apoc. 3, 11: Ecce venio cito; tene quod habes, ut nemo accipiat coronam tuam.

2. conpunctionem: conpunctio is used occasionally in a profane sense by medical writers, etc., in the sense of dolor pungens; otherwise it is confined almost exclusively to Eccl. Latin, where it is employed in the sense of sopor, ebrietas, and especially of dolor animi ex peccato ortus, paenitentia, humilitas, devotio. It seems to be used here in the sense of dolor pungens. This usage for Ambrose is not cited in T. L. L. Cf. T. L. L. IV 2171, 44-67.

3. etsi disperdis orbem terrarum: for the allusion, cf. Is. 13, 5 quoted in Sect. 77.

4. invisibilia: the word is cited in the lexica only for Celsus before Late writers.

5. angustioris . . . animi: for the phrase, cf. Sect. 78, n. 3.

6. dolet quod . . . gaudet ut venias: this use of causal ut with the subjunctive which develops only in Late Latin, is related in part to explicative quod clauses, and in part to final ut clauses. Cf. St.-Schm. 764-765. In the present instance ut is used clearly as an equivalent of explicative quod.

7. qui novit spectare: on the use of the infin. with novi = "know how", cf. Introduction, p. 36.

8. Matth. 6, 10. The Old Version and Vulgate have adveniat, otherwise the same as Ambrose. This Scriptural reference is incorrectly noted by Schenkl as Matth. 6, 19.

9. gaudebit creatura mundi, ut a vanitate mundi istius liberetur . . . : for the allusion, cf. Rom. 8, 20-23: Vanitate enim creatura subiecta est non volens, sed propter eum, qui subiecit iam in spe; quia et ipsa creatura liberabitur a servitute corruptionis, in libertatem gloriae filiorum Dei. Scimus enim quod omnis creatura ingemiscit, et parturit usque adhuc. Non solum autem illa, sed et nos ipsi primitias spiritus habentes, et ipsi intra nos gemimus, adoptionem filiorum Dei, expectantes redemptionem corporis nostri. For creatura mundi, cf. Rom. 1, 20: a creatura mundi.

10. nunc congemiscit at parturit: the language is Scriptural. Cf. Rom. 8, 22, quoted under n. 8 above. For further parallels in Eccl. Latin, cf. Ambr. epist. 35, 2; id. hex. 4, 1, 4; ibid. 4, 8, 31: illa congemiscit et comparturit in sua mutatione; cf. also Hier. Is. 51, 6, p. 588: omnis creatura congemiscit et parturit. Cf. T. L. L. IV 274, 54-72. The present passage is not cited. The verb congemiscere itself is Late Latin, being cited first for Tertullian. Cf. T. L. L. l. c.

11. adoptio filiorum et totius corporis redemptio conpleatur: Scriptural. Cf. n. 8 above.

12. in bono: a Scriptural phrase, cf. e. g., Eccli. 11, 9: et in bono sit cor tuum in diebus iuventutis tuae; 2 Esdr. 2, 18; Eccli. 11, 13; Rom. 16, 19; Gal. 4, 18.

13. disperdet orbem terrarum: cf. Is. 13, 5 quoted in Sect. 77.

14. erit etenim caelum novum: cf. Apoc. 21, 1.

15. Apoc. 22, 5. The Old Version reads: et nox iam non erit; the Vulgate: et nox ultra non erit.

16. 2 Cor. 3, 16 and 18. St. Ambrose quotes here rather loosely. The Old Version reads: Nos autem omnes, revelata facie gloriam Domini speculantes, eandem imaginem reformamur de gloria in gloriam, tamquam a Domini Spiritu. The Vulgate has, in eandem . . . a claritate in claritatem for eandem . . . de gloria in gloriam; otherwise the same as the Old Version.

SECTION 81.

1. advertimus: so Schenkl on the basis of the best Mss. The Benedictines have advertamus which, under the circumstances, would certainly seem to be the natural reading. On the use of advertere, cf. Sect. 24, n. 5.

2. constituti: = ὄντες. Cf. Sect. 27, n. 4.

3. quantis . . . erimus: on the indicative in the indirect question, cf. Introduction, p. 41.

4. Luc. 15, 10. Ambrose, here is closer to the Vulgate, which reads: gaudium erit coram angelis Dei super uno peccatore poenitentiam agente.

5. super eo: super—used here obviously under Scriptural influence—in this sense of de = “concerning”, “in regard to”, is a usage of colloquial speech which does not become frequent in Prose before Silver and especially Late Latin. Cf. St.-Schm. 540.

6. non exorata venia: for the phrase, cf. Plaut. Bacch. 1199: hanc veniam illis sine te exorem.

7. cursum vitae huius confecerit: cf. Cic. Cael. 17, 39:

omnem vitae suae cursum conficere. For further instances of the phrase, cf. T. L. L. IV 197, 46-59.

8. castigemus ergo corpus: cf. 1 Cor. 9, 26 quoted in Sect. 79.

9. Ioel. 1, 5. The Old Version has: Evigilate qui ebrii estis in vino vestro; the Greek: ἐκνήψατε, οἱ μεθύοντες, ἐξ οἴνου; the Vulgate: Expergiscimini ebrii, et flete, et ululate omnes. Cf. also, Lev. 10, 9.

10. paratus ad dominum armatam dexteram gerat: perhaps an echo of Eph. 6, 11: induite vos armaturam Dei, ut possitis stare adversus insidias diaboli.

11. lex recensetur: lex is used here in its Eccl. meaning of "the Law of God". Cf. Sect. 16, n. 14. In this transferred sense of "go over in thought, or narration", recensere is Poetic, Silver, and Late.

SECTION 82.

1. 2 Thess. 3, 6. The Old Version reads: ut substrahatis vos ab omni fratre inquiete ambulante; the Greek: στέλλεσθαι ὑμᾶς ἀπὸ παντὸς ἀδελφοῦ ἀτάκτως περιπατοῦντος; the Vulgate: ut substrahatis vos ab omni fratri ambulante inordinate.

2. Eph. 6, 17. The Old Version and Vulgate read: et gladium spiritus quod est verbum Dei; the Greek is the same.

3. non fratris, non propinqui accipiamus personam: accipere personam is a common Scriptural phrase, cf. e. g., Deut. 1, 17: Nulla erit distantia personarum; ita parvum audietis ut magnum, nec accipietis cuiusquam personam, quia Dei iudicium est. On the use of non here for Classical ne, cf. Introduction, p. 22.

4. immundum: cited three times for Cicero; otherwise Early, Poetic, Silver, and Late.

5. altaribus: cf. Sect. 2, n. 7.

6. emundet: cf. Sect. 37, n. 9.

7. quo ad sacramenta Christi redire mereatur: on the final use of quo without a comparative, cf. Introduction, p. 41; on sacramentum, cf. Sect. 33, n. 4.

SECTION 83.

1. convertatur: in the sense of "convert", Eccl. Latin. Cf. T. L. L. IV 868, 52-84; 869, 1-41.

2. remissionem accipiens peccatorum: Scriptural. Cf. Sect. 37, n. 7.

3. velut ignis quidam peccata consumit: for the allusion, cf. Deut. 4, 24.

4. quia Christus in igne et spiritu baptizat: for the allusion, cf. Matth. 3, 11: Ego quidem baptizo vos in aqua in poenitentiam . . . ipse vos baptizabat in Spiritu sancto, et igni.

5. typum legis: on typus, cf. Sect. 37, n. 4. For the use of lex, here, cf. Sect. 16, n. 14.

6. ubi Helias super altare ligna inposuit: for the allusion, cf. 3 Kings 18, 33: et composuit ligna, divisitque per membra bovem, et posuit super ligna. For a somewhat detailed elaboration of 3 Kings 18, 33 ff., cf. Bas. 427 D, 429 A (115 D).

7. mitterent supra de hydriis aquam: this use of mittere with aquam in the sense of "pour" is Scriptural. Cf. John 13, 5: deinde mitte aquam in pelvim. Cf. also Sect. 37.

8. 3 Kings 18, 34. Ambrose is following the Greek closely. The Old Version reads: Et dixit: iterum afferte. et iterum attulerunt; et dixit: repetite tertio. et repetierunt; the Vulgate is somewhat different.

9. cum manaret aqua: cf. 3 Kings 18, 35 (Old Version): et manabat aqua.

10. et ignis descendit e caelo: cf. 3 Kings 18, 38 (Old Version): et cecidit ignis a Domino de caelo.

11. ablueris aqua: i. e., by the water of Baptism. On the use of abluere in this sense,—so employed first by Tertullian—cf. T. L. L. I 108, 58 ff.

12. lignum enim et stipulam consumit ignis: there is possibly an echo here of 1 Cor. 3, 12-15. stipula is cited in the lexica only for Terence, Varro, Vergil, Ovid, Pliny, before Late Latin. It is used here undoubtedly under the influence of Scripture. The word occurs 20 times in the Vulgate.

13. inluminaris: the lexicæ do not seem to cite the word in this meaning of "enlighten", although it is so used in Eccl. Latin. Cf. below.

14. Psalm 33, 6. For a similar development of the same Scriptural text, cf. Bas. 425 B (114 B).

15. nolite timere quia iugum est: festinate, quia leve est: for the allusion, cf. Matth. 11, 29 ff.: Tollite iugum meum super vos . . . iugum enim meum suave est, et onus meum leve. Cf. Bas. 425 C (114 D): τί μέλλεις; τί ἀναδύῃ; τί φοβῇ τὸν ζυγόν, ὥσπερ δάμαλις τις ἀπειρόζυγος; χρηστός ἐστίν, ἐλαφρὸς ἐστίν· οὐ τρίβει τὸν αἰχένα, ἀλλὰ δοξάζει.

16. conterit: cf. Sect. 16, n. 15.

17. procrastinatis: cited in the lexicæ only for Cicero (5 times); Fronto (once); and Gellius (once).

18. cervicem: the use of cervix in the singular is Poetic, Silver, and Late. This usage in Silver and Late Prose is no doubt due to the influence of the Classical poets, who employ cervix in the singular almost exclusively. Cf. T. L. L. III 946, 13-16; K.-Schm. s. v.

19. mentem gratia copulat: for a similar expression cf. Cic. epist. 3, 4, 2: ad voluntates nostras copulandas; id. fin. 5, 67: cum (virtutes) ita copulatae, connexaeque sint. As Schenkl points out, there is obviously a lacuna here. Cf. Bas. 425 C (114 E): οὐ γὰρ δεσμεῖται ἡ ζεύγλη περὶ τὸν τράχηλον, αὐτεξούσιον ἐπιζητεῖ τὸν ὑφέλκοντα.

SECTION 84.

1. quid negas adhuc esse temporis: Ambrose continues to follow Basil here. Cf. Bas. 425 C (114 D E). On adhuc with the genitive, cf. Introduction, p. 31.

2. omne tempus oportunist ad indulgentiam: cf. Ambr. in psalm 118 serm. 16, 38: omne enim tempus opportunist salutis.

3. si aurum tibi offeram . . . nullus excusat: cf. Bas. 429 A (116 A): εἰ χρυσὸν τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ διένεμον, οὐκ ἂν μοι εἶπες· αὐριον ἤξω, καὶ αὐριον δώσεις· ἀλλ' ἀπῆγεις ἂν ἤδη τὴν διανομὴν κατεπεύγων, καὶ ἐδυσφόρεις πρὸς τὴν ὑπέρθεσιν.

4. redemptio animae: Scriptural. Cf. Prov. 13, 8: Redemptio animae viri; Psalm 48, 9: redemptionis animae suae.

5. Iohannes in paenitentiam baptizabat: for the allusion cf. Matth. 3, 11, quoted in Sect. 83, n. 4.

6. Christus baptizat in spiritu: Scriptural. Cf. Ioh. 1, 33: hic est qui baptizat in Spiritu sancto; cf. also Sect. 83.

7. dispensat: cf. Sect. 42, n. 4.

8. typum baptismatis: for a further instance of this phrase, cf. Ps. Origen. tract. 11, p. 126, 9: grana mala punici . . . baptismi et passionis typum ostendunt. Cf. T. L. L. II 1719, 25-32. The present passage is cited.

9. Helias et caelum aperuit: for the allusion, cf. 3 Kings 17, 1; 18, 44 ff. Cf. also Sect. 2 of the present work.

10. tribus annis et sex mensibus: on the use of the Abl. here, cf. Sect. 2, n. 10.

11. nemo enim nisi per aquam et spiritum ascendit in regnum caelorum: for the allusion, cf. Ioh. 3, 5: nisi quis renatus fuerit ex aqua, et Spiritu sancto, non potest introire in regnum Dei. Cf. also Bas. 429 A (115 D).

12. perfidia . . . fides: for the same juxtaposition and use of perfidia and fides, cf. Sect. 41, n. 5.

SECTION 85.

1. denique Enoch raptus ad caelum est: for the allusion, cf. Gen. 5, 24.

2. iterum clausum est: for the allusion, cf. 4 Kings 2, 11.

3. Helias, qui raptus est curru: cf. Sect. 4 of the present work.

4. sacramenti gratiam: cf. Sect. 33, n. 4.

5. instat iudicii dies: cf. Thess. 2, 2: quasi instet dies

Domini. For the phrase iudicii dies, cf. Sect. 77, n. 3. For further instances of the phrase instat dies, cf. T. L. L. V 1045, 29-31.

6. mors adpropinquat: cf. Eccli. 11, 20: et mors appropinquet; Gen. 47, 29: appropinquare cerneret diem mortis suae. The expression is also found in Class. Latin. Cf. Cic. fin. 5, 11, 31: mors cum appropinquet. Cf. T. L. L. V 315, 65-66.

7. non mihi demonstres lumen: lumen is used here in its Scriptural sense of the "light of faith". Cf. e. g., 1 Ioh. 2, 8: quia tenebrae transierunt, et verum lumen iam lucet. On the use of non for Class. ne here, cf. Introduction, p. 22.

8. regnum caeleste: this phrase already appears in the Classical Poets, cf., e. g., Ov. ars. 1, 152: adfectasse ferunt regnum caeleste Gigantas; id. Pont. 4, 8, 59. With a Christian signification, as here, it is very common in the Eccl. writers.

9. qui excusat a baptisate: in the early ages of the Church, baptism was often postponed, sometimes even to the hour of death. This deferring of baptism was opposed strenuously by the Fathers of the Church in the Fourth century, but their efforts were not successful before the next century, when infant Baptism became the established practice.

10. reformaris et non dissolveris: reformare is Poetic, Silver, and Late. For the thought, in dissolveris, cf. Cic. Verr. 1, 9: cum hominis natura morte dissolvitur.

11. ictum mortis: for a similar phrase cf. 1 Cor. 15, 55: ubi est mors stimulus tu; ibid. 56: stimulus autem mortis peccatum est.

12. resurgis: in this Christian sense of "rise from the dead", used first by Tertullian. The word itself is Poetic, Silver, and Late Latin.

13. dissimulas: this absolute use of dissimulare in the sense of "neglect", "be indifferent to", is Silver and Late Latin. Cf. T. L. L. IV 1483, 32 ff.

14. saeculo: on the dative here, cf. Introduction, p. 28.

15. ignoras quod Cain propterea displicuerit sacrificium:

for the allusion, cf. Gen. 4, 3 ff. Cf. also Ambr. incarn. 1, 2: hoc est Cain, a fructibus terrae: alter autem, Abel videlicet, ex primitivis ovium suarum hostiam Domino abstulit. Nihil invenio quod in specie munerum reprehendam, nisi quod et Cain munera sua displicuisse cognovit. On the use of the quod clause for the Acc. and Ind., here, cf. Introduction, p. 41.

16. primitiva: employed as a subst., as here, Eccl. Latin, being cited in the lexis only for Jerome, Solinus, and the Vulgate. The adjective primitivus is noted only for Columella before Late Latin.

17. optulit: as used here, in the sense of "offer to God in sacrifice", Eccl. Latin.

18. perfunctus: in this sense of "enjoy" cited by Georges only for Sulpic. in Cic. epist., and Ovid.

19. de sequentibus: the use of sequens = "second", "next in order or quality", as here, does not seem to have become frequent before Livy.

20. munus deo temptavit offerre: for the phrase, manus offerre, cf. Lev. 2, 14: obtuleris munus primarum frugum tuarum. temptare with the Inf. is cited for the Poets, and in Prose for Hirt. Gall. 8, 40, 1; then from Nepos and Livy on. Cf. St.-Schm. 581; K.-Steg. II 1, 667.

21. primitiarum oblatione: Scriptural. Cf. Num. 18, 27: in oblationem primitivorum. primitiae itself is Poetic, Silver, and Late Latin. oblatio is Late and almost exclusively Eccl., occurring in the Vulgate more than 100 times.

I. INDEX NOMINUM ET RERUM.

(Numbers preceded by the abbreviation Sect. refer to the Sections in the Text and Translation. Otherwise numbers refer to pages.)

- Ablative, summary of use of, 31-32.
 Abstracts, summary of use of, 14-15.
 Accusative, summary of use of, 26-27.
 Adjectives, for genitive of noun, 21-22; pronominal, 20; used substantively, 15-19.
 Adverbs, summary of use of, 22-23.
 Ambrose, St., attacks vices of his age, 3; conservative in use of new words, 12; copious employment of Scripture by, 7; method of in handling sources, 8; poetical qualities in style of, 13.
 Athletes, employed allegorically as designation of good Christians, Sect. 79-80, 209.
 Auction, allusion to custom of fixing a spear in ground at, 144.
 Banquets, vivid description of elaborate preparation for, Sect. 24-25, 145; of the soldiers, vividly described, Sect. 46-50, 168-176; licentiousness at, Sect. 54, 180.
 Baptism, allusion to administering of at Eastertime, Sect. 34, 156; evil of postponement of deplored, Sect. 84-85, 218.
 Basil, St., use of as a source, 7-8.
 Baxter, on poetic style of St. Ambrose, 13.
 Birds, snaring of mentioned, 142.
 Cases, summary of use of without prepositions, 26-32; with prepositions, 32-35.
 Catechumenate, grades in, 156; use of term electi in Italy, ibid.
 Chrysostom, St. John, on the mystica mensa, 153-154.
 Cicero, echoes from, 9-10.
 Common-places in Basil, borrowed from Cyno-Stoics, 146.
 Compound tenses, formation of with fuero, fueram, 25-26.
 Concretes, use of sg. for pl., 13.
 Conditions, types of employed, 42-43.
 Costumes, description of those worn by attendants at the banquets, Sect. 46, 169.
 Dative, summary of use of, 27-29.
De Helia, occasion and date of, 3-4; arrangement and sources of, 5-12; companion piece to De Nabuthae and De Tobia, 3; original form of, 3.
 Demonstratives, use of, 19-20.
 Diogenes Laertius, use of as source, 8.
 Drinking contests, vivid description of, Sect. 48, 172; rules observed at, Sect. 47, 170-172; drinking till daylight, Sect. 53, 179; novel manner of drinking through a pipe or tube, Sect. 64, 191.
 Drunken delirium, vivid description of, Sect. 60, 187-188.
 Drunkenness, vivid description of actions of men in this condition, Sect. 42-44, 165-167; evil of loquaciousness in, Sect. 63, 191; a mitigating circumstance in later Roman law, Sect. 63, 191; physical evils attendant upon, Sect. 59, 185-186.
 Duration of time, expression of by Abl., 115.
 Earth flax, allusion to the properties of, Sect. 19, 136-137.
 Elephants, revenge of upon their enemies by drenching them with water described, Sect. 65, 192.
 Elias, frequent treatment of in St. Ambrose, Sect. 5, 5, n. 1.
 Fasting, a great virtue, Sect. 2; value of for health, Sect. 22, 140-141; world began with, Sect. 6; before Holy Communion, Sect. 33, 155.
 Fish, choice quality of sought, Sect. 24, 143.
 Genitive, summary of use of, 29-31.
 Gerund and Gerundive, use of, 37.
 Holy Eucharist, allusion to as mystica mensa, Sect. 33, 153; reception of by newly baptized at Easter, Sect. 34.

- Horace, echoes from, 11.
Hymns, allusion to singing of in Church of Milan, 3-4, 181.
- Imperative, two forms of employed together, 25.
Infinitive, summary of use of, 36-37; historical, 36.
Interest, evils resulting from, Sect. 31, 151.
- Klostermann, Origen as a source of De Helia noted by, 8.
- Lent, fast of kept on all days except Sabbath and Sunday, Sect. 34, 155.
Lessons (liturgy), alluded to, Sect. 77, 204-205.
Lucan, echoes from, 12.
Lucretius, echoes from, 9.
Luxury, evils attendant upon, Sect. 30, 151-152; the seedbed of vices, Sect. 69, 198.
- Martyrs, allusion to abuses connected with feasts held at tombs of, Sect. 62, 190.
Military terms, allegorical use of by Christian writers, 111-112.
- Onomasticon, use of such a work by Ambrose, 189.
Origen, use of as a source, 8; 182-184.
Oysters, mentioned as a delicacy, 144.
- Participles, adjectival use, 21; substantival, 15-19.
Particles, summary of use of, 38-40.
Philo, interpretation of Naid by, 8, 184.
- Physical ills from drinking, Sect. 59, 186.
Physician, Christ likened to a great, Sect. 75, 205.
Plautus, echoes from, 9.
Polemon, story of related, Sect. 45, 167.
Prepositions, summary of use of, 32-35.
Pronouns, summary of use of, 19-20.
- Sacraments, allusions to, Sect. 33, 154; called mysteria, Sect. 36, 160.
Satan, various designations of, 112.
Syntax, summary of, 13-43.
Tenses, summary of use of, 25-26.
- Terence, echoes from, 9.
Text, discussion of and summary of changes in, 1-3.
Toasts, allusion to drinking of to Emperors, Sect. 62, 189-190.
- Verbs, summary of use of, 23-26; absolute use of, 24.
Vergil, echoes from, 10-11.
Vocabulary, character of the in De Helia, 12; poetical coloring in, 13; presence of legal languages in, 13.
- Weyman, conjecture of in De Helia, 6, 18, 136.
Wilbrand, on date of De Helia, 4; on Onomasticon used by Ambrose, 188-189.
Wineskins, drunkards compared to, Sect. 64.
Women, licentiousness of under influence of drunkenness, Sect. 66-68, 193-195.
- Xenocrates, reference to, 168.
Xenophon, use of as source, 8, 185.
-

II. INDEX VERBORUM ET LOCUTIONUM.

(Numbers refer to pages.)

- abluere, 215.
 abolere, 126.
 abscondere, abs. use of, 24.
 absolutio, 14; absolutio quaestionis, 113.
 abstemius, 118.
 abstinencia prophetica, 22; abstinencia vini, 134.
 abstinere, with simple abl., 32, 124.
 abundantia vini, 132.
 abundare, abs. use of, 25, 147; abundare muneribus, 139.
 accendere in certamen, 170.
 acceptabilis, 155.
 accubitus, 182.
 ad, summary of use of, 32-33; ad horam, 33, 163; ad mensas secundas, 172; ad ostentationem fieri, 33; ad sedandam sitim, 193.
 addicere patrimonium, 144.
 adeptio, 14; adeptio bonorum, 197.
 adfectare = "feign", 159.
 adhinnire, 185.
 adhuc temporis, 31.
 adlevamentum infirmitatis, 140.
 adnuntiare, 26, 111; with personal obj., in Acc., 131.
 adnuntiatio, 203.
 adolere ignes, 197.
 adpetentia, 113.
 adserere = affirmare, explicare, 144.
 advertere, with Acc. and infin., 37, 177; = animum advertere, 143.
 aegritudo = "illness" of the body, 153.
 aerumna, 116.
 aestivus sol, 211.
 aeterna (-orum), 155.
 affectus, 126.
 agon = "contest", 208.
 agonisticus, 210.
 agonithetes illis furor est, 172.
 alienigenae = "gentiles", 178.
 alimentum, used of fuel, 137; alimentum salutis, 140.
 alius = alter, 20.
 allophylus, 135.
 altare, in sing., 13, 114; used of a pagan altar, ibid.
 alveus, 117.
 amaritudo, 15, 132; amaritudines aquarum temperare, 131.
 amarum, subst., 18, 162.
 amiantum, 137.
 angit iniuria, 208.
 angustus animus, 207.
 anhelare = "to pant", "puff", intrans., 143.
 antidotum, 206.
 apage, 168.
 aperire oculos, 126.
 arbiter cogitationis, 158.
 ariditas, 14, 115.
 artus animae et quaedam membra, 159.
 ascendere, with Acc. without preposition, 26, 119; ascendere equum, 119; ascendere corporis voluptates, 128.
 asper = "savage", 176.
 aspersion, 14, 136.
 auctionari, trans. use of, 26, 144.
 auctor culpa, 125; auctor mundi, 130.
 auditorium, 168.
 augmentum gratiae, 151.
 aula = "palace", 152.
 avaritiam radicem esse vitiorum omnium, 198.
 Babylo[n]ici baltei, 169.
 balbutiare lingua, 166.
 bellator, adj., 175; miles bellator, ibid.
 bestialis, 185.
 brabium, 209.
 bulla = "stud" in a girdle, 169.
 cadere super terram, 115.
 caelestis disciplina, 121; caeleste sacramentum, 154; caeleste regnum, 218; caelestis vita, 117.
 calculus = "gall stone," 186.
 calida = aqua calida, 18, 173.
 canalis = "pipe," 192.
 capillus = "a single hair," 138.
 carnificina, 145.
 castigatio carnis, 140.
 cautes, 192.

- certamen, allegorical use of, 111.
 certandum est, impers., 24.
 certatur, impers., 24.
 cervix = cervices, 14, 216.
 cibus mentis, 117.
 circa = erga, 34, 200; = "in respect to," 34, 122.
 circumdare = induere, vestire, 127.
 circumfusus genas, 27.
 circumsolare, 202.
 civitates = urbes, 165.
 cogere, abs. use of, 24.
 coma nitentes, 169.
 commonitio, 14, 158.
 compendium = lucrum, commodum, 198.
 concavum, subst., 18, 193.
 concretum pulvere, 208.
 condemnatio, 14; as opposed to absolutio, 115.
 condimentum cibi ieiunium est, 152.
 conditor mundi, 153.
 conficere cursum vitae, 213.
 confugere ad medicum, 205.
 congemiscere, 212.
 congrue, 115.
 competitio, 210.
 compunctio, 14; = dolor pungen., 211.
 compungere = "to feel remorse," 161.
 conserere lites, 179.
 considerare, abs. use of, 155.
 consors naturae, 129.
 consortium = "fellowship," "society," 180.
 constituere legem, 123; constituere oculos, 183.
 constitutus = ſ, 25, 147.
 consurgit ad arma, 165.
 consurgitur, impers., 24.
 contemptus, 163.
 contenditur, impers., 24.
 contentius, 171.
 conterere, 134.
 contristari in, 35, 160.
 convenitur, impers., 24.
 conversatio = "manner of life", 117; conversatio inquieta, 199.
 conversio = "turning from error and sin to faith and penance", 207.
 convertere = "convert", 215; convertere arma, 173.
 copulat gratia mentem, 216.
 coquina, 145.
 cornu = "drinking horn", 169-170.
 corona adulescentium, 195.
 corporalis, 113.
 corruptio, 15, 207.
 crapulatus vino, 178.
 crater, 172.
 creare = "to create", 122.
 creature, 128.
 crimen mentis, 177.
 cruditas exitialis, 186.
 culpa victoriae praeium, 172.
 curari a, 35.
 cursatur, impers., 24.
 cursitare per diversa, 143.
 dare, act. of with infin., 36, 200; pass. of with infin., 36, 196; dare legem, 132.
 de, summary of use of, 34-35.
 decantare miserabiles epilogos, 166.
 decernitur, impers., 24.
 declaratum est, impers., 24.
 decolorus, 201.
 decurrere = pertractare, 204; decurrere in fauces, 192.
 dedecorosus, 195.
 defaeneratus, 152.
 deficere e, 35, 141.
 defluere in terram, 175.
 defrudare, 197.
 defunctus, 21; = mortuus, 152.
 degenerare, with simple Abl., 32, 153.
 delibutus unguentis, 168.
 denique = igitur, 40, 112.
 deponere ad, 32, 142.
 derelinquere = "bequeath", 118.
 desertum, 18; = "desert", 163.
 desideria = concupiscentia, 196.
 detergere = "wash off", "remove" with Acc., 168.
 deteriorare, 139.
 detrahare coronas, 168.
 devotio = "piety", "devotion", 115.
 diabolicus, 113.
 dicens, introducing Scriptural quotations, 37, 113.
 dicere ad, 33.
 dies sollemnitatis, 31, 111.
 differre, 24.
 digerere = "to discourse", 120; = "digest", 146.
 diluculum, 182.
 dirigere, 28; = "aiming at" or "directing at" with the Dat., 112; dirigere spiculum, 113.

- discernere, used reflexively, 205.
disciplina ieiunii, 156; disciplina pudicitiae, 139.
discurrere, 145.
dispendium, 137.
dispensare, 165.
dispensator, 206.
disputatur, impers., 24.
dissimulare, 218.
distentio, 15, 121.
diversitas, 14; in plural, 153.
dives, 17.
divina (-orum), 18; divina opera, 122; divina praesentia = "the Divine Presence", 116; divina sententia, 117; divinum imperium, 120; divinum oraculum, 110.
dominica dies; dominica = dominica dies, 22; = "the Lord's Day", 155.
donare, 24; = "forgive", "pardon", 205.
ducere choros, 203; ductus sorte, 200.
dulce, subst., 18, 162.
durare in, with Acc., 33, 138; duratus membra, 27; duratus in rigorem, 33.
ebibere, abs. use of, 24, 193.
ebrietas, 14, 128; ebrietas culpa, et gratiae, 189; = "carouses", 147.
ebriosus, 16; ebriosus et fornicator egebit, 148.
efferre, 24.
effundere, abs. use of, 24; effundere ad, 33.
electus, 17; electi = "the elect", 156.
elementum = "element of matter", 199; elementum fatigatum, 201.
elimosyna a peccato liberant, 126.
emolliare, 166.
emundare, 161.
enarrare, 174.
enavigare = "sail out", "sail away", 199.
epularis, 170.
erubescere, abs. use of, 26, 203; with infin., 36, 174.
esse fastidio, 28; horrore, 28; delectationi aut dolori, 28; sibi . . . discrimini, 28.
et = etiam, 38-39.
etenim, 40, 114.
etiam, 39.
et ideo, 40, 119.
evacuare, 136.
evadit philosophus, 168.
evehit corona victorem, 208.
eventus belli, 172.
exaestuare = "glow", "boil up", 171.
examen = "balance", 173.
exarare mare, 200.
exaudire = preces audire, 134, 190.
excidere sensu (from drink), 186.
excidium, 117.
excusare, abs. use of, 24.
excutere lacertos, 211.
exaurire, abs. use of, 24.
exhibere = "furnish", "to put before", 130.
exigere, abs. use of, 24.
exors, with Gen., 30; exors palmae, 173.
expellere de, 34, 125.
expensa, 140.
expressio = "exposition", "clearness", 203.
exsolvere poenam, 150.
extenuare, abs. use of, 24; exterminare faciem, 161.
exuberare, 202.
exulcerare = "wound", 191.
facere, with Acc. and infin., 37.
facilis, with pass. infin., 37, 137.
factura = "creature", 189.
faetor, 166.
famulari, 120.
fecundare, 134.
ferculum = "a course of food", 171.
ferentarius, 170.
feriari = cessare ab opere, or quiescere, 122.
ferietur, 143.
festus, 149.
fiala = "a broad, shallow drinking vessel", "saucer", 172.
fidelis = "faithful to", "believing in God", 204; fideli mente, ibid.
fides = "Faith", "the True Religion", 164.
fidicula = "cord", 191.
figura corporis plena gravitatis, 157.
firmamentum = "firmament", 121.
flagrantia, 15; = "blazing", 211.
flamen = "breeze", "wind", 201.
flamma funditur, 137.
flammare, figurative use of, 130.
fletus propheticus, 22, 189.
flos iuventutis, 176.

fluentum, 116.
 fomentum libidinis, 185.
 forma bellandi, 112; forma sobrietatis, 140.
 fornicator, 148.
 forte, subst., 17, 163.
 fetus gremio, 135.
 fragor maris fluctuantis, 187.
 frenesis, 186.
 frequens sermo, 119.
 frequenter and saepe, 22.
 frigida, 18; = frigida aqua, 145.
 fumigans, 21.
 fundamentum castitatis, 118.
 fundere animam, 141.

generare de, 34, 200.
 generare ex, 35, 135.
 generatrix, 130.
 germinare, 12.
 gerere personam, 159.
 gesta (-orum), 19; = res gesta, 119.
 gratia (grace) triumphandi, 112.
 gressus, 158.
 grumula, 135.

habere, with act. inf., 36.
 habeo, with act. inf., 123; with pass. inf., 123.
 habilis ad, 33, 210.
 habitus mentis, 157.
 hac atque illac, 175.
 hamus in esca latet, 142.
 Helia, 110.
 hoc est, 20.
 homo ebrius . . . creatura superflua, 188.
 humilitas mentis, 140.
 hymnus, 181.
 hypocrita = "hypocrite", 159.

Iazer = πολῆσις πεπιστός, 188-189.
 ictum mortis, 218.
 ictus sanguinis, 141.
 id est, 20.
 idolum = "idol", 114-115.
 ideoque, 40, 197.
 ieiunare, 112.
 ignobilis, 16.
 ignis probat ferrum durum, 167.
 ignorantia, 15.
 illic, 123.
 imago = "apparition", 187.
 imago caelestis, 117.
 immolator, 145.
 impetus fluentorum, 192.
 implere officium, 136.

immundus, 214.
 immurmurare, 196.
 in futurum, 18.
 in publicum, 18.
 in vespem, 33, 190.
 inardescere, 171.
 incentiva (-orum) misericordiae, 110.
 incidere, 26; with acc., 141.
 inconcussus, 129.
 inconsolabilis, 188.
 incontinens = "immoderate", 158.
 incorruptibilis, 119.
 incrementum virtutis, 151.
 indevotio, 15; = "irreverence", 190.
 index facies est conscientiae, 161.
 indictum, 18; = mandatum, 124.
 indigestio, 162.
 indignum est ut, 42, 133.
 induere alienam personam, 159.
 induere se vestimenta, 26, 148.
 indumentum, 125.
 inebriare, 127.
 inexplebilis avaritia mercatorum, 200.
 infecunditas, 14, 134.
 infestare, 177.
 infirmus, 16.
 infundere, with dative, 28, 173.
 infusio, 137.
 ingredi, with acc., 26, 208.
 inlaqueare, 113.
 inluminaris, 216.
 inmerito, with negative, 181.
 immunis, with gen., 30; immunis iniuriarum, 172.
 innoxius = "blameless", "innocent", 200.
 innumerus, 150.
 inolescere, 162.
 impatientia, 15, 164.
 in principio generis humani, 128.
 inpudicitia, 15, 204.
 impuritas, 14; in plural, 204.
 inquietare, 144.
 inquietudo, 15, 142.
 inquietus, 201.
 inrationabilis, 188.
 inrigare = "deluge", "overflow", 193.
 insipientia, 15, 148.
 instabilis gressus, 187.
 instaurare potum de integro, 172.
 institutio lenitatis, 140.
 instrumenta bellorum, 172.
 instrumentum avaritiae, 206.
 interfectorium, 18, 162.

- internus, 186.
 intutus, 199.
 inundatio = "an overflowing", "inundation", 193.
 inventum, subst., 18, 129.
 inverecundus, 194.
 invidia opum, 199.
 invisibilis, 212.
 invitare, abs. use of, 24.
 ipse = idem, 19, 119.
 irreverens, 130.
 iste = hic, 19.
 iste = ille, 19.
 iter udae vocis aperire, 170.
 iustus, subst., 16, 129.
 iuventas, 14; = "age of youth", 140.
 iuxta = secundum, 34, 134; iuxta praeceptum domini, 34.
 lacus = "pit", "den", 138.
 laqueus = "snare of sin", 133; literal meaning of, 142.
 latebra, 14, 124.
 latibulum, 130.
 lectio = "what is read", "a text", 204.
 legio = "Satan", 205.
 levare manum, 172.
 Lex = "the Law", 134, 164, 214.
 libare = "to sip", "to taste", 148.
 liberare, abs. use of, 24.
 licitatio, 15, 144.
 liquescere = "to melt", 167.
 luctamen, 209.
 luctator = "wrestler", 208.
 luccella, 199.
 lumbus = "loins", 169.
 lumen = "light of faith", 216; lumine diurno, 168.
 luminaria, 121.
 luxuria est mater avaritiae, 198.
 luxuriare, 198.
 machaera, 143.
 madere in lucem, 179.
 madidus vino, 174; madida vino pavimenta, 145.
 maestus, 126.
 magis = potius, 22.
 magis quam = potius quam, 114.
 magisterium = "teaching office" or "teaching", 139.
 mancipare = "give up", "surrender", 205.
 manducare, 122; manducare de, 34.
 marcere, 176.
 martius = "martial", 171.
 mastigia, 143.
 materia peccati, 131.
 materialis, 120.
 medella, 205.
 medicus magnus = "Christ", 205.
 mendicare, intrans. use of, 148, 25.
 mendicus, 16.
 mens sobria, 150.
 mentior nisi, 186.
 merax = "pure" with reference to liquor, 171.
 merere, with infin., 36.
 meriti vinculis alligata, 138.
 metere pericula, 202.
 militia, allegorical use of, 114.
 minaces vultu, 175.
 ministerium, 164, 180.
 miscere, with dat., 178.
 mittere = "pour", 161, 215.
 moderatio, 15, 189.
 momentarius, 193.
 motus histrionicus, 194.
 mox ubi, 165.
 munitus armis ieiunii, 133.
 mutuari = "receive", 137.
 mysteria = "the Sacraments of the Christian Faith", 160.
 mystica mensa = "Eucharist", 153.
 Naid = commotio, 184.
 naptha, 137.
 natalis = "birthday", 16, 144.
 natate sanguine omnia, 146.
 nec = ne . . . quidem, 22.
 nec solum . . . sed et, 39, 180.
 nepos = "nephew", 131.
 nescire, 26.
 nidor, 145.
 nimbosus, 132.
 nitens, 169.
 non = ne, 22.
 non quo, 112.
 novisse = "know how", with inf., 36.
 nuda lacertos, 27.
 nullus = nemo, 20.
 numquid = num, 22, 209.
 nutare = "to sway", 187.
 obdormire, 129.
 oblatio, 219.
 obsequium, 129; obsequium pia devotionis, 31.
 observantia disciplinae, 198.

- observatio = "divine observance", 180.
 obsonator, 143.
 obumbrare, 126.
 offendere aspectus, 157.
 offerre = "offer to God in sacrifice", 219; offerre munus, 219.
 onerare mensas, 135.
 opera = "good works", 206; opera tua, used of Satan, 205.
 operari, 162.
 operimentum, 126.
 oppignoratus, 152.
 oraculum, 203; oraculum resultavit, 110.
 oratio = "prayer", 157, 181.
 ordinatus, adj., 21, 169.
 ornatus pulcher, used of the world, 207.
 ostrea, 144.
 pallor, 157; pallor exsanguis, 166.
 paradisus, 125.
 parcere = "to forbear to injure" "have mercy upon", 128.
 pascere, abs. use of, 24.
 passio, 161.
 patere vulneri, 28.
 patrocinari, 153.
 pauper, subst., 16, 167.
 peccatrix anima, 161.
 pelagus = mare, 199.
 pellicius, 125.
 per, used to express means, 34, 123.
 per = propter, 34.
 per ignorantiam, 34, 127.
 per singulorum distantes aetatum vices, 169.
 perfidia, opposed to fides, 164.
 perfunctio, 15, 153.
 perfunctus = "enjoy", 219.
 periclitari, with infin., 37, 176.
 periculosum est, with infinitive, 37, 132.
 peripetasmata, 162.
 perobscaenus, 195.
 persecutio = "persecution", 15, 150.
 persecutor = "persecutor", 185.
 Persicus mos, 180.
 pervenitur, impers., 24.
 petra, 132.
 pincerna, 145.
 piscis recentior, 143.
 plaudere manibus, 194.
 pocula = "drinks", 171; poculum furoris, 31, 176.
 poena = "affliction" (sickness), 186.
 pompa ludibri, 31.
 populus Iudaeorum, 114.
 poscere maioribus poculis, 171.
 positus = vs., 25, 147.
 possibilitas, 14, 119.
 potatio, 15; in plural, 167.
 potens, 17; subst., 148-149.
 potestates = "high officials", 165.
 potus, 156; potus antelucanus, 168.
 potus ebrietatis, 31, 181.
 praecellare, 171.
 praedicatio = "preaching", 178.
 praelatio, 15, 129.
 praeludere pugnam, 170.
 praeluditur, impers., 24.
 praelusorius, 170.
 praeoptare = "prefer", "like better" with acc. and dat. of the thing, 26, 162.
 praetendere = "to put before another", 113; "watch", 149.
 praetextare = "disguise", 158.
 praevaricari, 124.
 praevaricatio, 15, 124.
 praevenire, 26; with acc., 181.
 prandendum est, impers., 24.
 pretium = "wealth", 182.
 primitia, 219.
 primitiva (-orum), 18, 219.
 procrastinare, 216.
 proeliaris, 170.
 proelior, subst., 169; adj., 174.
 profluvium = "flow of blood", 192.
 promoscis, 193.
 properare summo cursu, 144.
 propheticum dictum, 22.
 propheticus, 136.
 propinqui, 16.
 prosilire in caedem, 179.
 pulchre = "well", "splendidly", "finely", 177.
 pullulare, 202.
 pulsare fores, 143.
 pulverulentus, 117.
 purificatio, 15, 140.
 quaestio diabolica, 21.
 quando, temporal use of, 42, 196.
 quantolibet, 188.
 quasi, use of, 23.
 qui non navigat, nescit timere naufragium, 199.
 quid mirum, 128.

quo, final use of without comparative 41.
quod, after verba declarandi, 41.

radix gratiae, 118.
recensere = "go over in thought or narration", 214.
recurre = "to have recourse to", 120.
redimitus floribus, 168.
redundans, 21, 117.
refectio, 15, 117.
reformare, 218.
refrigerans, 21.
remedium salutis, 118.
remex = "a bench of rowers", "the oarsmen", 201.
remittere = "to remit sin", 126.
reparare, 171.
repositus, 21; repositae epulae, 120.
repromittere = "promise again" or "anew", 112.
reservare Deo, 28.
resplendere, 121.
restringere sitim, 170.
resultare, 110.
resurgere, 218.
resurrectio, 156.
revelare = "reveal", 207.
reverendus, 158.
revocare ab errore, 207.
rigere, 145.
rigor adamantis, 138.
rogare, 24.
ros pluviae, 31.
rubor ebrietatis, 157.
rupes, 192.

sabbatum legitimum = sabbatum Legis, 22.
sacramentum = "Holy Eucharist", 156.
sacratus, adj., 21, 180.
sacrificium reconciliationis, 151.
saepe and frequenter, 22.
saltatus, 195.
salvator, 112.
sapientia = "God", 158.
saucius ora, 27.
scamma, 173.
scissae amictus, 27.
scriptum est = $\gamma\acute{\epsilon}\gamma\rho\alpha\mu\tau\alpha\iota$, 119.
secreta (-orum), 19; = "privacy", "seclusion", 194; = "solitudes", 200.
secundum dictum, 142.
sed et = sed etiam, 39.

sedulus, 204.
semesae epulae, 186.
seminare labores, 202.
seminarium et origo vitiorum, 198.
senilis, gen. of noun, 140.
sentire damna, 174.
separatus, 200.
sepultus vino, 150.
sequens = "second", "next in order or quality", 219.
sequens dies = postridie, proximo die, 165.
sermo = "a single word", 203; sermo tacitus mentis, 161.
servare pudicitiam, 149.
servitur dominae gulae, 146.
servulus = servus, 175.
se vindicare de, 193.
sexus, 130.
sicera, 121, 181.
sicut, use of, 23.
si fuerit est, type of condition, 42-43.
sinceritas, 14, 207.
sobrietas, 14, 118; sobrietas mentis, 142.
Sodomitana incendia, 22.
sol iustitiae = "God", 181.
solidare, 139.
soliditas, 14; soliditas abstinentiae, 138.
sollemnitas, 14, 111.
solutus somno, 174.
solvere = "to dissolve", 139; solvere risu, 158, 188.
sommolentus, 144.
speciosa = "beautiful", "brilliant", 114.
spectare alte, 207.
spiculum, 113.
spina = "fish bone", 145; = "thorn", 148.
spiritalis = "spiritual", 156.
spiritus = "a spirit", 185.
spontaneus = voluntarius, 176.
stadium, ingredi, 211.
sterilitas, 14, 134.
sternere = "to overthrow", 150.
stipula, 215.
sub iudice certare, 35.
sub lege decernere, 35.
sub maledicto constituere, 35.
subdere = "furnish", "supply", 206.
subditus, 21.

- subnixus, "supported by", "upheld by", 168; subnixus meretricibus, 29.
 subscribere, abs. use of, 24; subscribere ad competitionem, 33.
 subsidium misericordiae, 207.
 substantia, 15, 117; substantia et imago caelestis, 117.
 successio nequitiae, 201.
 succinctus ieiunio, 149.
 sudant vinum corpora temulentorum, 185.
 suffulcio, 169.
 suffultis lumbos, 27.
 sulcare fluctus, 200.
 super = de, 35.
 super = "concerning" with abl., 213.
 supereffluens, 21, 173.
 superfluum, 18.
 superfluus, 158, 188.
 supergredi, 119.
 superna (-orum), subst., 18, 120.
 supernus, 117.
 superstes diluvio, 131.
 surgendum esse, impers., 24.
 surgere vino et siceræ, 28.
 suspendere nare ad iudicium, 152.
 tabulae, 134; tabulae Legis, 134.
 (tactus) vultus cordis, interpret, 158.
 tamquam, use of, 23; with pres. part., 111.
 tapete, 182.
 tegere, abs. use of, 24.
 temperare ad remedium, 33.
 temptamentum, 153; = "temptation", 205.
 temptare, with infin., 219.
 temptator = "tempter", 112.
 tempus opportunum ad indulgentiam, 216.
 tempus praescriptum, 185.
 temulentia, 15, 130.
 temulentus, subst., 16, 17, 166; adj., 130.
 tenere ad crimen, 191; tenere clausum, 138.
 terrena (-orum), 19; = "things of earth", 115.
 terrere, abs. use of, 24.
 terribilis visu, 38, 174.
 theca = "sheath", 169.
 titubat mens, 165-166.
 tolerantia, 15, 211.
 torrens, subst., = flumen, 116.
 torus, 139.
 trahere tunicas, 194.
 transformare, 137.
 transfretatio, 15, 198.
 transfusio, 192.
 transilire, 187.
 transmittere ad satietatem, 152.
 tuba canere, 110.
 typus, 160; typus baptismatis, 217.
 umescere, 137.
 unde = igitur, 40; = quare, 111; unde et, 38.
 unguentare, 167.
 ut, use of, 23.
 ut = explicative quod, 42, 212.
 vacuus, with gen., 30; vacuus celebritatis, 208.
 vae, subst., 179.
 vanae imagines, 187.
 vapore naturali corporis, 185.
 vapulare = "being flogged", 145.
 vas apostolicum, 21.
 vates = propheta, 135.
 vel = et, 39.
 vel . . . vel = et . . . et, 39.
 velamen, 126.
 velut, use of, 23.
 venenum ebrietatis, 184; venenum libidinis, 184, venenum mortis, 184.
 venerabilis, 139.
 venire ad iudicium, 179.
 venustas, 14; in plural, 152.
 versari = "whirl", "turn about", 201.
 vestimenta scissa insipientiae, 148; vestimentum fidei, 148.
 viaticum itineris, 141.
 vigilans somniat, 188.
 vigor, 149; vigor animae 211.
 viliscere, 152.
 vilitas, 14; vilitas verborum, 203.
 vindemia, 176.
 vindicare se de, 34, 173.
 vindicta = "vengeance", 150.
 vinolentus, 192.
 vis = "potency" of herbs, 162; vis veneni, 136, 177.
 visus = "sight", "vision", 187.
 vita sollicita, 199; vita somnium est, 188.
 vivere saeculo, 28.
 vocare ad iudicium, 179.
 vomitus, 186.
 vultus procax, 194.

III. INDEX LOCORUM.

(This index includes only references to Scripture and to Greek authors, particularly St. Basil. All Scriptural texts actually quoted in the De Helia are designated by bold-face type. For the echoes or imitations of the classical Latin authors, the reader is referred to the Introduction, pp. 9-12. Numbers following the citations refer to pages in the Commentary.)

GEN.

1, 3: 121; 1, 6: 121; 1, 11: 121; 1, 16: 121; 1, 20: 122; 1, 21: 122; 1, 22: 122; 1, 26: 189; 1, 28: 199; 2, 8: 123; 2, 15: 123; 2, 17: 124; 3, 1 et 8: 124; 3, 7: 127; 3, 11: 124; 3, 13: 125; 3, 21: 125; 3, 22: 125; 4, 3 ff.: 219; 4, 4: 129; 4, 14: 184; 4, 16: 184; 5, 24: 217; 6, 9: 129; 9, 20: 128; 9, 21 ff.: 127; 18, 2 et 8: 130; 19, 33 ff.: 130; 25, 29 ff.: 163; 34, 11: 204; 47, 29: 218.

EXOD.

15, 25: 131; 16, 3: 196; 16, 13: 164; 16, 13 ff.: 196; 16, 15: 164; 17, 6: 132; 19, 16: 131; 21, 18: 166; 24, 18: 132, 133; 32, 1 et 6: 133; 32, 1 ff.: 164; 32, 6: 164; 32, 19: 133; 40, 23: 134.

LEVIT.

2, 14: 219; 4, 13: 124; 10, 9: 180, 214; 19, 19: 197.

NUM.

3, 39: 134; 10, 9: 111; 10, 9-10: 110; 20, 11: 132; 14, 25: 196; 18, 27: 219; 21, 6: 196; 26, 65: 196.

DEUT.

1, 6: 186; 1, 17: 214; 4, 24: 215; 13, 3: 115; 14, 26: 121; 29, 6: 121; 29, 18: 133; 32, 28-29: 178; 32, 32: 178; 32, 33: 177; 32, 36: 110.

IOS.

1, 8: 157; 2, 1: 203; 18, 50: 134.

IUD.

7, 14: 121; 13, 4: 121; 13, 4 et 14: 134; 14, 14: 163; 16, 23 et 29 ff.: 135.

I REG.

1, 13: 134; 15 et 20: 134; 17, 24: 199; 17, 49: 115; 19, 8: 199.

II REG.

10, 13: 199; 13, 31: 115; 23, 3: 155.

III REG.

16, 31 ff.: 114; 17, 1: 114, 115, 217; 17, 6: 163; 17, 7: 116; 17, 9 ff.: 115; 17, 16: 116; 17, 22: 116; 18, 1: 115; 18, 33: 215; 18, 34: 215; 18, 35: 215; 18, 36: 205; 18, 38: 215; 18, 38 et 45: 116; 19, 8 ff.: 114; 19, 8: 116.

IV REG.

2, 8: 117; 2, 11: 116; 2, 11: 217; 4, 38-41: 135; 4, 39: 163; 4, 43: 142; 16, 10 ff.: 114; 21, 4-5: 114; 23, 12 et 15-16: 114.

I PAR.

22, 12: 197.

II PAR.

6, 29: 124; 14, 2: 114; 32, 24: 190.

II ESDR.

2, 18: 213; 5, 9: 155.

III ESDR.

3, 21 ff.: 179.

TOB.

4, 11: 126; 4, 13: 142; 12, 9: 206; 13, 10: 110.

IUDITH

5, 1: 149; 7, 22: 149; 8, 6: 149; 8, 19: 178; 10, 16: 131; 12, 9 et 20: 149; 13, 19: 149; 16, 20: 207.

ESTH.

4, 16: 150; 5, 9: 150; 7, 1 ff.: 150; 9, 22: 110.

IOB

7, 1: 114; 36, 11: 203.

PSALM.

1, 2: 157; 8, 7-9: 200; 22, 5: 154, 156, 159; 31, 1: 126; 33, 6: 216; 38, 13: 190; 44, 8: 159; 48, 9: 217; 64, 14: 181; 68, 11: 126; 75, 7: 128; 77, 25: 120; 77, 65: 178; 80, 4: 111; 95, 1: 204; 103, 2: 127; 132, 2: 160.

PROV.

7, 13: 194; 11, 8: 202; 13, 8: 206; 13, 8: 217; 22, 8: 202; 23, 29: 179; 26, 9: 148; 31, 4: 149; 31, 5: 149; 31, 6: 121.

ECCLE.

2, 14: 160.

CANT.

1, 3: 159; 1, 3: 210; 3, 11: 110.

ECCLI.

11, 9: 213; 11, 13: 213; 11, 20: 218; 18, 16: 137; 19, 2: 195; 26, 11: 195; 31, 23: 146; 31, 32: 167; 31, 35: 167; 31, 36: 167; 31, 38: 167; 44, 17: 129.

IS.

5, 11 ff.: 178; 5, 11: 165, 181, 183; 5, 12: 180; 13, 5: 207; 13, 5: 212, 213; 22, 13: 197; 23, 1: 197, 201; 23, 2 ff.: 198; 23, 4 (bis): 201; 23, 6: 201; 23, 14: 202; 23, 15: 203; 23, 16-17: 203; 42, 13: 175; 43, 20: 204; 55, 1: 154; 58, 3: 127; 58, 3-6: 157; 58, 5: 155; 58, 6 ff.: 157; 58, 8: 127; 65, 11: 154; 65, 13: 154.

IER.

25, 27: 186; 36, 6: 127; 48, 32: 188; 51, 7-8: 182.

BAR.

1, 21: 115, 142.

EZECH.

1, 22: 121; 28, 16 et 18: 202.

DAN.

3, 46 ff.: 137; 4, 24: 126; 6, 16: 138; 10, 2: 138; 10, 3: 138; 10, 11: 138; 14, 32: 164.

OS.

8, 7: 202.

IOEL

1, 5: 214.

ION.

1, 1 ff.: 199.

SOPH.

3, 8: 156; 3, 18: 204.

MAL.

4, 2: 181.

I MACH.

8, 20: 114; 14, 20: 114.

II MACH.

13, 23: 151.

MATTH.

3, 4: 118; 3, 4: 131, 164; 3, 11: 215; 3, 11: 217; 5, 16: 206; 6, 10: 212; 6, 16: 158; 6, 16: 161; 6, 17 ff.: 159; 6, 17: 161; 11, 9: 119; 11, 18: 131; 11, 29 ff.: 216; 13, 22: 202; 21, 31: 204; 26, 7: 160; 26, 7 ff.: 161; 26, 12: 161; 26, 28: 131; 26, 41: 125.

MARC.

15, 29: 184.

LUC.

1, 15: 189; 1, 17: 118; 2, 27: 118; 3, 4: 178; 4, 2: 112; 4, 3: 113; 4, 4: 113; 7, 32: 204; 7, 37: 161; 8, 28: 205; 8, 30: 205; 15, 10: 213; 16, 9: 206; 16, 19: 146; 16, 20: 147; 16, 21: 147; 16, 24: 147; 24, 47: 199.

IOH.

1, 29: 209; 1, 33: 217; 3, 5: 217; 4, 34: 120; 13, 5: 215.

ACT.

12, 8: 127; 26, 18: 161.

ROM.

1, 20: 212; 3, 20: 124; 8, 20-23: 212; 13, 18: 136; 16, 19: 213.

I COR.

3, 12-15: 215; 4, 9: 195; 4, 9: 209; 9, 11: 202; 9, 24: 209; 9, 25: 210; 9, 26: 214; 9, 26-27: 209; 10, 3-4: 156; 11, 3: 160; 14, 34-35: 194; 15, 55: 218.

II COR.

3, 16 et 18: 213; 4, 7: 183; 6, 15: 205.

GAL.

4, 18: 213.

EPHES.

1, 7: 205; 1, 17: 131; 5, 18: 189;
6, 11: 214; 6, 17: 214.

PHIL.

3, 13-14: 209; 3, 20: 117.

COL.

3, 13: 205; 1, 16: 210; 1, 14: 131.

II THESS.

2, 2: 217; 3, 6: 214.

I TIM.

5, 23: 129; 6, 10: 198.

II TIM.

2, 5: 209; 2, 20: 183.

I PETR.

4, 10: 206.

I IOH.

2, 8: 218; 3, 8: 205.

APOC.

3, 11: 211; 9, 12: 179; 21, 1: 213;
22, 5: 213.

S. BASILIUS.

(The first number refers to the columns in Migne P. G., Vol. 31; the number in parentheses, to columns in Vol. II of the 2nd Benedictine Edition.)

Homil. I-II, De Ieiunio.

164A (1A): 111; 164A (2A): 157;
164B (2A): 160; 165A (2B): 162;
165AB (2CD): 158; 165A (2C):
159, 160, 161 (bis); 165A (2D):
162, 163; 165A (2E): 163; 168A
(3A): 124; 168B (3C): 125, 147;
169B (4C): 127; 169C (4C): 132,
133; 169D (4D): 133; 172A (4E):
163; 172A (4E, 5A): 134; 172C
(5B): 116; 172C (5BC): 114;
172CD (5C): 135; 173A (5C): 135;
173A (5D): 136; 173BC (6A):
138; 173C (6B): 139 (ter); 176A
(6C): 141, 142, 145 (bis); 176B
(6D): 146; 176B (6E): 151; 176C
(6E, 7A): 152; 176D (7B): 153;
177A (7B): 147; 177B (7D): 139;

177C (7E): 118, 131; 177C (7E, 8A): 113; 180B (8D): 196 (bis);
180C (8D): 120; 181A (9A): 185;
193B (14D): 114; 196D (15D):
155.

Homil. In Sanctum Baptisma.

425B (114B): 216; 425C (114D):
216; 425C (114DE): 216; 425C
(114E): 216; 427D, 429A (115D):
215; 429A (115D): 217; 429A
(116A): 216-217; 440A (120B):
209; 440A (120B): 210.

Homil. In Sanctum Ebriosos.

445BC (123AC): 193-194; 445BC
(123C): 195; 448 (123D): 140;
448C (124B): 185; 448CD (124BC):
185; 449AB (124CD): 187; 449B
(124D): 165; 449C (125AB): 185;
449B (125C): 165; 452A (125D):
185; 453B (126D): 177; 453D,
456A (127A): 184; 456A (127A):
176; 456A (127B): 179; 456B
(127B): 180, 189; 456BC (127BC):
181; 456B (127C): 169 (bis); 476C
(127C): 183; 456D (127E): 170;
457A (128A): 171, 172; 457B
(128B): 174, 175, 188; 457C, 460A
(128C): 176; 460A (128C): 172,
177; 460A (128D): 191; 460B
(129A): 181; 460C (129B): 175;
460D (129C): 181; 461D (130B):
164.

S. IOANNES CHRYSOSTOMUS.

Homil. in Dictum Illud Apostoli
(oportet haereses esse in vobis, etc.)
4 Migne, Vol. 51, 259 (246D): 153.

DIOGENES LAERTIUS.

IV 3, 16: 167.

ORIGEN (Cf. Introduction, p. 8).

Homil. in Ter. 21, 7 ff.: 182-184.

PHILO (ed. Cohn-Wendland).

De ebrietate II 213, 6: 171.
De cherubim I 172, 25: 184.
De plantatione II 165: 191.

XENOPHON.

Comm. 1, 4, 12: 185.

THE CATHOLIC UNIVERSITY OF AMERICA

PATRISTIC STUDIES

Edited by ROY J. DEFERRARI with the cooperation of J. Marshall Campbell and Martin R. P. McGuire.

-
- Vol. I. St. Basil and Greek Literature. By Leo V. Jacks, Ph. D. 1922. Price $1.75.
- Vol. II. The Influence of the Second Sophistic on the Style of the Sermons of St. Basil the Great. By J. M. Campbell, Ph. D. 1922. Price $1.50.
- Vol. III. A Study of the Vocabulary and Rhetoric of the Letters of St. Augustine. By Sister Wilfrid Parsons, S. N. D., Ph. D. (Out of Print.)
- Vol. IV. The Syntax of the "De Civitate Dei" of St. Augustine. By Sister Mary Columkille Colbert, C. C. V. I., Ph. D. 1923. Price $1.25.
- Vol. V. The Stylistic Influence of the Second Sophistic on the Panegyric Sermons of St. John Chrysostom. By Thomas E. Ameringer, O. F. M., Ph. D. 1921. Price $1.00.
- Vol. VI. St. Augustine the Orator. A Study of the Rhetorical Qualities of St. Augustine's "Sermones ad Populum." By Sister Inviolata Barry, O. D. P., Ph. D. 1924. Price $2.00.
- Vol. VII. The Clausulae in the "De Civitate Dei" of St. Augustine. By Graham Reynolds, Ph. D. 1924. Price $1.00.
- Vol. VIII. S. Aurelii Augustini Liber De Catechizandis Rudibus. A Translation with a Commentary. By J. P. Christopher, Ph. D. 1926. Price $2.50.
- Vol. IX. Sancti Ambrosii Oratio De Obitu Theodosii: Text, Translation, Introduction and Commentary. By Sister Mary Dolorosa Mannix, S. S. J., Ph. D. 1925. Price $2.00.
- Vol. X. The Vocabulary of the Moral-Ascetical Works of St. Ambrose. A Study in Latin Lexicography. By Sister Mary Finbarr Barry, S. S. J., Ph. D. 1926. Price $2.00.
- Vol. XI. The Use of the Optative Mood in the Works of St. John Chrysostom. By F. W. A. Dickinson, Ph. D. 1926. Price $2.25.
- Vol. XII. The Latinity of the Letters of St. Ambrose. By Sister Miriam Annunciata Adams, O. S. B., Ph. D. 1927. Price $2.50.
- Vol. XIII. The Language and Style of the Letters of St. Basil. By Sister Agnes Clare Way, C. D. P., Ph. D. 1927. Price $3.00.
- Vol. XIV. The Syntax of the Confessions of St. Augustine. By Sister Mary Raphael Arts, O. S. B., Ph. D. 1927. Price $2.50.
- Vol. XV. S. Ambrosii De Nabuthae: A Commentary, with an Introduction and Translation. By M. R. P. McGuire, Ph. D. 1927. Price $3.00.
- Vol. XVI. Vita S. Ambrosii Mediolanensis Episcopi a Paulino Elius Notario ad Beatum Augustinum Conscripta: A Revised Text, and Commentary, with an Introduction and Translation. By Sister Mary Simplicia Kaniecka, Felician Srs., O. S. F., Ph. D. 1928. Price $3.00.
- Vol. XVII. Encomium of Saint Gregory, Bishop of Nyssa, on his Brother Saint Basil, Archbishop of Cappadocian Caesarea. A Commentary, with a Revised Text, Introduction, and Translation. By Sister James Aloysius Stein, C. C. V. I., Ph. D. 1928. Price $3.00.
- Vol. XVIII. Titles of Address in Christian Greek Epistolography to 527 A. D. By Sister Lucilla Dinneen, S. S. J., Ph. D. 1929. Price $3.00.
- Vol. XIX. S. Ambrosii De Helia et Ieiunio: A Commentary, with an Introduction and Translation. By Sister Mary Joseph Aloysius Buck, B. V. M., Ph. D. 1929. Price $3.50.

-
- The Form of the Ancient Greek Letter. A Study in Greek Epistolography. By F. X. J. Exler, O. Praem., Ph. D. 1924. Price $1.75.
- Greek and Latin in College Entrance and Graduation Requirements. By Brother Giles, O. F. X., Ph. D. 1925. Price $2.50.

Copies may be obtained by addressing the publishers

THE CATHOLIC EDUCATION PRESS

1326 Quincy Street, N. E.
Brookland, D. C.

DATE DUE

APR 13 1995

MAR 1 2002

BR 65 .A313 H413 1929

Ambrose, d. 397

S. Ambrosii De Helia et ieiunio

GENERAL THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY

GENERAL THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY

00048894